2. The matter of extending the 6" water main from the old Rubber Co. plant on Bridge Street and along Frank Street to College St. would cost approximately $1,350.00 for material and $1,200 for labour. Then a good road it feet in width would have to be built on Frank Street from College Street to the tracks in order to get the fire trucks through. This roadwork would cost approximately $600 for material and hydrants and $2,130 for roadwork, total material cost $1,950, total labour costs $2,850.

For your convenience I submit the following assessed values of the property north of C.N.R. tracks on Frank Street, with the amounts of taxes deriving annually from same.

Lot 1, Martin Wright, improvement property, $850, taxes, $46.07; Lot 2, E. P. Thomas, $650, taxes, $4.32; Lot 3, E. Thomas, $63., taxes $4.32; Lot 1, Maud Duncan, improvement, $1,000; Lot 2, Arthur Ib, J.W. Fox, $100, taxes $6.39. Lot 3, Geo. Hamilton, improvement, $4074; total taxes, $271.62.

Endorses Resolution

The Council endorses and concurs in the resolution passed by various councils in this section of the Province with respect to a Bay of Quinte Route to the Sea and their resolution is "that the municipal council of the city hereby endorses the Bay of Quinte to the Sea Route as a movement which should prove beneficial to Eastern Ontario and one which should open up reciprocal trade between Ontario and the Motherland, particularly in basic products from this Province and a British coal from Great Britain," was unanimously passed.

There were no by-laws for consideration although one is prepared for the question of purchasing the Arena from the Belleville Directors by the city and on question of Alderman Brickman as to whether it would be introduced in time for the vote at the next election, information supplied was that it would be ready and would come before the council at the next meeting. No other business being before the council, adjournment was called. BRUCE COONEY GOES ON TRIAL

Charged With Serious Offence Against Young Girl

Bruce Cooney went on trial in the assize court on Monday, before Hon. Mr. Justice Wright, on a serious charge against a young girl and it is likely that it will be concluded some time today as there are only a few witnesses to be examined. The counsel is represented by K. J. Fuller, K.C., while Austin Orr, K.C., James Corry, Grant Goodsell, W. J. Sparrow and Edward Wood, K.C., have been retained for the trial, the press being allowed to remain.

The girl in the case told a story of the alleged assault to the jury this morning on a pretext that a relative was ill in the General Hospital she went with Cooney. Coming to a sidereed, the truck, in which she was riding, was driven up the road and after threatening her with a rifle, the accused committed the assault with which he is charged. In cross-examination, the girl said she had made a date with Cooney. Drs. Robertson and Adams gave medical testimony in the case.

"Y" CAMPAIGN IS LAUNCHED BY Y'S MEN

$345 Presented to Chairman as First Donation

NEEDY PROJECT

"Y" Offers Invaluable Aid to Youth of City

The large attendance of workers and members at any previous annual drive on record faced President of the Y's Men's Club, Mr. William McEwen, chairman of the meeting and supper, tendered on Monday evening. In his brief address to members and to the Y's Men of the Club, Mr. McEwen outlined the necessity for continued support of the organization. He outlined the programme which would be followed by the workers during the coming year, as the opening shot of the campaign. Chairman McEwen then presented the first donation of $345 to Mr. F. C. MacLaurin, the assistant of the financial committee. This sum was raised by members of the Men's Club.

Mr. F. C. MacLaurin who has assumed the chairmanship of his committee, in a well chosen address, as he was tendered the chairman's thanks of the evening, stated that he had the pledge of the citizens that no stone would be left unturned in the campaign which was about to be launched. He outlined the important part the Y.M.C.A. played in the community. "It was the only need" that would be hard to replace, and was intimately bound up with the character of the younger element of the city." In the field of sport, with the introduction of Mr. W. B. Deacon to these pursuits, he referred to him as one of the "youngest" men in the city, but with the experience also of years of successful living. Since the formation of the Y.M.C.A. in Belleville, he added, he had declared, had always played a leading part in its affairs, and had been among a previous successful campaign in the city.

"In the past twenty campaigns that I have assisted in," stated Mr. W. B. Deacon, who was called upon by Chairman P. C. MacLaurin for a few remarks, "I never have witnessed such a start as this one has had. And I'm sure more people are interested." The speaker recalled the formation of the local Y.M.C.A. over twenty years ago. "Twenty-two years ago, it was, a group of business men of the city got together in a little room over C. N. Shinnan's store and founded the first Y.M.C.A. Later this modern building was erected, and now the people of the city have something tangible; something to be proud of. The people of the nation we never needed more than it is now, to build character and reflect it into the youth of the city. Every department of your Y.M.C.A. has been conducted excellently during the year, with particular emphasis being given to the boys' department where young men have again proved themselves."

Should Believe in "Y"

"A successful salesman should believe in the article he is selling," stated the speaker. "He must sell himself before he can sell others. And in the job of selling the 'Y' no man need apologize for anything. "We are not working for just $5000.00. We are working for a charity institution, without which the city would find it hard to get along. In this community, as in any other city or town, the organization has proved its worth time and again, not only on the job of impregnating cleanliness and decency and honesty in the minds of the city's youth. In Belleville the Y.M.C.A. has actually meant thousands of dollars to merchants of the city from petty thieving, crime and vice in other, cities not blessed with such an organization. The question has been asked," stated the speaker, "are we getting one hundred per cent value for the money that is invested? I believe that every dollar has returned per cent!"

Mr. Deacon paid tribute to the efficiency of Mr. Jos. Shortt, secretary of the local institution, who has conducted the affairs of the Y.M.C.A. for the past several years. The splendid addition to the building, and in the west where support of their Y.M.C.A.'s in various communities is most loyal was shown in a letter read the members by Mr. F. C. MacLaurin, received from Moose Jaw. "How helpless, you imagine, it must appear to put on any sort of a drive for funds for the Y's in the West," stated Mr. MacLaurin, "yet, even now, in Moose Jaw, an eminent organization campaign was just been concluded. In this letter it is shown that five out of six workers at the Y.M.C.A. there enrolled as workers in the drive. The objective set by them had also been well topped."

Privilege To Help.

"It has been said on occasions that the Y.M.C.A. should be self supporting. We don't expect it to be self supporting. Any organization which could return so much to the city that assists in keeping it up should not expect to be self supporting. We should be glad to have you assisting in the annual drives."

Secretary Jos. Shortt made a brief report of the recent activities, and more were outlined briefly by chairman that lay ahead of workers during the coming week. Several new members who have been enlisted in support were also introduced to the assembly. He urged a full attendance on Wednesday noon when final reports of the drive will be received, and at which dinner the Rev. Dr. Semple will address the members.

Entertainment was provided Monday evening by Mr. Ab. Adams on the piano and accordion, and the community singing led by Russ Wolfe. Several fines were collected by Master-at-Arms, Eddie Shibgiro.

Plans for the Y's Men's Club annual Armistice dance and their comedy-drama have been fully completed.

LETTER SENT OUT BY "Y" REGARDING DRIVE

Kindness and Co-operation Will Be Much Appreciated

The following letter is being sent citizens of Belleville by workers of the Y.M.C.A., on their drive this week to raise $5,000.00 needed by that organization during the coming year.

Dear Friend:

The Young Men's Christian Association comes to you now with its Annual Appeal for Financial help. The activities, the demands, the opportunities for service are greater now than in normal times—the pressures are less—the need is urgent.

The forces that break down character and wreck youth call no halt during a time of depression. The agencies that build and strengthen must not fail youth in these days.

Appreciating your kindness and your co-operation in the past the Directors of the Y.M.C.A. look to you with confidence that the financial help required will be forthcoming.

For the sake of the boys and the girls, for the youth of the city and for those who are hungry for a friendly word and some temporary protection. We ask you to give generously that the Association may be able to carry on its extensive program of helpful activities.

S. Licence, President; J. E. Shortt (General Secretary, F. C. MacLaurin, Chairfan Financial Campaign; W. Ackerman, Chairman Financial Committee; J. B. Findlay, Secretary of Board.

Impressions of Recent Trials of Convicts at Kingston Told Rotary by Judge Deroche

impressions received during the first trial at which he presided which lasted nine days, that of Murray Kirkland, and his appreciation when at the end of the trial Kirkland thanked him and said he had had a good fair trial.

Thad Buck, secretary of the Community Society at Toronto, sentenced for five years, as witness and as accused, proved very interesting to the Judge, dispelling all preconceived notions that passing sentence on Thad Buck appeared in all his relations to the court as gentlemanly and courteous to the last degree, and was particularly anxious that he should not be convicted of saying or doing things which he said not say so, and which in his opinion were beneath him. He had no sympathy with the rioters and had no part in the incitement of it, but rather than be called a "rat" he joined it.

In all Judge Deroche tried thirteen men, most of whom waived jury trial, electing to be tried direct by the presiding Judge, all of them thanked him for a fair trial.

Five Types In Prison

Murray Kirkland, whose trial lasted nine days was described by the speaker as of fine physique, and good looking, he had formerly been a bank clerk and was serving twenty years. Commenting upon the petty cases of appearance and defective good environment as a youth, the Judge spoke kindly to him expressing regret at his shattered life. Kirkland, listening to the words of the Judge, bowed his head and blushed with shame, an evidence that the bad in him had not crushed out, every kernel of good.

Amazed at the fine type of most of the prisoners, from 18 to 25 years of age, the speaker spoke of their bright, clean looks and obvious cleverness, with which he was much impressed.

The case of Sam Behan, serving a life sentence, seven years was touched upon—Sam was found not guilty of beating to death, by the no doubt considered after very full consideration, that the sentence added to what he already had would be superfluous. Evidence submitted described the incidents of the fight and the manner in which followed in which it was stipulated by the prisoners that they should be permitted to return to work in the morning. Asked to explain why he refused food upon being permitted to return to work in the morning Behan said:

Work or Insanity

"Locked in a cell eight feet long by five feet wide, what is there to do?—walk that eight feet back and forth, think of your mother, think of your wife or child, perhaps. If you have them, look at the book lying there—then return to the cramp, walk eight feet forward, eight feet back—to be locked in the cell as insanity—that's why the accused insisted upon being permitted to return to work in the morning as the prime condition of the trial.

Another interesting individual from the "Big House" was Galvin, who took an active part in the trial as secretary to accused and otherwise assisted in the defense. Galvin contended that there had been no fair trial, hence no necessity for it. Asked what he was "in" for he said:

"I am incarcerated for infraction of impeded statutes which have no force in this country."

Linguist and Law Student

Asked to explain the meaning of the statement Galvin shuddered further that he was convicted of being Bank or England votes. He had been a banker and could speak and write six languages, had studied law for years at Osgoode Hall, and by in Chicago. Galvin is a most unusual and interesting personality as can be seen from the outline of his life and accomplishments, as sketched by Judge Deroche.

The accused were permitted to plead their own cases and cross examine, if they so desired, and this lead to many incidents of interest. Invariably the first question put to witness by the counsel lawyer would be:

"What is your status in society?" and the latter invariably would be:

"I am an inmate of the penitentiary.

In all their actions in court, whether as witnesses or as lawyers pro-tem the demeanor of the accused was invariably courteous and the cases were conducted by the prisoners as well as the average lawyer could.

Convicts Enjoyed It

In the unusual atmosphere of the court the thought would persist that the prisoners taking part were enjoying the change from their customary environment and dreary, monotonous daily round of sleep, work and recreation. In fact, it was a relief for most of them. The card playing and the smoking in the jury room while waiting the call from the court room was such a radical change from the Big House—together with the drive to and from the court house each day, that it was an event of great interest to their otherwise circumscribed lives.

Tim Buck's Address

For three hours Tim Buck addressed the court, never was for a moment uninteresting, and never repeated himself. Addressing the Judge he said, "Your Honor, I hope you will be able to find me innocent of the charges against me. Within it true would stamp me as a blackguard and I am not. And not I am not a criminal, but a political prisoner, and I do not want to be stigmatized for things I did not do. Tim Buck stated that he did not incite the riot or have any sympathy with it, but joining it rather than be called a "rat."

Telegrams from all over Canada were received by the Judge, from Communist friends, of Tim Buck, asking for various things in behalf of the accused. No attention was paid to these missives, their receipt not even being mentioned in the press at the time.

Rocking Chairs, Rugs, Flowers

Impressions received in a visit to the penitentiary were related in a very interest manner by the Judge, and he was especially impressed with the comfort provided in the women's section. Incidentally he remarked that the new women's prison is decidedly stronger than the men's. Rocking chairs, flowers, a carpet sitting room rugs on the floor and bright rooms make the women's section quite attractive and comfortable.

How the inmates of the men's prison expressed disapproval with their tin plates rubbed against the iron bars, several thousand men taking part, made an infernal din, the particular incident referred to being when a promise allegedly made the men should be permitted out for recreation was not carried out. Banging the bars with the tin plates the men kept up a ringing in unison: "We want recreation." This was repeated over and over again and the turmoil can hardly be imagined.

Never Had a Chance

A story of peculiar interest was told by Judge Deroche of a young man who pleaded his own case and pleaded it well, as well in fact that he was acquitted. He worked in the printing department of a paper accused of threatening bodily harm to a man with a club for which the accused proved that it was not a club he carried but a composing cardboard for a 'club. The accused young man also proved that he had saved the printing plant from possible destruction, the type from the trial of the penitentiary rioters as reviewed by the Judge was a very high quality of typography and practical assistance for those who have made printing become enemies of society and are confined in penal institutions—and that each of us can do our utmost to prevent the young from turning to crime and to develop the best of citizenship.

ADVANTAGE OF RELIEF WORK

There are several values in the present system of relief by work provided by the municipalities with the aid of the Dominion and the Province. From the standpoint of the municipality there is something coming back for the money expended and the municipality has something to show. The greater value of course, lies in the fact that the man on relief is now in a sort of independency, he is giving something for what he gets though that latter may be small, and he is permitted to buy where he likes and when he likes and pleases, though it is clear enough that relief operations do not provide a man with barely enough to go around. But this is placing back on the shoulders of the man who has been out of work and up against hard times, the load of responsibility he is calculated to develop, him instead of his running the grave danger of disintegration and losing his spirit.

These non-relief jobs like as much as anyone else to have the feeling of the sense of security which a little money gives and the independence which the ability to buy creates. These men are now somewhat like the richer man who has money and feels secure in that state of feeling. The relief man on the other category and had the etra disadvantage of leaving the recipient citizen largely idle.

How the new independence will work out must yet be seen. But that it will operate successfully is expected as these men are back in the full rights of citizens with the possession of a job, even a relief job.

GRAIN COMPETITIONS

"Field crops represent approximately 50 per cent. of the gross agricultural revenue of Ontario," said Colonel, the Hon. Thomas H. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture. "Figures for the 1932 indicate that of the gross revenue of $226,000,000, field crops are credited with $113,000,000.

"For this reason," continued Colonel Kennedy, "it is my opinion that field crops should be given a considerably more prominent place at county fairs and at the larger exhibition. Growers, as a result of such recognition, would be greatly encouraged to produce better seed, and consequently better farming in their respective areas."

Along this line, the Minister of Agriculture mentioned that many developments and improvements are in prospect for coming winter fairs. He said that there will be a particularly interesting display given over the rostrum of past years in that a grain class is provided this year, open to Agricultural Societies. This class is confined to field crops exemplified in a class which has been included for many years.

Under the new arrangement entries will be made by the Secretary of each Agricultural Society, and in the case of awards 60 per cent. of the total prize will go to the exhibitor, while 40 per cent. will go to the Society of which the exhibitor is a member.

Each exhibit shall include five lots of grain and seed. There must be a lot each of Wheat (Winter or Spring); Oats and Barley; and two lots selected from the following: Clover (any variety); Alfalfa; Timothy; Corn (Flint or Dent); Rye; Buckwheat; Flax, Field Peas; Field Beans, and Soya Beans.

Each lot shall contain one bushel except Flax, Alfalfa, Clover and Timothy one-half bushel, Corn ten ears.

All grains and seed must have been produced in 1933, by bona-fide members of each Society making entry.

No member may contribute more than one lot to be exhibited in this class.

Prizes, being offered by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, for exhibits containing five lots of grain and seed, follow: First prize, fifty dollars; second prize, forty dollars; third prize, thirty dollars; fourth prize, twenty dollars; fifth prize, fifteen dollars; sixth prize, fifteen dollars; seventh prize, fifteen dollars; eighth prize, fifteen dollars; ninth prize fifteen dollars; and tenth prize, fifteen dollars.

Concluding his remarks, Colonel Kennedy said, "I am very gratified to observe the distinct success of the Agricultural Societies' Fall Fairs. Also, I feel confident in saying that, from the splendid exhibits of seed and grain on view at past fairs, high quality will be the keynote of this new class."

BOY SCOUTS

Boy Scouts are an active organization. Selling apples is not their business but they make good salesmen even without experience in this calling of selling.

It was a happy thought to sell something which will help agriculture. It was also a happy thought to give something to the purchaser, who so often asked to contribute without return except the knowledge of a good deed performed.

The scouts deserve the hearty reception they met in their canvass of the city on Saturday.

Dictatorship is always merely an aria, never an opera.—Emil Ludwig.

CLOSE AT HAND

Though men forever clamor
For far and flying things,
The distance holds no glamor,
Enchantment owns no wings.

The mountain heights, which only
To lowland eyes seemed fair,
Are cold and very lonely
When one has clambered there.

The feet that must be roving
Will never find content,
For no bright coin of loving
Is on their pathway spent.

But close at hand, and smiling
Joy waits each seeker's clasp,
And every bliss beguiling
Is ready for his grasp.

No magic and no splendor
The distant hazes hide;
But all loved things, and tender,
Beneath his hand abide.

KILLER INSTINCT IN MOST MEN is a strange thing. Give them a shotgun or rifle and they immediately want to kill some animal or bird. The killer instinct dominates over all else to kill for food is to kill for the lust of killing is a joy. So why kill bears, pleads the editor of the Trenton Courier-Advocate, himself a sportsman, but facts relative to wild life.

Bear pelts, last fall, sez he, were only worth about two dollars each, hardly worth the time and trouble of skinning the animal. Even the bear as destroying farm stock we cannot see any great reason for slaughtering them. They are not a dangerous animal in the woods, in fact, one may hunt for many years without seeing one, and once seen the bear has uncanny speed and can get out of sight readily. Of course the bear family will have to be kept in control, but to destroy them just for the fun of it, does not appear very sensible thing to do," concludes the Courier-Advocate man.

"WHO'S AFRAID OF THE BIG BAD WOLF?" sang the Three Little Pigs created by Walt Disney, of Silly Symphony fame—and who would be afraid of a little cotton-tail rabbit? No one, of course, if they could see the rabbit, but a Front St. householder was afraid of the rabbit evening out of his customary calm by a cottontail. Not afraid, of course, but just the uncertainty of the unknown always brings a feeling of unrest. Business was thru' for the day, the hour was approaching midnight. He was sitting in his office, checking the day's receipts, with the front door open. The store was partially darkened. He heard a peculiar noise, something seemingly slithering along the floor—he could see nothing, but the noise continued and came nearer. Visions of a hold-up. Up he sprang ready for defensive operations and sought the source of the noise. It was a rabbit which had wandered to Front Street and seeing the open door, slipped in to investigate. Some job ejecting Brer Rabbit, too. A stern chase all over the store, until the rabbit saw his image in a full length mirror, charged the glass and was thrown for a knock-down. Then the merchant was able to catch and eject the intruder.

NOW THAT STORIES are coming in that bull moose are attacking hunters and running them up trees, it would be interesting to know what Jim Curran of the Sault thinks about it. Jim says that Algoma wolves will not attack human beings and challenges all and sundry to try it out with the wolves—the power of mind over madder, or what is it? Just what Algoma moose will or will not do to a hunter Jim Curran has not said, but it is safe strategy if a bull moose gets his mad up and comes a-charging to get right up in a good sized tree, and argue the matter from that angle.

WHY IT PAYS TO BELIEVE IN YOURSELF

Faith in Particular Kind of Confidence or Success

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Faith is a peculiar kind of confidence or, if you will, a conviction of success, which does not require proof. The very fact that we believe in it, often without tangible proof or the establishment of the reasoning and logic, makes faith one of the most valuable assets any individual possibly can have.

Tolstoy, the distinguished Russian novelist and philosopher, stating that faith is an absolute necessity for every individual's life. He classified it as among the actual forces by means of which we are able to survive.

To be sure, Tolstoy was referring to religious faith, but religious faith is not the only valuable kind. Indeed, there are many varieties of faith.

One cannot really prosper mentally, emotionally or spiritually unless one has faith in something in life, the more faiths the better.

Faith in a beloved one, for instance—in husband or wife, son or daughter—is certainly a well as stimulating. What is more, your faith in them often helps them tremendously in surmounting the obstacles which are sure to beset the path of every human being. Here faith becomes a prop to hold on to in the gale of life's storms.

Therefore, believe in something. Have enthusiastic interests in life. Have faith in a person, a creed, a principle. Bring to it all you have, still be surprised what hope within you will engender. Then you will find an object outside yourself upon which to pin your faith. Without faith, no faith is nobler or more productive than self-confidence. Faith is self-faith in yourself.

If you can believe that you can accomplish a task, no matter how difficult, that task is already half done. If you have the faith to carry on, no matter how many adversities you encounter, you are already have won, and signally—because your faith in yourself cannot be crushed.

Therefore, believe in yourself. Make it you firm conviction that you are capable; that you are prepared on equal terms with others; that you can win.

Faith alone will not, to be sure, drop success into your lap. You must back up your faith with a foundation upon which your faith may rest, one to which you can anchor yourself; plan, work and have patience.

With faith behind your ability, however, you will accomplish more than you ever thought you could, not experience the soul-stirring qualities of the right kind.

Develop, also, faith in the future and in your fellowmen. Develop faith in your prospects. Learn to have faith in fruits, in health and vitality. Give abstract feelings which help mightily to augment one's self faith.

Faith makes you strong and vigorous, and gives you a wonderful morale ally. Faith enhances your personality. Faith gives you a certain quality in your attitude that is recognized instantly.

Watch your faith state as much as you watch your diet.

Fresh vegetable juices are extremely healthful, and it would be well if drinking them came into more general use. After cleaning the vegetable thoroughly by plunging it in water and scrubbing with a brush, it is cut into small pieces or grated and then squeezed through cheesecloth. For fibrous vegetables, a fruit press is required.

LAURILA DEFENCE AT TRIAL FOR MURDER

Defense Opens at Cobourg in Cavan Man's Death

Cobourg, Oct. 24—The Crown late Monday closed its case against Yrjo Laurila, charged with the murder of Fred McLaren a Cavan township farmer, and defence witnesses were called when court resumed today. The jury has heard five days of Crown evidence.

When examination of the last of the Crown's 40 witnesses was completed adjournment was made to allow A. J. Gibson, defence counsel, time to decide whether he will put the accused in the witness box.

The Crown based its case on the evidence of Detective Sergeant Lisurila who testified that he was absent from his Toronto home, at least from their flight, between the end of January and February 1. Inst. McLaren was beaten to death between Feb. 3 and 5 at his Cavan township cabin.

Evidence was given that Laurila had shown friends a gold watch similar to one said to have been owned by deceased. Watch was later pawned by Laurila while the police said was found on Laurila after his arrest as similar to one owned by McLaren.

The story goes the rounds that a customer who sent his car to a garage for a repair job sent the following note a few days after he had been advised that the machine was ready. "Please send car; it O.K. will send cheque".

The garage owner had evidently done business on those terms before, in the same way as the following reply: "Please send cheque if O.K. will send car".

They tell lots of tales on editors, but the best is the one editor of a small weekly paper went to address a meeting. One of his neighbours, when just a few weeks married, thought he would surprise with a new baby. The hostess met him at the door, and after the usual salutation, he asked after the baby's health. The lady was hard of hearing, and thought he said, and thinking he was asking about herself, answered that although she usually had one every winter, this was the worst one she ever had; it kept her awake all night. The editor was at first confined her to bed. Then, noticing that his friend was looking very strangely, she said she could tell him one thing that was going to have one, too, just like hers, and she asked him to come in out of the draft and sit down.

A FRIEND IN NEED

When the journalist, jaded, is chewing the end
Of ideas that are barren and stale
With the thread out of the theme seems made up of mud
And his paragraphs feeble and pale.
What source of assistance will Providence send,
What ground shall he now regain,
With a sign of relief he remembers his friend,
The rich irreplaceable Reuter!

Then paragraphs bloom at the point of his pen,
And all sorts of topics escape—
For, look you, a man in New York was a hen
Which lays eggs of triangular shape.

In Prague they have painted the town all red,
Budapest has a "Joy Week" in store.
A woman of Flushing, who slipped down the sled,
Has been picked up three miles off the More.

A jailer in Venice has eaten his prisoner,
Whom he baked in an elegant pie;
Oh how I envy you brut, if you have not you can't,
So its rash and mistaken to try.

A Turk in Vienna, aged eight-score and ten,
Has wedded his twenty-third wife;
Little items like these, what a lot they can do
For to brighten the journalist's life!

At Athens on Tuesday they had a day
Of green hailstones with pennies inside;
At Buenos Aires on the Bay of Bengal
The world's oldest donkey has died.

At Naples—but there; 'tis on topics I elaborate, comment and loiter;
So what I would say is, Hats off!
If you happen
To the ever reliable Reuter!

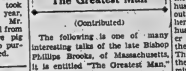
Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows was standing around the lane post lawving and quivering and we started to have a debate about was and whether they are good things to have or not, me and Shorty Judge saying they was and Puds Darkins and Cleaned Magee saying they wasn't, me saying, Why good ole it was all stopped then there wouldn't be anything to do story, except another Hamlet and you know how much fun that is.



Meening none, and Puds Darkins said, Well it would be a good thing, because then there wouldn't be any more new dates of battles to learn and forget. I wish I was living in those times rite now, bleve me, he said.

Being a good sneer, and Shorty Judge said, Well if there was no more wars people wouldn't be intrested in soldiers any more, and just imagine all those expensive parades going passed without anybody even stopping to look, that would be a heck of a big waist.

No, it wouldn't, because the simple reason because there wouldn't be any more soldiers, Classes Magee said. They'd all be discharged the very minnit a war was declared forever, he said, and I said, O they would, heh, and what would happen? Why they'd all be out of work because they wouldn't know how to do anything but file, so they'd all start to file among themselves, I found him over wir rite there, I said.

Why would you? Puds said. All you'd have to do would be to make them all policemeen to keep law and order and arrest each other if they started to fite, he said.

Being one of the best readers yet, and nobody thawt of any more arguements so we went around to the show to see if there was anything doing.

The following is one of many interesting talks of the late Bishop Phillips Brooks, of Boston, entitled "The Greatest Man."

—Here is a man who was born in an obscure village, the child of a poor woman. He grew up in an obscure village. He worked in a carpenter shop until he began his ministry at the age of thirty. After three years of preaching he was turned over to the executioners. He was nailed to a cross, between two thieves. His executioners gambled for his only piece of property. He had on earth (while He was living) three pints of friends. One of Him was dead. He was taken down from the cross, laid in a borrowed tomb, through the pity of a friend. Nineteen centuries have passed away, and today, that greatest of men, is the centrepiece of the human race. He is leader or triumph of progress. I am far from the mark when I say that all the armies that ever marched all the navies that ever were built, all the Parliaments that ever sat, and all the Kings that ever reigned, put together, have not affected the life of man so powerfully as that one solitary life."

FIRST NIGHT D IN FILMLAN

"The Woman I Stole" at Capitol Gives New Angle to Triangle

"The Girl I Stole" in fact becomes the girl he did not steal, and the girl who was left behind by husband and lover when both found out that true nature and when the hero of a rugged type proves to the faithful wife that at least a fighting husband is a heroic mould. This is the story which pleased the Capitol Theatre crowds on Monday when the house was packed. It is in the minds of many, Jack Holt's best picture, one which shows him in the fullest possession of his fine art as an actor and one which the millions of the screen audience, while it tells a story of a triangle in a new and thrilling way. All the way through the story grips. At the opening scene the audience cannot quite see the way through to the end but catches a glimpse of the forged characters which figure in the plece and the rugged type of life lived in the Near East where the oil fields are the subject of struggle.

Holt easily takes the lead as the former director, in a sequence of scenes logically bound together. He first plans to leave with his successor's wife, but he "lets" this temper when anyone but he would have been irritated with what he is charged. The charges leaves their sting and they disrupt the projected runaway of the wife and the former director. Slowly but steadily the true side of the former director is revealed, as well as that of the wife, who is superbly played by Fay Wray. Ronald Colman plays with great skill the part of the husband. who is of a gentler type and is profitted for the rough life of the oil fields. Noah Beery, as the desperader lives the role with delightful sense of reality.

The scenes are gripping and picturesque. Raquel Torres as the dancer, plays the part with much merit.

Dramatic in the extreme, the play is one which should be seen by those who desire a new angle from which to view the triangle.

Cities Service Earns 1-1 Tie in First Game in Kingston City Hockey Loop

Nicoll And Covert Combine To Score Goal

MANY PENALTIES

Morgan Brothers Draw Five-Minutes Each in Game

Failing to capitalize on the scoring chances that were theirs the Belleville Cities Service hockey team, champions of the Kingston City League, were forced to accept a one to one tie at the hands of the Kingston West End club in the opening game of that loop played at the Jock Harty Arena last evening.

For the better part of the game, the locals held sway and had the home town pucksters only to rade in the final frame and be forced to give up the minute overtime period before finishing 1 to 1. Harry Nicoll on a perfect pass from Roy Covert, notched the "Oilmen's" only counter in the second frame, no scoring was in evidence in the initial canto, while Corrigan managed to slip through the defence to even the count in the final stanza.

Manager Dunbar selected his veteran goal tender, Captain Les Tice, in the nets and once again the local net minder demonstrated just why he is one of the leading goals in the business by turning back all but one of the Kingston club's many threatening attacks. Bill Sherry and Earl McDonald manned the defence with the former turning in a stellar game. Of the starting line of Earl MacDonald, Covert and Pete Morgan the long ranger left winger, Carl Morgan was by far the outstanding player. Carl Morgan held the Week Enders at bay single handed at times, when his team was short handed due to penalties. His efforts were roundly applauded. Nicoll, Covert, H. Morgan and McGuire made up the line of alternates with the first two mentioned looking the best. The combination of Nicoll and Covert scored worthy of note. For the home team, North'm the nets, Gallivan, Corrigan, Moores and Webster looked the best. Both c'ws were badly in need of conditioning.

The lineups:

Kingston—goal, North, defence, Gallivan, McCue, centre, Arthur, wings, King, Moores, subs, Corrigan, M. McCue, Watts and Webster.

Cities Service—goal Tice, defence E. MacDonald, Sherry, centre, Morgan, wings, Nicoll and Pete Morgan, subs, Harry Morgan, Covert, Flindl, McGuire.

Referees—Brennan and Brown of Kingston.

Summary—

1st period—No score.

Penalties—E. MacDonald, P. Morgan (5 mins.).

1 Belleville—Nicoll (Coberb) 11:45

Penalties—Corrigan, Sherry, H. Morgan (5 mins.).

3rd period—

2 Kingston—Corrigan . . . 11.20

Penalties—King.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES By ALEX. J. MORRISON

WOOD CLUBS SHOULD NOT BE USED FROM POOR LIES EVEN ON FAIRWAYS

ALEX. MORRISON says:

Worry about getting distance spells ruin for your shots every time.

The average player may claim not to be bothered by his lack of distance with the wood clubs on a long iron, but he'll try to get length many times when conditions are decidedly against him.

For example, it is only the crafting for distance that finds a player using a wood club from a "heavy" lie on the fairway.

Unless the ball is teed up almost as high as it would be when set on a peg he has no license to use a brassie. Perhaps not even a spoon.

A poor lie calls for the use of an iron club. The percentage is always in favor of the fairwayish, "safe" first and then distance."

From the Hockey Training Camps

(By The Canadian Press)

In a warming-up season conspicuously barren of bright sayings, Harry Jackson of Toronto's Maple Leafs has stepped up with a declaration of war for the National Hockey League's marathon to do what they like about, the left wing ace of the Leafs spoke yesterday at Kitchener.

He said this in speaking of his own chances of leading the scoring in the campaign that opens Nov. 9. "I'll finish so far in front this year that there'll be no argument about it." Jackson led point-makers in 1933 in close through with a rousing finish last spring that put him in the Leafs' line when Charlie Conacher comes to terms.

The Bruiser, rounding into form more rapidly than usually does, has flashed brilliant form in the Toronto workouts at Kitchener. Joe Primeau and Ken Doraty have teamed with Jackson in the practice sessions but Doraty will be shifted to another line when Charlie Conacher comes to terms.

Charlie Sands, the rookie from Port Arthur who acquitted himself with considerable credit in the Stanley Cup playoffs last season, has greatly impressed the Kitchener camp with his ability. Coach Dick Irvin expects Sands to "stick" and believes Hec Kilrea, Bill Thoms and Ace Bailey form a forward line with more than usual powers.

Harold Starr's future in hockey was doubtful today. Ordered by Montreal Canadiens to report to Windsor Bulldogs, the Ottawan balked when he heard the salary he would get. He has left Kingston for the capital and if Windsor does not satisfy him will probably obtain his release from Canadiens and seek another berth.

George Boucher found his Ottawa Senator squad just about completed today with the arrival of Perk Galbraith, the former Boston Bruin, obtained by Ottawa in the trade that sent Bob Gracie to Boston. He reported late but in good condition.

Eddie Gerard doesn't seem inclined to change the forward lines he used in last season's campaign. At their first session on the ice yesterday, Dewsbury, Jimmy Ward and Baldy Northcott flanking Hooley Smith on one line and Paul Haynes, Earl Robinson and Dave Trottier on another. Wally Kilrea will centre one line with Art Jennings, with Lorne Duczak and Glen Boyd-Wilson on the wings.

JACK TAYLOR ARGOS ON TOP

Leads all Scorers by His Work on Saturday

Toronto, Oct. 24 (CP)— John MacPherson Taylor, of Guelph's Taylor-Forbes Taylors and one of the Autumn's several football sensations, had moved to the top of the scoring list in the Intercontinental Union today on the strength of the two touchdowns he scored Saturday for Argonauts against Hamilton Tigers.

Dominated by new stars, the head of the list found only Frank Turville, among Big Four veterans in a commanding position. Taylor's four touchdowns gave the Argo flash back a total of four points over Andy Tommy of Ottawa who scored a single Saturday against Montreal to total 3 for the year.

Turville, ace of Hamilton's backfield, was in third place with Apologis and Ale Elowitis of Ottawa Senators, Carl Quilty Canada's real quarterback and Mike Chepulis, Argo runner, who dropped back as well as anyone in the east, were tied for fifth place with eight each. Buck Welsh of Montreal had seven.

Jack Sisculin University of Toronto punter, was scoreless against Queen's Saturday but the 24 points he accumulated in previous tilts against Western and McGill left him safely in front of Intercollegiate Union scorers. Bogue Shirk, running and kicking half of Western, scored a touchdown and single against McGill to boost his total to 21 points and one behind him was Johnny Wing of Queen's who booted eight points in the Tricolor victory over Varsity.

Sarnia players occupied five of the first six places in the O.R.F.U. standing placed by Alex. Hayes with 14. Norman Perry and Roy Brown each scored two touchdowns to add seven points place with 10. Claude Harris had eight and Hugh Stirling was tied with Allen of Hamilton at six.

Kingston Transient at Sudbury Is a Mystery Man

Sudbury, Oct. 24.—(CP)—George Amy, 45-year-old transient from Kingston, awoke from a four-day sleep in Sudbury here today and said "Boy's that's the best sleep I ever had." Amy's sleep has been somewhat of a mystery since Hydro linemen found him under a tree, on October 13, after a previous four day sleep. Apparently fully recovered, he fell into a similar sleep last week. Yesterday doctors found nothing wrong with him, and he was removed to the district jail today. J. J. Amy, a brother in Verona, has requested police to hold George until he comes for him.

CURRENT SPORT

Repeatedly of late we have been admonished regarding the manner in which some of the patrons of local football games continuously "beat the gate". As was pointed out to us the admission to local interscholastic football games has been set at such a low figure that each and every patron can help the cause.

Football is one of the most expensive team games played as the squad's equipment runs into considerable money when spread over an entire season. On the other hand it is one of the most thrilling and hard fought sports known, all giving their every last ounce of energy and vitality towards the cause of victory.

Belleville have two splendid football squads, that are a credit to their school, the Belleville Collegiate. Just because they are not at present leading their respective groups does not intimate that they are inferior to the other teams they are in competition with. As was pointed out to us the price of admission to the local interscholastic football games is so within reach of the average person's pocket-book.

We understand that Jimmie Folwell, the B.C.I. star performer was given a five minute penalty after he booked a field goal in Lindsay last Saturday. Why Jimmie was penalized no one seems to known but, he ran afoul of referee Read and took a undeserved rest. From what we know of Jimmie Folwell the mere suggestion of a penalty for alleged assertions given us that the referee laugh because Jimmie always peered himself a gentleman both on and off the field. It was the first penalty Jimmie has received since the year one.

As a matter of fact the officiating was so bad, that the players were disgusted and when in the huddles were heard muttering "what's the use we have to beat the team and two officials".

We substantiate this statement Coach Shiels informs us that the local lineman ran out on the field and called an interference play long after Wally Hilton had completed a 35 yard run. The locals do not say, that the officials beat them as such was not the case, but, they do say that the officials literally broke their hearts at times.

With a score of 22 to 3 it would be foolish to even surmise, that the officials were instrumental in causing the defeat. They could make things quite tough for the boys. The local Junior squad can well be proud with the league leading Trenton Juniors by handing them a reverse here next Friday, when the seniors can say' him second place if they snap out of their present slumber and Saturday Prize the following day. Take it from us, that the senior interscholastic race is a real one. There is only a game's difference in the standing between the first and last placed club. Pretty close competition, we'd say. The kids play a snappy brand of football, all over the circuit.

After leading the West End club for the majority of the game the local Cities Service champions were forced to accept a one all tie at the opening game of the Kingston City League last evening. The "Oilmen" bring report, that the West End club are considerably strengthened from last season.

Failure to capitalize on scoring chances that presenting themselves spelled all chances of the "green and white" coming down in front. Goaltender Les Tice had had but one practice they played a fine brand of hockey, however. About 1,000 fans turned out to the opening game that went ten minutes overtime with no scoring registered in the extra half.

By the way Jack Taylor, who starred with the Argonauts against the Kingston Intermediates here Saturday is now a resident of this city and has been assisting Coach Shiels with the two collegiate football squads. Jack is considered one of the best gridders in Eastern Canada and is quite an asset to the local squad having the line all line plunging, etc.

CORRECT CLOTHING FOR MEN

BUSTER CRABBE, Star of "TARZAN The FEARLESS" is a Model of Perfect Physique

Buster Crabbe who plays the title role in "Tarzan the Fearless," the great jungle story, is pronounced by physical culturists as the most perfect specimen of young manhood in motion pictures, if not in the world.

A world-champion swimmer, member of the U.S. Olympic Swimming Teams of 1928 and 1932; the holder of five world records and thirty-five national championships in aquatic events, and only twenty-three years old, Crabbe could have served as a model for ancient Greek classic sculptors.

This remarkable young man is called upon in "Tarzan the Fearless" to perform what is said to be the most amazing and varied series of hair-raising feats ever enacted on the screen. And in no instance does a "double" supplant Crabbe. He is not only capable of doing everything called for in the script, but insists on doing stunts that would daunt the most reckless stunt man.

"Tarzan" opens at the Capitol Theatre on Thursday.

NEW RABBIT FOOT BALL IS PROPOSED

The usual baseball cry of "rabbit" ball has invaded football in the United States now as Coach Howard Berry, of Valley Forge, Penn., brings forth the suggestion that a livelier ball should be used in place of the present one. The ball which uses the same type ball now used in the U.S. game. Above is seen, at left, the ball now being used and also stronger because the seams are continuous. The valve, which is in the lacing instead of on one side is mounted with a swivel cap proposed new ball.

Fashion Flashes

A sweet whisper in the car is a new carring with a tiny silver bell. It unscrews so that one can insert a tiny scrap of perfume-soaked cotton. This novelty comes in various metals.

A double life is the portion of a clever new muff which also serves as a handbag. Designed for evening wear, this square muff-bag is made of petals of white velvet, with a centre panel of white pompom feathers.

A real rest from the jacket plus formal frock is the slim, clinging formal frock, worn with a jumper done in velvet with elastic threads. A double yoke of black velvet of this model has a very deep decolletage. For those days when wrap this is covered by a turtle neck jumper of shirred elastic velvet in bright red.

A nice friendship is that of fur and velvet, the two making a gracious combination. A lovely new evening gown is of brocaded velvet. It has a very deep bib wide U-shaped back decolletage and widens the shoulders gracefully with bands of ermine narrow, the fur repeated in the cuffs of the brief sleeves. Stitched detail marks the clinging skirt.

The winding trail of the fur stole to make a muff is something new. A lovely suit of green wool tweed cloth worn with a light green velvet blouse has a muff for fitter—a big narrow collar of civet cat with long ends that are wound around the hands for muffing in front.

Time turns back to inspire many of the new frocks for evening. The moyen-age influence is quite obvious in a lovely bottom gown of dull coral pink velvet. A huge cord of lustrous silk floats from the waist side of the narrow clinging skirt and has huge tasselled ends that fall to the hem.

Advice to the Lovelorn

(By Beatrice Fairfax)

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Heartsick," who is eighteen, finds love nothing more or less than "an agony." Unrequited love, of course, she means.

For a year, she tells me, she has had a friend who is more than 35 who has so far shown no concern regarding her affection although he is friendly, considerate and, from her point of view, handsome.

"Heartsick" is getting thin and she doesn't sleep. Her despair is deepening. She has lost all her Prince Charming remains unattached and unappreciative.

What is the trouble?

Why does the poor little "Heartsick" has herself betrayed the difficulty. She doesn't like the plan to seem like the successful older girls who have many admirers. Probably she copies their clothes and their way of arranging their hair and their conversation, even. Also, she writes:

"I've been told sometimes that I look like John Crawford, though you may not think so. I try to treat it. But wouldn't you think such a resemblance, even if a faint one, might help me? Any boy-friend never seems to want to be alone with me though I encourage him more every day."

No heartsick, try being yourself for a while! A man of 35 has seen a good many girls. He isn't likely to fall in love with somebody who is merely a copy of those he has seen. Nor is an attempt to pattern oneself, in a feeble way, after a famous Hollywood beauty a very hopeful move to make.

But a girl who has some special, different quality of her own—some distinctive charm that makes her stand out vividly among her companions—that's the girl that a man looks at, and looks at twice!

A Play Corner of His Own Important to the 'Toddler'

(By Constance Cameron)

Ask the mother of any baby, and she will explain: "Of course, I want my baby to develop both physically and mentally." Yet as every attempt to do just that, the mother seems irritated and resentful.

When baby first throws his spoon on the floor and enjoys his sense of power in putting the spoon where it hadn't been before, enjoys the noise and the excitement his act has caused, mother gets annoyed. When he repeats the act she grows more annoyed. She should realize that a step in baby's growth has been attained and that she could quickly substitute a substitution of some kind. She must explain that spoons are made to eat with but at noon as luncheon is finished baby will be put in his bed or pen for between "naps" will be indulged in.

As the baby becomes a "toddler" it often sends the busy mother that he feels that the chief vocation in life is to upset the routine of the home and life in general.

This is the big reason why mother must know and appreciate the need of growth and expansion in the young child's life.

To be able to erect a sturdy house of blocks must be more to mother than a messing up of the living room. It must mean to her a growing sense of dexterity in little hands, with a growing sense of balance and symmetry in the toddler's mind.

"Run" you object, "don't have a topsy-turvy house because baby has come into it." Quite right, and we have considered before, the necessity of a room, or some sort of play place, all his own where the child can experiment, with his environment, and be fully exercised in what we frequently mis-name "play."

Learn what to expect of children at certain ages, and you will soon find that they are not merely addicted to "naughtiness" as you often suspected, but are going through a very definite development without which they cannot hope to become normal, efficient men and women.

CONSERVATIVE WOMEN MEET

Winter Season Officially Opened With Social Evening

Monday evening the Women's Conservative Association met in the Conservative Rooms, Front Street, for the renewal of its regular monthly meetings for the winter season. Miss Rose Mallon, president of the Association occupied the chair with some fifty members present. The business and activities were outlined by the president, and a committee elected to make arrangements for a large card party to be held the latter part of November.

Mrs. G. W. McCarthy, one of the honorary presidents of the association, in a brief, happily worded address, spoke of the activities of the organization and its past and future usefulness to the Conservative party in this district. Mrs. Jessie McLean presented the entertaining feature, a reading picture of a Dominion parliament of the 1890's, which will hang in the club rooms and prove of interest to the many callers there. The hostesses for the evening in the tea tables were expressed by the president. Dainty lunch closed the meeting, proper, an hour of cards and conversation enjoyed. Prize winner were: Euchre, Mrs. Bunnett; Bridge, Miss J. MacLean, Miss Fleming and Miss Stewart poured tea.

Eyelids and Lashes in Colors

Blue, Gold And Bronze Combinations Join The Beauty Parade.

(By Helen Follett)

Blue eyelids and golden lashes! Beat that combination if you can! Lucerne is not resigning on the girl with cornsilk colored hair. The blue shadow comes in a jar, is touched on the eyelids, doesn't go accosting up very far. The eyelash gilt is a liquid. You put it on with a camel's hair brush. There are directions and yet ones...look for the brunette babies.

These eye trimmings are strictly evening-time, but somehow they homey up to our quaint Victorian garb—peplums, capes, feathered hat and all—the rest of the fluff stuff that has been dug out of the fashion box in designers' attics. They give a girl that mysterious slant, that slight touch, which was what the short-skirted, shingle-haired flapper lacked.

The beauty parade marches, changes with the times.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)

Thanks for Kindness

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. A few weeks ago I was in an accident and taken to a place. I did not know the people and they were very kind to me, and I made them a lot of extra work. In what way should I thank them for their kindness?

2. I also received many lovely flowers and letters and fruits. I thanked the givers personally but feel as if this is not enough. What would you advise? Should I write a note of thanks, and if so, what should I say? And should I write short notes on nice white writing-paper or correspondence cards?

3. Is it proper to write a typewritten letter if I was ill? I really think it is.

Country Girl.

1. You should, first of all, go to see them, even if they live out of town, so that you can personally and adequately express your thanks to them. If they live so far away from you that this is impossible then you should send a letter of thanks to them especially articulate, especially say your deep thanks and gratitude.

2. To the hostess of the home, you should send flowers, with your note perhaps. Or if you can think of something that could be sent to her or to the family, some present that would be in excellent taste, that would be a fine thing to do. Such kindness as this deserves every gesture that we can make with taste. In other words, send nothing that would seem like an effort to "pay" for their kindness, but something that will graciously and sweetly say thanks added to your words.

3. Yes you should write a note of thanks to each kind giver, and write these notes on note-paper or letters. Tell these friends how much you appreciate their thoughtfulness, and the flowers that brought you so much pleasure and happiness.

3. Yes, this is the gracious thing to do.

Introducing Brothers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Kindly let me know how one should introduce one's brother. Should I say "Mr. Blank, meet my brother Jack" or should I use my brother's first name?

Let me thank this newspaper and you for your kind service.

G.

That's a very polite and gracious sentence....and we both thank you.

I'm glad that you wrote me about a form of introduction, for I should like very much to urge you not to use this form that you are interested in. Never say "meet"—in an introduction.

When you introduce your brother, it is well to use the form of introduction that is more or less reserved for family introductions.... a form more informal than the usual introduction ;

For instance "Mr. Blank, this is my brother," or "Mr. Blank, this is my brother Jack." Or, "Mr. Blank, do you know my brother Tom?" It isn't necessary to use the last name.

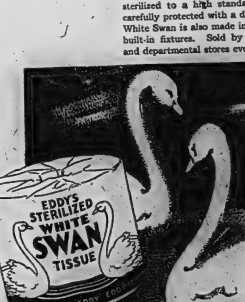
Luggage

Dear Miss. Beeckman:

Please tell me if it is correct for a man to carry a steamer blanket in a form of introduction, or should be strapped to his suitcase, or put in the trunk?

H.

There isn't any reason to carry a steamer blanket when we go abroad these days, for excellent steamer blankets are provided on board all liners, for a small rental sum. I would never consider carrying steamer blankets when I go abroad.



Plan to "travel light" with luggage, and don't carry with you such a burden as a steamer blanket. When you board the ship, arrange with your deck steward to rent a blanket, or two if you wish, and then, you won't have the bother of carrying it about with you in Europe. And, speaking of trunks, if you are staying in Europe for only a short time, I suggest that you plan to take only small-sized and well-cred bags ....luggage that you can take with you in your train compartments, rather than trunks, which mean much trouble in travelling in Europe.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good manners submitted by readers)

UPWARD TURN ON MARKETS

Gold Stocks Particularly Continue Gains in Toronto

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—(CP)—Industrial and Mining Stocks pursued an upward course again today, stimulated by a generally firmer tone in New York and United States dollar. Firmer prices this afternoon for wheat was a factor. Gold shares on the Standard Exchange set the pace again, chalking up gains of several dollars and under a flock of buying orders from Canadian and United States investors and traders. New all-time high prices were set by McIntyre, Dome and Lake Shore, Dome going to $38.90, McIntyre to $42.50 and Lake Shore to $50.00. These prices were shaded less than half a dollar in each case at the afternoon.

On the Toronto and Montreal Exchanges industrials and utilities led the lead in volume and prices advanced generally, Walkers alone selling around $120 and Nickel was knocking at the $19 mark this afternoon.

In the liquor group gains were shown by Canadian Industrial Alcohol, Brewers and Distillers and Hiram Walker, with shares of the latter's common, the latter selling up to $25 by noon. Trading in the rest of the general market continued firm as the afternoon progressed.

NO DEFENCE BY ACCUSED

Counsel Admits Man Extended Just Treatment in Trial

Cobourg, Oct., Oct. 24 (CP) —The trial of Yrgo Laurila, Finnish resident of Gilmour, for the murder of Fred McLaren of Cavan township, opposite the city and today near A. A. Skeans, counsel for the defence, went to the jury without calling a witness for the stand. Previously, it had been expected Laurila would testify in his own behalf. Court was resumed at 9 a.m. Tuesday, and adjourned 7. McLaren was found dead on February 5.

Laurila had come to this country a stranger, Mr. Skeans told the jury, and when law applied to the stranger and the native, "More just treatment has never been afforded to any man on trial for his life than has been given to this man," he said in paying a tribute to bench and prosecution.

The evidence in such a case had to be a strong chain, the defence counsel declared, but it was not to acquit Laurila. He remarked in the absence of his address that he might be on the scaffold had occurred in this county since 1859.

ture dropping to 18 degrees at the snow was observed.

Thursday's Weather

Toronto, Oct. 24 (CP)—As a result of temperatures as low as 1-2 below, a record was established at Sault Ste. Marie in Algoma, it was announced that North Bay stated snow was falling, with a depth of two inches being recorded.

Snow started to fall during the night at Stratford and when citizens awoke today the ground was covered to a depth of about four inches. The weather, however, is not cold and for the most part the change in the weather was welcomed.

It also reported a fairly heavy fall and the moisture is expected to be helpful to farmers. Peterborough and Brockville received their share of the flakes but at Brantford the snow apparently had changed into moisture for rain fell steadily there.

HOPES OF GERMANY

German Self-Respect And Honor Need Not Be Forfeited

Geneva, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Reports that Arthur Henderson, British Foreign Secretary, nor Joseph Paul-Boncour, Foreign Minister in the resigned French Cabinet, would come to Geneva tomorrow for the meeting of the steering committee of the disarmament conference and the plenary session the following day were interpreted in some quarters today as meaning the conference was headed toward the adoption of an adjournment.

Lord Cecil Robert, stimulating what is called adjournment manoeuvres, declared that the powers' memoranda choose between two solutions.

The first of these is to dissolve the Conference, frankly announcing that the differences between the present does not permit limitation and reduction of armaments. The second is to go ahead and formulate a limited armaments convention applicable to all countries except Germany, basing this action on the principle that the German armament question already is limited by the Treaty of Versailles.

Some quarters forecast that the smaller States will yield easily enough to allow the Arms Parley to collapse, leaving the whole question to the Steering Committee meeting and the full Session Conference.

Another conference was seen in the fact that Russia and Turkey are opposed to the principle in part of Sir John which was the immediate basis of the Disarmament Conference. This is on the grounds that they did not participate in drafting the plan.

Limited Adjournment

Norman H. Davis, head of the American delegation to the Disarmament Conference, today announced that any adjournment of the parley would be limited. He had made the recommendation to Arthur Henderson, Chairman of the Conference, and to the Bureau of the conference, it was said.

Davis, it was said, told Henderson that any adjournment of the parley should be limited to a few days in order that only such conditions for overseas and adjournment could be clarified by such results. And, certainly, the best way to adopt those methods is not to turn the whole thing over.

Mr. MacDonald said he did not think the United Kingdom would owe apologies for anything it did during the recent negotiations with the League of Nations.

The Prime Minister said all representatives at last December's five power Conference were agreed principles of equality that were accepted then were accepted by Germany, meanwhile, should contribute to the sense of security so that each were going to agree to disarm.

"I hope," he concluded, "that the very first opportunity that presents itself will be seized upon by Germany to show by actions that she is pursuing peace and is anxious to live in friendship and accord with other nations of Europe; at any rate opportunities will be given to her to forfeit either honor or self-respect.

HE WAS A MAN

By Jasper B. Sinclair

"Sure, and if it ain't match covers or postage stamps, it's something else you're collecting," snorted Tim Molloy to the group of youngsters who had followed him from the barracks up the hill that overlooks Quarry Flats.

Souvenirs! Always looking for souvenirs! Just like that baby-faced kid up in the Argonne!"

Bujiah chatter ceased. Tim was in the mood again.

"Come on, Tim! Give us the story," pleaded one of the boys. "Tell us about the baby-faced kid."

Tim grunted. "Sure, and I thought you'd be tired of my prattle by now."

A chorus of dissent gratified Tim's vanity. To the rest of the youth, Tim Molloy might be a hard bitten lod kick who rode his men the slightest infraction of rules. To those offiicers' boys he was plain. Tim.....always dependable for a good yarn if sufficiently coaxed.

"Tim Molloy looked down upon Quarry Field, stretching away from the foot of the bluff, squinted across at Fort Point beyond the Golden Gate, then knocked the ashes from his pipe with proud deliberation.

"Well, if it's a story you're wanting," he gibbed, "here goes!"

After the St. Mihiel scrap they shunted me out of the old Rock of the Marne division over into the 77th. To help trade out of the line, so they told me. To my notion it was a dirty trick to play after me being with the gang long enough to call them all by their middle names.

Well, we hiked "up into the Argonne just in time to jump over when the signal came. St. Mihiel was a honey beside the Argonne slough that Argonne affair.

The way we started out I thought we was going to have a chase Fritz clean to Berlin before catching up with him. Which was the only time in his life Tim Molloy made a mistake.

For the first few days we did chase them just as fast as our legs would carry us "then we got a snag. They'd fallen back on that hindenburg line you've read about, and there they stuck. And you might know we was some slow the system when we couldn't budge them.

Well, the red-legs played their guns on Fritz all night, and they we started moving after him. The rain jumped off from a place called Montville, headed for all hell and all on the run—well, it was a yard-wide creek with a mile-long name.

By night we'd almost reached our objective, the creek, and we was all hedged in by the creek and a piney bluff. Pretty much we knew we was in for some pickle. The rest of the advance had failed. We was surrounded by a whole German army. Couldn't go forward and couldn't go back. It looked like the finish of the battalion.

Some folks call it the "Lost Battalion". But you can take my word, for it that we wasn't "lost". We knew where we was every minute of the time. And wishes we was somewhere else!

For three or four days Fritz tried everything he knew to dislodge us. Couldn't use artillery 'cause the shells dropped among his own troops. So he sent over plenty of trench mortar shells in among us. And night after night he crept close enough on wops of that bluff to toss down a wagon load of potato mashers and stickpipes.

Day and night their rifles and machine guns made like a hail of regular interest. We'd nothing to we'd nothing to shoot at except the creek for water 'cause it was under German fire. By the end of the week the battalion—

But, there's no use telling you that that all about. You've heard that gang of American boys that held out against the whole German army. Tim Malley that's mighty proud he was one of them. I'm telling you that.

"Get on with your story, Tim!" prompted one of the boys, as the old sergeant glanced wistfully down upon the bleu waters of the Golden Gate.

Tim looked agitated. "There you go! Always in a hurry to hear the end of a yarn!"

Well, as I was trying to tell you before you so rudely interrupted, there's no need giving you the story of the Lost Battalion's fight in that canyon. Nor about how the American planes tried to drop food and medical supplies to us. Every bundle fell into Fritz's hands, and left us with our tongues hanging out.

It was on the night of the fourth day that the baby-faced kid piped up his lit tle piccolo. Didn' Whose was his name, but we always called him Baby Face.

Baby Face had been with a patrol trying to find out how many Germans was surrounding us. Any if there was any chance to get back to our own lines. You see, we was fitting mighty desperate by this time.

Well, the patrol came back and reported that it was impossible to get out of the canyon. But Baby Face went up to his captain and asked permission to go out again on his own hook. Said there was a lot of food and fires and like that could be picked up from some Fritzes lying out there in the woods.

At first the captain said no, but Baby Face kept on pleading until the captain finally gave in. "Have me, that captain knew how welcome food and fires in the woods would be!

So Baby Face crawled out past our outposts o shands and knees. In a minute he was out of sight, 'cause it was a dark night. Only in a while a few Very lights lit up the place like Market Street on a New Year's Eve, but when they faded you couldn't see your hand before your face.

A few of us squatted down near the captain to wait for Baby Face. We knew we couldn't expect him back for an hour anyway, but we began fidgeting the minute he'd disappeared. The captain kept muttering that he shouldn't have let him go; that the chances were a hundred to one against his coming back.

Finally the hour was up and no sign of Baby Face. Another hour passed. Once in a while a few shots sounded out front. Another time a Fritz typewriter clattered for a couple of minutes. We began talking to himself like a Dutch uncle. Either Fritz had got the kid, or they was suspicious somebody was prowling around their front.

The thing hour was almost up when a few whistle sounded within a few yards of us. We, just about jumped out of our uniforms. It was the kid's signal! In another minute Baby Face was standing in front of a excited bunch.

That was the first time I'd seen that hard-boiled captain unbend. I thought he'd kiss the kid before he got through welcoming him back.

"And now, Wilson, let's see what you brought back in the way of supplies," he demanded. The kid's blouse was all puffed out like he'd a dozen loaves of bread and a case of corned willie hidden there.

"Sorry, captain, but I didn't get any supplies," replied Baby Face. "But I did bring back Heinie."

And then he began jerking out flashlights, pocket knives, pipes, a couple iron crosses and a hundred and one different kinds of souvenirs. Nary a bit of food or a single fire!

Air bit in the mess!

But, believe me, that bunch of starvelers Baby Face brought back did more to help the gang than a dozen loads of food. It was a dressing station full of medical supplies. The captain started passing around the battalion. There was almost enough to give everybody something.

I ain't never been one to go much on this "morale" stuff they spread, but Baby Face's bunch of souvenirs sure pepped up the whole battalion. That night they'd have held that canyon until Kingdom come! "And that's the finishing touch" lamely, "is about all there is to the story. It ain't much, but it's what you wanted."

"What became of Baby Face, Tim? Was he inevitable query from one of his listeners.

Tim Molloy's thin eyed his questioner, then looked down upon Crissy Field as though seeing it for the first time.

"Why, Baby Face came through the whole gusre just as safely as Tim Malloy. But," he added slowly, "you can bet your boots we didn't call him Baby Face after that night. From 'them on that kid was one hundred percent man!"

NOTHING TO COMPARE WITH BUCKLEY'S FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

G. Billings of Colonsay, Ont., ought to know, for he has used BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE for years. He writes: "There is nothing on the market to equal it. Its flash-like action is sudden death to a cold."

No matter how stubborn or long standing your cough or cold may be, try BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE. You will be amazed at the instant relief it affords. The very first sip relieves the cough, and in no time at all clears up the deep-seated congestion soothes and heals the tender, inflamed membranes and helps to prevent future attacks.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

COLMAN AT BEST IN HIS LATEST PICTURE AT BELLE

Through the fog and the mystery of night, Ronald Colman stumbles into the living image of himself and so starts off the stirring story of "The Masquerader," at the Belle Theatre Tonight, and Wednesday, matinee and evening.

The thrills and the heart-throbs of the famous stage melodrama are brilliantly revived by Colman in a smooth and polished production by Samuel Goldwyn. Howard Estabrook and Hugo Hart adapted the screen play from John Hunter Booth's dramatization of the Catherine Cecil Thurston novel.

Two Leading Women

Playing with Colman in the dual roles are the patrician Elissa Landi and the dark, stately beauty of Juliette Compton, the one as wife, the other as intimate friend.

The story itself is one of the most cherished and the most intriguing of modern legends. John Ollicote, estranged from his wife, Eve, is going to the dogs from booze and dissipation. Making a critical speech in the House of Commons he calls his colleagues. Stumbling home then in the fog, he meets with his double, whom he installs in his home in Eve's place, of governess and his home. The strange problem of the two men, the love of the one friend trying to recognise in the newcomer as husband and a lover as Colman sinks lower and lower, builds up to a terrifying climax.

Director Richard Wallace

Director Richard Wallace has blended the romantic feeling and humor of which Colman is so much a master with an air of mystery and thrills that suggests "Bulldog Drummond."

If "The Masquerader" has any ancestry in the past Colman pictures, it is surely "Bulldog Drummond" for the new picture, reported as Colman's last for two years, is certainly a fitting swan song to the Hollywood career of a distinguished actor and a gentleman.

3 Selected Shorts

The enjoyment of the above feature attraction is enhanced by the exhibition of a selected array of short gems including a very funny Mack Bennett Star comedy, "Road House Queen," the Canadian Newsreel with its interesting current Radio Show introducing favorite Radio stars in the studio and at play.

"Broadway to Hollywood"

Songs, comedy, thrills and heart throbs are woven together in the dazzling musical spectacle "Broadway to Hollywood," opening at the Belle Thursday, featuring a cast of ten favorite stage and screen stars, and the screen's most beautiful dancers.

Ten major Walnut Furniture gifts will be presented to patrons Thursday evening at 9 p.m.

ADVOCATES ANNUAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL

Madoc, Oct. 24—The Women's Institute held its October meeting on Friday afternoon, 20th, at the home of Mrs. J. Smith with a full attendance. Address—Mrs. C. N. Whytock presiding. Opening with the Institute Ode, and the reading and adoption of minutes. The correspondence for the month was then dealt with. Letters of thanks were received from several members for letters of sympathy and flowers were sent to Mrs. Ross Ketcheson's family. This bill was forwarded to be paid by the Tower Fund. A letter from Mrs. McVee of Belleville relative to the donation of canned fruit for the Children's Shelter was read, and it was decided that a Belleville Institute member contribute to a shower for that purpose.

Correspondence was also read, and Mrs. S. Fox was appointed delegate from Madoc Branch for the convention to be held in St. Thomas on Parish Hall, Belleville. The roll call was answered by the Forward one dollar for convention expenses, and if the dollar from the social department grant be asked for.

Mrs. G. McCoy was then called to give a discussion of the Current Events of the month, which were unusually interesting and well presented.

Mrs. B. Alexander then took up the subject "Music in the Home and in the Institute," dealing largely with the teaching of the "Tonic Sol fa Method," in the Rural Schools and its value in the life and character of the pupil. Mrs. Alexander also urged the value of music for the children in high schools and the desirability of an annual musical festival among the older students in which competitions should be held for vocal and duet singing, and also for four part and eight part singing. Madoc would tend to bring forward these really gifted, and give all a chance to find out what musical talent exists among the children of both public and high schools. That talent exists in far greater measure than most people would believe, would be assured, and that musical training would help to develop some share in nearly every pupil that pupils and schools would gain in greater measure than could be figured in mere dollars and cents. The Institutes of some parts are already helping financially to establish the weekly music teaching in schools and the Institutes would not be included in the schedule, and more could be done if the mothers near the members of the Institute were interested and helpful.

Mrs. T. L. Nickle then led a short discussion on the Institute hand book, which may be continued later.

During the afternoon Mrs. A. C. Anderson delighted all by a piano solo "Chodin's Valse in C. Minor."

Roll Call was answered by many with "Current Events."

A vote of thanks and appreciation was tendered on motion of Mrs. Wellman and Mrs. Rutherford. Mrs. Anderson presided at the music, and to Mrs. Alexander for her excellent address. Also to Mrs. McCoy and Mrs. Nickle for their parts in the program.

The National Anthem, "God Save the King" and a social half hour closed the meeting. Mrs. Anderson, Rose, Irwin and Phillips, assisted the hostess at the tea table.

The annual supper of the church of the Good Shepherd of Madoc held in the Masonic Hall under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild on Thursday last was a great success both financially and socially. A delightful chicken supper was served accompanied by plentiful supplies of pickles, cakes, pies, salads, jellies, etc., and followed by jellied cakes, ices and pies of many varieties served to cater to the various needs of all comers, among whom were a large number from all the churches of the village, and so pleased were the supplies that a school children's dinner was suggested for the next meeting year and all comers were served for the second time in the year. The draw prize was won by Mr. Jas. Watson to whom fell the lucky number dollar gold piece, and the lucky door prize of a beautiful hooked rug, acquired by Mrs. Bartlett and family, Mr. and Mrs. Kelly.

Is your neighbor's child growing faster than yours?

IF your child used to be the same height as your neighbor's child, but is now an inch or two less, it may be that his every-day meals are deficient in the growth-producing Vitamins B_1 and B_2, or deficient in iron or other nutrients he vitally needs.

This is a real possibility. One nutritional scientist who investigated the subject said: "It is questionable whether the average child of today is receiving an amount of Vitamin B_1 sufficient to produce the best rate of growth".

As a result of feeding tests with 100 school children two other nutritional scientists found that, when the ordinary diet was increased by a product rich in Vitamin B_1, the children made a three-fold greater increase in weight, and a significantly greater increase in height.

By giving your child a glass of VIP once or twice a day you can make certain that he will receive a generous supply of Vitamins B_1 and B_2. VIP is rich in these vitamins which not only promote growth and increase weight but also stimulate the appetite. The Vitamin content and the wonderful energy of VIP are under constant biological test and the therapeutic efficiency of the product is therefore assured.

A glass of VIP will also supply your child with as much iron as three quarters of a pound of spinach. And the nut-like, chocolate-malt flavor of VIP is much loved by children. VIP is sold only by drug stores or the drug departments of department stores. 10 oz. 35c—20 oz., $1.25.

A FREE SAMPLE Package will be mailed on request. Just write Department L, Scientific Food Products, Limited, Yardley House, Toronto.

I certify to the Vitamin and Iron content of VIP and to the accuracy of the statements made in this advertisement.

OCT 24- MR. AND MRS.- THE LONG AND THE SHORT OF IT

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Toyat, the king-ape, with the savage people of his tribe, was foraging for food. It was cool in the middle jungle silence and the apes were content and at peace with the world. Coming toward them, were a three people, but the wind blew from the apes toward the three, so none of the great Anthropoids had caught the hated scent spoor of the Tarmangani.

In the lead was a wicked-eyed Bedwin, Another man tottered along with the aid of a broken tree branch. The third was a girl, whose strange garments of splendid stuffs were soiled and torn, but she carried herself with regal mien. The three were moving cautiously. It was the Bedwin who first sighted the playful young ape who had wandered farthest from the great bulk of Toyat's tribe.

Raising his ancient matchlock, the man aimed and fired. Through the roar that followed came a scream of pain and terror from the wounded "bull." Instantly the great bulk leaped into action. Hurling to and ward the two men and the girl, they came. Fahd and Ghimbol turned and bolted, in their cowardly haste to leave no a wife. How began a battle royal between the two huge anthropoids for possession of the horror stricken Gulnaida, Princess of Mimmr.

"Toyat, the king-ape, with the savage people of his tribe, was foraging for food. It was cool in the middle jungle silence and the apes were content and at peace with the world. Coming toward them, were a three people, but the wind blew from the apes toward the three, so none of the great Anthropoids had caught the hated scent spoor of the Tarmangani."

Eve reached the office half an hour late. She hoped this tardiness would not come to Mr. Bixby's notice. He always was at his desk early and expected everyone else to be present. On Eve's desk—for she had been Alice Marshall's—was a note which read:

"Memo to Miss Bayless from Mr. Barnes:

"After you correct proofs of today's ad, please see Miss McElroy and finish the Basement ad. Also sale Tuesday. Select six or eight hats for sketching. Make 3-col. layout for Press and 2-col. for Times and write copy and heads to fit. See Church on my desk for depth of ad and approximate size of cut.

"Send proof of your column in today's Press to Mr. Bixby for big O. K."

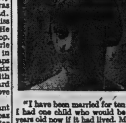
Eve read this through a second time. Basement hats! Well, they were starting her at the bottom literally. She had taken it for granted that there would be a new girl to fill the place made vacant by her promotion. A new girl to write relatively unimportant bits of copy and do the arranging that would be trusted to Charles, the office boy. But there was no time to waste on injured feelings.

The message was entered at that moment, both in great haste.

"Anything for the Times?" asked one of them. Eve went into Barnes' office to see. There was a manilla envelope on his desk marked "Times—Classified." The boy snatched it from her hand and was off. Eve turned to the other lad. "Anybody here by the name of Miss Eve Bayless?" he inquired. He carried a box from a florist's shop.

Flowers! Eve wondered if Mr. Barnes could have sent them in honor of her promotion. Perhaps even Mr. Bixby. There were six yellow rosebuds long-stemmed with glossy, deep green leaves. The card in the tiny envelope read, "Love from Dick."



Eve brushed one of the fragrant buds with her lips and with a loose bar pin fastened it below the collar of her frock. The other five buds she arranged in a pottery vase that she kept on her desk.

Arlene Smith and Marya Vlad entered the office together. Arlene was constantly inventing new slangy. She wore the extremes in fashion and wore them well. Her dark eyes were shaded by an intriguing long black fringe and her soft black hair was kept sleek through weekly visits to the beauty shop. Marya was a pretty young Bohemian girl whose fair hair was parted above a broad white forehead and whose gentle dignity gave evidence of careful training by which her old world mother held firmly.

LIBERALS ARE VICTORS IN 3 BY-ELECTIONS

Mr. Stubbs, who was Mr. Macmillan's campaign manager, is available immediately for comment on the result, but it is thought that Dominion leader for the party, declared his followers were not greatly discomfited by the result. "It is only a matter of time until the destiny of the people manages to find expression," he said.

9 Candidates Run

Nine candidates contested the three seats and four of them will lose their deposits. In Mackenzie the Conservative H. H. Edgar and the United Front candidate, Mrs. McManus forfeit their electoral fees while F. C. Annett and Paul L. Dube in Restigouche-Madawaska also failed to poll the requisite number of votes.

Prime Minister R. B. Bennett has no comment to make on the results but Mr. King saw in the elections a desire to "see in matters of government a speedy return to Liberal principles and policies."

"In outstanding features of the campaigning were, he said, the high tariff policies of the government, "based upon mistaken theories of economic nationalism and economic imperialism, which have served to strangle Canada's trade." The government's failure to redeem his "many reckless and shameful promises in his appeal for office" and the government's "high-handed methods in the administration of the country's affairs."

The Liberal leader mentioned the C.C.F. but did not extend his observations on the new party. Both Conservatives and C.C.F. have been opposed by the Liberal party which "rests its case before the front and all along the line." He believed, that the Liberal victory "might well be construed as a vote of want of confidence in the government, and a demand for a general election."

An appeal to his constituents regardless of political affiliation, for co-operation "in the interests of depression", was sound by Mr. MacMillan, the successful candidate in Mackenzie.

Democracy Prevails

"The battle of the ballots has decided the principles of democracy should prevail over the wildcrazy blast of communistic ideas," he said. We should all advance ahead for the purpose of supporting all measures which will lend to dissipate the depression."

The results do not affect the government's majority in parliament to any material extent, the government losing only six and—Restigouche-Madawaska. The Liberals retained Yamaska, and gained Mackenzie from the Progressives whose former member Milton M. Campbell had been appointed to the tariff board.

MACKENZIE IN LIBERAL FOLD

Contest Between Winner And C.C.F. Nominee Bitter

Wadena, Sask., Oct. 24.—(CP)—For years under the Progressive banner the constituency of Mackenzie today had reverted to Liberalism.

Following a spirited campaign featured by the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation's initial attempt to win parliamentary honors John A. MacMillan, the Liberal candidate, was victorious in the by-election yesterday in our cornered contest with reports received from 86 of the 104 polls in the riding the vote early today was: S. H. Edgar, Conn, 1185; J. A. MacMillan, Lib. 4657; L. St. G. Stubbs, C.C.F., 3837; L. E. McInnes, U.P., 462.

The unreported polls will not materially affect the standing.

Early in the day it became apparent that the fight would be between Mr. MacMillan and former Judge L. St. George Stubbs of Winnipeg waging the battle on behalf of the C.C.F. The Liberal nominee got away to a flying start rolling up large votes in the urban sections of the constituency and was never headed. Rural polls gave the fiery little purist substantial assistance later in the day.

Conservative and United Front party candidates were totally eclipsed and both lost their deposits.

Mr. MacMillan, on the announcement of his success, appealed to the electors for co-operation regardless of political affiliations.

The by-election was necessitated through the retirement of Milton N. Campbell this year on his appointment to the Tariff Board. Mr. Campbell as a Progressive, had represented Mackenzie since 1921.

The member-elect is a Nova Scotian and came to Wadena in 1915 ..

PHEASANT DAY SOUGHT

PORT ERIE, Oct. 24.—An appeal to the Ontario Government for one open day of pheasant shooting in the Niagara peninsula is expected to follow a gathering of sportsmen district hunters tomorrow night at Niagara Falls, it was stated today. Banned to fields last year, and protests of farmers, a pheasant day was not provided for by the Government.

Soviet Ambassador?

Dame rumor is busy trying to pick an ambassador who will represent the Soviet government in Washington in the event that the forthcoming negotiations should bring about recognition of the Moscow government by the United States. Valery Marchalin, who is acting chairman of the Soviet state planning commission, is considered in some quarters to be the best available man for the post. His availability, however, is doubted in some other quarters, where it is argued that he is badly needed at home because of the good work that he is performing on his present job. Mr. Marchalin visited the U.S. in 1931 at which time he negotiated an important Ford contract for his government.

2 CANDIDATES LOSE DEPOSIT

Conservative And Farmer-Labor Decisively Defeated by Liberal

Edmundston, N.B., Oct. 24 (CP)—It was all over in the Restigouche-Madawaska today—even the shouting—and the result was a Liberal victory for J. E. Michaud, a gain from the Conservatives, and a defeat for Paul L. Dube, Conservative and J. L. G. Annett, Farmer-Labor, that cost both their deposits.

Complete returns from the three-cornered Dominion by-election contest gave the victorious Liberal candidate a majority of 5,823 over Mr. Dube and a majority of 4,173 over all votes cast for the Conservative and Farmer-Labor representatives. The result was Michaud, 11,797; Dube, 5,474 and Annett, 2,149.

The seat returned to Liberal rank after an absence of three years. Max D. Cormier won it for the Conservatives in 1930 with the comparatively slight majority of 548. His death created the vacancy.

Mr. Michaud, barrister at Edmundston, resigned his seat in the provincial legislature in order to contest the by-election. He entered Provincial politics in 1917, gaining victory in four elections and was once Minister without portfolio. Mr. Dube, a locomotive engineer, and Mr. Annett, assessor for the town of Campbellton, were making their first bid in the political field. The Farmer-Labor group was only recently organized in this Province.

Issues of the campaign revolved around policies of the present administration. Mr. Michaud pleaded for an opportunity to take his voice against "injustice" to the Maritimes. Mr. Dube defended Conservative policies and Mr. Annett sought support with a manifesto based on conditions of agricultural and other workers.

TOTAL VOTES NOT KNOWN

Liberal Victory in Yamaska Varies From 51 to 153

By H. Rooney Pelletier
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sherbrooke, Que., Oct. 24.—(CP)—The battle is ended but the clash of arms lingers today.

Reports received by both Liberal and Conservative headquarters here from Yamaska constituency, where Dr. Elie Beauregard was elected to the House of Commons by the combined votes of Yamaska in yesterday's by-election by a majority varying between 51 and 153 but whether the exact majority nor total votes will be known till they are officially announced by the returning officer, Georges Lemaire, probably late today.

And politics-loving Yamaska—with its reputation for bitter political battles and narrow majorities—is aware of the importance attached to an official result of the election particularly in view of the diverging views between the winners majority as reported by Conservative and Liberal headquarters. The former conceded the election on the basis of a 51 vote majority over Mr. Boucher while the Liberals claimed a majority of 153 for their candidate.

Liberals claimed the result a "vindication" of Mr. Boucher and the constituency's reputation "which may have suffered through the Conservative contestation proceedings" while Conservatives, on the words of Hon. Alfred Duranleau, Minister of Marine, declared the victory due to "our opponents" unjust tactics of arousing fears of the depression which no sorry one knows is worldwide and impossible of control by one country alone."

HISTORIC MARITIME UNIVERSITY GUTTED BY FIRE

In striking contrast the statue of Pere LeFebvre, who founded St. Joseph's University in 1864, at Saint John, N.B., the upper left picture depicts the scene of desolation presented where the big administration building of the university was razed by a disastrous fire. Total damage to the university plant is placed at $1,500,000. Upper right picture gives a graphic view of the ruins with the surrounding buildings silhouetted against the new wing which was built in 1925. The building, which was the chapel, library, classrooms and study halls, can be seen with the roof and upper story ablaze. Lower left shows a tragic scene as St. Joseph village residents hunt among the few belongings they saved from their burning homes. Lower right, across the road from the university grounds and which were spared destroyed. They kept vigil as they searched, for they had lost nearly all they possessed. FIVE BANDITS STEAL $32,000

Overpower 14 Persons And Depart Under a Withering Fire

Brainerd, Minn., Oct. 23 (AP)—Five sub-machine gun bandits overpowered 14 persons in the First National Bank in the heart of this city of 10,000 today, shot up the inside and outside of the structure and adjoining buildings and fled with $32,000 in cash.

None of the patrons and employes imprisoned in the washroom and basement room of the bank was hurt, but at least four pedestrians were in the line of fire, while bullets spattered against buildings and parked automobiles as the gun raiders, car roared out of town with weapons spitting fire.

Riding at least three sub-machine guns and automatic pistols, the bandits fired a withering blast as they departed, shattering the big plate window of the bank and spraying the interior with lead.

The bandit car sped out of town toward North Dakota. It bore license plates of that State.

Police were not certain today a resident of Fargo.

RAILS WILL NOT CUT RATE

3.6 Cents Per Mile Rate Remains on Eastern Lines in U. S.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. — Plans for a reduction in the United States base railroad passenger rate of 3.6 cents a mile on December 1 were abandoned Monday by the refusal of the eastern carriers to join the movement.

"The committee of eastern presidents, headed by Frederick E. Williamson, New York Central, head, Col. which had the question of a fare cut under discussion for several weeks, announced: "It had been determined to make no change in the basic rates at this time."

The Eastern United States committee pointed out that, under the passenger rates now in effect in eastern territory, the average rate per passenger per mile in 1933 was three-tenths cents, and on some of the heavy passenger routes as low as 2.66 cents per passenger per mile.

Special mention would be made, the statement added, to attract an increased rail patronage.

Inability of the roads to agree on a reduction was said to have brought on a deep opposition by certain of the New England carriers and to unwillingness of the southern and other eastern roads as to how deeply the base fair should be cut.

Daladier Cabinet Goes Down to Defeat in Asking Balanced Budget

Socialists Lead Attack on Premier Vote Being 329-241

MEMBERS RESIGN

Inflation Inevitable With in Six Weeks Says Daladier

Paris, Oct. 24.—The French Cabinet, headed by Premier Edouard Daladier, was overthrown by a vote of 329 to 241 in the Chamber of Deputies early today, and its members will resign.

Premier Daladier went down to defeat fighting to the last for a balanced budget in order to save the franc. He immediately prepared his resignation.

The Chamber threw the Ministry out, unmoved by Daladier's impassioned warning that failure to strike a budgetary balance meant that inflation is inevitable "within five or six weeks."

The Deputies refused Daladier's proposal to cut the salaries of government functionaries.

Cabinet Withdraws.

Members of the Cabinet withdrew immediately from the Chamber following the vote. They assembled at once to prepare their resignation, thus holding office almost three months — the average life of a French Ministry.

The Chamber session ended in a hubbub, which was reflected on the floor of Paris, where the heaviest guards in many years patrolled.

The vote came on a compromise amendment cutting in half the governmentt's salaries, despite the government's original proposal by slash

Daladier's firm stand that his proposed salary cuts should be retained.

It had been hoped the government's last-minute acceptance of the compromise, which some Deputies called "capitulation", would satisfy the Socialists, but all nimbly Leon Blum, Socialist leader, refused the compromise, thereby drawing a terrific denunciation from Daladier.

Strike Is Threatened.

Pressure from those whose salaries M. Daladier wanted to cut caused the majority of Socialists to throw their weight against the Ministry. Government employees had threatened a demonstration and strikes.

The overthrow of the Ministry came when it failed to make sufficient votes from the Centre to counterbalance the top-heavy Socialist ballot.

Among the men most prominently mentioned to succeed Daladier is Albert Sarraut, Minister of Marine, because he is a Senator, and thus detached from the wrangling in the Chamber.

Camille Chautemps, who was Premier in 1930, also was suggested, but his support of ex-Premier Edouard Herriot in the matter of paying the war debt to the United States last year was likely to prove a handicap, even though the debts are no longer an issue.

Little Change Expected.

It was expected the next Ministry would have much the same political complexion as that of Premier Daladier, and would be more or less temporary in nature until the domestic situation becomes clearer.

M. Herriot is out of the picture because of his illness, as well as his position on debts—on which the Chamber's frame of mind remains unchanged.

It is expected heavy pressure will be placed upon President Lebrun to attempt formation of a concentration government, but many doubt whether the political situation is ripe for such a step. The solution of the problem of participation by the Socialists in the Cabinet is likely to arise again, with a strong contingent of Socialists apparently ready to bolt the party and take Cabinet posts.

Informed circles expect no change in the French stand in favor of continuing on the gold standard, but the new government is sure to seek a balance of the budget by less drastic means than did Premier Daladier, or to balance it partly, claiming a complete balance is not essential.

Debts Not Affected.

The former policy and the policy on United States debts stand unaffected by the vote.

When the Cabinet members resigned from the Chamber they went to the Elysee Palace. They will present their resignations to President Lebrun at the beginning of his customary morning consultations.

Before the fall, M. Daladier broke with the Socialists, ending the Left cartel of Socialists and Radical-Socialists, which had given a precarious support to Cabinets for the past year and a half.

The Socialists split within their own ranks by a vote of 55 to 45 on the government's last-minute compromise.

In his eleventh-hour appeal to stem the defeat of M. Daladier reiterated his plea for France to make sacrifices and balance its budget, declaring:

Is Against Inflation.

"I am against inflation; I am against devalorization of the franc!"

He demanded the vote on the cuts of functionaries' salaries as a "sign of necessity to pronounce for or against, to adopt it or to overthrow the government."

He asserted the franc had been attacked in London and New York, and "even in countries attached to the gold standard."

That French leaders expect the imminent stabilization of the pound sterling and the United States dollar was indicated by Finance Minister Georges Bonnet.

Speaking during a debate, M. Bonnet declared that France could show a willingness to restore liberty of action in the eye of the stabilization of Anglo-Saxon exchanges."

He failed to elaborate on the phrase.

BERLIN, Oct. 24.—(AP)—More than 7,000 Austrians for whom their native country became unbearable have taken refuge in Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Third Reich, according to figures compiled in the foreign office and in the Austrian section of the Nazi Foreign Department.

These refugees include four Austrian cabinet ministers, a score of army in full uniform, 50 privates who deserted similarly, hundreds of former officers and privates who were discharged for being politically undependable and thousands of Austrian Nazis who escaped the Austrian police for allegedly subversive activities.

Theodor Habicht, Chancellor Hitler's Inspector-General for Austria, who was deported from the Austrian capital by Austrian police, is now in Munich directing the activities of the Austrian Nazi refugees.

SNOW STORM CAUSES LOSS TO SERVICES THROUGHOUT EAST

Winter's First Storm Bows Trees, Snaps Wires and Interrupts Services

Linemen Kept Busy by Breaks in Circuits From Storm

4 INCHES SNOW

Farmers Welcome Moisture as Aid to Crops in This Section

The city took toll today of the wreckage and ruin left in the wake of one of the earliest and most damaging snowstorms on local record, which swept in, unheralded, from the west early Tuesday morning, and with a steady pounding of heavy snowflakes, accompanied by high winds, held the city and district in its wintry grip throughout the day until late at night, when it swept off to the east, leaving behind a three-inch depth of snow on the level, to repair damage to the various public utilities of the city and district, working heroically to repair the damage. Trees were caught with the heavy fall on the branches.

Although the majority of residents of the city welcomed the storm, except the annoyance of slush-coated streets, and the small inconvenience caused by the failure of the local electrical systems during the evening, public utility companies of the city and district are faced with a heavy loss.

Miles of telephone and electrical wire in the city and country, carried to the ground on Tuesday afternoon and evening by the heavy snow were being repaired today by the line emergency crews of the various companies. Bell Telephone officials reported a special gang of workers necessary from Kingston to assist them in the work. Between this city and Cobourg eighteen poles of the system were reported down, with a corresponding amount of wire. Long distance lines were reported out of commission and hampered badly while many of the rural lines were also reported inactive even on Wednesday morning.

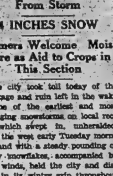
Electrical Trouble

Hours of interruption to Hydro service in some parts of the city caused considerable inconvenience during the early evening owing to a break in the main line on Charles Street, near Bridge, which plunged various sections of the city into a solid gloom. Candles were lighted, candles provided the illuminant for the evening meal. Radios were also cut off. With repair gangs working strenuously to repair the damage in various streets during the evening fresh breaks caused by over-laden tree branches broke the circuit of the wires continued. City police were called into action to guard live Hydro wires which sizzled and crackled on the snowy ground.

Rural Hydro lines reported a number of short interruptions to service, with a long break in the line during the evening out of commission for the time being. Between this city and Stirling, service was suspended for a couple of hours while the main line between here and Trenton was also inactive for a shorter period. Lines near Bancroft village were reported to have suffered greatly, with long trouble being experienced in the district of Smith's Falls.

Canadian National Railway offices reported the suspension of long distance telephone service here for periods, with a number of telegraph wires also down on the system.

Between this city and Toronto a complete line appeared intact early this morning. Rolling stock was not damaged.



Ready with Battery Lights

Doctors at the Belleville General Hospital, with the failure of lights in the institution early in the evening, had only the best, and prepared to handle emergency operation cases in the aid of lights obtained from battery-operating lights kept for emergencies. No operations were reported carried on during this period. Nurses and others carried on their routine of the evening by the light of candles and other emergency illuminants.

Public works department in the city were on the job early this Wednesday morning with extra gangs clearing the streets of the frozen ice and snow and the debris of the

L. H. Bleasdell Collapses in Pool at Peterborough

Peterborough, Ont., Oct. 25 (CP)—Victim of heart disease resulting from war service, L. H. Bleasdell, 48, of Peterborough and formerly of Toronto, died while swimming in the Y.M.C.A. pool here last night. He suffered a heart attack as he climbed from the pool and fell back into the water.

The body was recovered from the pool in a few seconds but resuscitation efforts failed, Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Tong said. He said the cause was to heart disease and an inquest was not necessary. It was said Bleasdell had been an invalid since the war and a victim of his heart.

He went overseas with the 129th Toronto Battalion and saw much active service. He was invalided home with a heart disease and since then spent considerable time in Christie Street Hospital, Toronto. He was a son of the late W. H. Bleasdell, Toronto and grandson of Captain John Bleasdell, first rector of Trenton Anglican Church.

RAYMOND WINS 94TH RENEWAL OF BIG STAKE

Name of Public Choices in Money in The Cambridgeshire

LONG SHOT

Farmer of Crandall, Man. Holds Half Interest in Winning Ticket

Newmarket, England, Oct. 25 The long-shot Raymond Tuesday won the 94th renewal of the Cambridgeshire Stakes, famous autumn handicap, with Denbigh second and Stalky third in what was almost a complete upset. Raymond at 33 to 1 won by two lengths over Denbigh at 30 to 1. Stalky was another three-quarters of a length back.

Raymond, owned by Sir Abe Bailey, was ridden by Nicoll and carried 116 pounds. Denbigh is owned by Sir Ernest Tate. He was ridden by Nevett, carrying 121 pounds. Stalky, owned by Sir Thomas Putman, was ridden by Carr and carried only 97 pounds.

Twenty-six horses ran the mile and six furlongs of the big race, established in 1839. Tartan, Versicle and Bluebell were the last minute withdrawals.

The winner is a three-year-old by Gainsborough out of Hypocrisy.

Among the beaten field were all the public favorites, including His Majesty's Limelight the favorite.

Raymond was well up with the leaders from the start, went to the front at the bushes, a quarter of a mile from home, but held off a challenge from Denbigh in the last few yards to win handily. The time was 1.52.

Limelight showed in front soon after the getaway and remained in contention to the last quarter mile, where he faded back to finish in fourth place. Gino, Alhvial and Young Native were next in order.

Sells Half Interest

Crandall, Man., Oct. 25 (CP)—Ira N. Kirk, 40 year old farmer is richer by $75,000 as a result of Raymond's unexpected win in the Cambridgeshire Stakes at Newmarkets today. Kirk purchased the lucky ticket which he drew. Kirk was the only Canadian to hold a ticket on the winner in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes.

The ticket will pay more than $140,000 but Kirk had sold a half-interest for $75,000 and upon receiving, playing safe when he received a cable from Eire.

The money will come in handy for Mr. Kirk. He is married, has four children and farming has not been a high-paying proposition the past few years. His wife has invalided home with a heart disease and since then spent considerable time in Christie Street Hospital, Toronto. He was a son of the late W. H. Bleasdell, Toronto and grandson of Captain John Bleasdell, first rector of Trenton Anglican Church.

CAMPAIGN IN FULL FORCE

Hitler to Make Whirlwind Aeroplane Tour of Country

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP)—The Nazi campaign for votes in the all-important November 12 plebiscite was thrown into high today.

Chancellor Adolf Hitler, who opened his personal campaign in a speech that brought vociferous cheers from 20,000 at the Sport Palast, started on a whirlwind aeroplane tour of the country.

Slogans popped out on pavements in huge white letters:

"Equality, everybody votes yes November 12."

Pamphlets and handbills were scattered broadcast, reiterating Germany's will to peace and calling on the electorate for an overwhelming vote in support of the Reich's foreign policy.

As in the days before his seizure of power, Hitler is relying chiefly on his personal magnetism to win support for his ideas in the national elections.

But, as demonstrated in his fiery address at the Sport Palast, he is bringing home to the nation with renewed emphasis the government's demand for equality with other nations.

This was the demand placed in the forefront when Dr. Paul Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda, inaugurated the drive for votes several days ago.

196 Per Cent. Co-operation

Nazi propaganda apparatus has so completely usurped all available halls and meeting places to ensure a 100 per cent. victory in the plebiscite that all meetings except those in connection with the campaign have been forbidden until after November 12.

Prominently displayed on billboards besides "Vote Nazi," posters today was the government's appeal to the nation for support on November 12 and the official order for the dissolution of the Reichstag.

How thoughtfully the Nazis arrange the demonstrations to create the impression of the public's manifestation of loyalty was indicated in orders issued to members of the Nazi Labor Units to appear for Hitler's speech at the Sport Palast in full, without their Swastika sleeve ribbons.

Hitler, Goebbels and Hermann Goering, Minister without Portfolio, headed the long list of campaign speakers, the latter scheduled to address 15 rallies, Goering 13.

Fine Weather Says Prophet

"We'll get fine weather after this; winter isn't here yet," stated a prominent weather expert of the city today after surveying the damage of yesterday's storm. "We may get more snow yet, however" amended the expert.

According to the old-time resident, it is not unusual to get as much as a heavy fall of snow so early in the season. Past records show that more has fallen on this city at a much earlier date than this. Tuesday's storm, however was unparalleled in local records for amount and length of fall.

Temperatures during the storm fluctuated up and down the scale of official thermometers. Highs for Tuesday were set at only 28 above while the lowest point was exact freezing.

If you're curious about the amount of snow that actually fell, pump house weather men placed the exact fall as four inches, with a total of 0.87 inches of rainfall.

Warning not to put the overcoat by for a day or so is also given by weathermen who expect colder weather to follow.

SARRAUT TO FORM GOV'T

Accept Invitation of President to Form French Cabinet

Paris, Oct. 26 (CP)— Senator Albert Sarraut today was asked by President Albert Lebrun to form a cabinet and agreed to undertake the task.

The Premier-designate of France, Albert Sarraut, is a colorful fighting figure, a man who holds no regard as an orator, but whose actions speak for him.

Now 61 years old, he bears vigorously the decoration of his country for gallantry in battle and the scar of a wound received in a personal duel.

DRIVING DANGEROUS DURING THE STORM

Not a single automobile accident in this district was reported to the Belleville police or the Provincial Police during or following Tuesday's severe weather and sleet storm. Although the highways leading in all directions from Belleville were in a rather treacherous condition during the storm the motorists, who were forced to travel during the blinding storm, apparently used every precaution.

With the storm raging down out of the north-east, the east bound traffic on Highway No. 2 proved the most threatening as the windshields of motors proceeding in an easterly direction became literally covered with a thick covering of ice and sleet. West bound motor traffic was not hampered to the same degree though snow and ice forming on the windshields.

Although considerable snow fell on the highways were in no way blocked, as the continuous traffic kept clear pathways in both directions of travel. The traffic officers patrolled the highways for late into the night and reported that travel was quite safe. The motorists proceeded in a careful manner. No delays of a drastic nature were reported by bus and transport lines north, south, east or west bound from Belleville owing to the storm.

Emphatic Demonstration of Strength as Markets Develop Broad Upswing

After Early Disappointment at Price of Gold Newly-Mined

WHEAT UP 2½ CENTS

Gold Stocks Again in Lead With Nickel And Noranda

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—A broad upswing finally developed in commodities and equities today, after fleeting traces of disappointment in the markets at the conservative increase in the first gold price to be announced by the RFC.

Grains rushed up in the Chicago pit, with wheat and rye registering advances of 3 1-2 to 4 cents a bushel, corn and oats 3 cents and more. Cotton advanced more than $1 a bale at New York, reacted, then pushed up again.

The spot silver price at New York was boosted 1 1-8 cents an ounce to 38 3-8 cents, and copper advanced 1-2 cent to 8 1-2 cents a pound.

Wheat Futures

Winnipeg, Oct. 25 (CP)—Wheat futures prices marked up a hurricane social gain of 2 1-2 cents on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today as heavy buying bolstered the market.

Toronto, Oct. 25 (CP)—After two days of sharp advances industrial and mining shares hesitated a little in the early session this morning to get their bearings, although the signs were definitely more active on the upside with the U.S. dollar down and higher gold prices posted in both London and Washington. At noon, price gains on both boards were slightly under the last close but were again in a firming trend by the time the Standard Exchange gold shares took the lead again at the opening and moved ahead, followed by Nickel and Noranda in the base metal group.

Distillery stocks were the most active issue on the Toronto Exchange and the group had recessions up to two points at the end of the first hour but these were wholly recovered before noon.

SPECIAL PROGRAM HAD TO BE POSTPONED

Last night's special programme to be presented at the regular meeting of the local council of the Knights of Columbus No. 1006 had to be postponed owing to the failure of electric power, that was caused throughout the city following the heavy snow storm, that ravaged locally yesterday.

Although the programme was dispensed with an equally interesting programme was presented, by candle light, when the Rev. Dean O'Sullivan of Petersboro spoke to the members present of "Canadian History." The address was highly enjoyed by those present while Monsignor Nicholson in reply to the address spoke briefly to the subject. The programme to have been given last night included high class boxing bouts that had been arranged by Knight Maurice Callaghan, while Lecturer Frank Donenico prepared a humorous programme, that was to have been presented.

During the evening, however, it was announced that a billiard tournament, sponsored by the Council, would be shortly inaugurated. The tournament is in charge of Bert McQuade and will commence early next week with the club championship being at stake.

With the resumption of electric power a social evening concluded an interesting event.

Hundreds Celebrate Sixtieth Anniversary of Foundation of Holloway Street Church

Original Members of Congregation Are Present

HISTORY IS TOLD

Turned into a large banqueting hall when upwards of four hundred persons sat down to banquet upon chickens, meats, and every other kind of viands and pastry, Holloway Street United Church parlors were on Tuesday evening, the scene of the diamond jubilee dinner to celebrate the sixty years since the establishment of the congregation. Here in the spacious school auditorium they ate with some two hundred attended the opening services in the first West Bellerville Church, a small frame structure opened with gala autumnal sun, celebrated the passage of the years which have rolled over Holloway Street since it looked upon the present even with its distress as kindly in the bounty which Providence has given in the harvest.

No more inclement night even in the depth of winter, could have faced the pioneers of Holloway through the sloppy snow, brushing against bushes bowed by the wicked winter the weight of watery snow, and under wires which might at a moment snap under the weight of limbs of trees handing over their load of snow, than that which greeted the already overburdened wires. But even with this handicap, the church was filled at six o'clock as the announcement was made that the first tables were prepared.

60 Candles, Sure

Arranged around and before a central table on the platform, at which sat the invited guests, including some of those who had attended the opening of the church two generations ago, and on which stood a birthday cake bearing sixty candles, Rev. Harold E. Neal, the minister of the church, opened the supper with a few words on the bounties of harvest and of the dinner and the occasion. He is a member of the original teaching staff of the Sunday School, Mrs. J. S. Chilcott.

The ladies of the congregation who had arranged the banquet, had reason to be proud of the showing as the people filed in and were seated at the board.

Candles and flowers aided in the tabled decoration which the viands gave to the scene. Here was fowl and chicken, meats and salads, and arrayed with the finest confectionery that Holloway Street congregation's cooks, in salads and pastries of Holloway Street, could turn fruits, and in all a bumper meal, showing the districts richness, in the products of the farm and garden. Here the first of the guests to be served, the original charter quarters of an hour of regaling by the guests were spent in conversation, meanwhile in the church parlors the organization of the church was completed. Mr. Templar, rendered numbers. The musical entertainment continued on the platform at till eight when the last banquetter had left the table.

Rev. Harold B. Neal assumed the duties of the program chair, and invited to the platform Mayor G. O. Tice, representing the city, Mayor W. C. Mikel, Reeve of Sidney, John Street United Church, Rev. Mr. Semple and Mr. Fred D. Deacon, representing Bridge Street United, and Mrs. J. Laughlin, whose father, the Rev. Joseph Locke, was pastor of West Bellerville when the church became a separate church.

Periods of Darkness

There were several interruptions by reason of electric disturbance from the lights between the halls, in spite of the darkness unrelieved except for the dim light which seeped through the stained windows of the church, the people were diquietly awaiting the resumption of the program. Mr. Neal referred to the loyalty of the people who dared the storm on Sunday and on Tuesday night, and Mayor Tice made mention of the loyalty of our people in every way, from the founding obligations of the church on this occasion, to the present day fidelity in connection with this sixtieth anniversary.

"To you Mr. Neal and to your congregation as the Mayor of Bellerville, I bring my heartiest anniversary greetings," stated Mayor Tice. "I have been asked to say on your fine church building, and on the prosperity which you are enjoying especially under the pastorate of Mr. Neal. I had the pleasure and opportunity him to the city relief board for two years and we realize how important the ministrance has been to us in the past two winters, Mrs. Latimer, daughter of the minister of the church, from 1878 on, five years after the opening of the first church, brought recollections of other day, as she told how she had heard her father, the Rev. Joseph Locke, and her mother speak of the three years they had spent in West Bellerville, as among the happiest in their lives. They often mentioned old names associated with the church, the "Wicket" family, James Wicket, the father having such faith in the people of West Bellerville as founders of the church." Another happy instance was Mrs. Latimer's reference to the recalled her on the occasion of the visit of her mother, to the church during the pastorate of the Rev. A. R. Sanderson, the minister had the congregation sing and Mr. Philip Harrison, a member in 1876, who pumped the organ for two years.

Zeal Counts

Magistrate Mikel, speaking in place of Rev. Robert Hall of John Street Church, brought greetings from the sister congregation. "What is the spirit of this church which is important. It counts for a great deal in this community. Without that, your efforts and struggle in the past to bring this congregation, is the teacher of the day (a teacher to the children we look up) and to do something for this community," the magistrate went on.

The changed position of the child today was remarked by Mr. Mikel. "No water to carry, no chores to do, no cow, to milk, children must be in ball games and watch cheers in the old days everybody played ball, there were no spectators. I hope we can find a way to get the boys busy in Bellerville. I have been trying to think out a plan whereby the fifteen hundred boys of Bellerville may be organized into a Board of Trade so that they may learn to be useful in the days to come which are not so far ahead when they shall take over the duties of their fathers. They must learn how to conduct public business, how to conduct the meetings of boards of education, mock trials, and parliament.

As the worthy successor of James Ross, the first superintendent who was in charge in the year 1873, Mr. James Hudgins was introduced to the gathering and made a few references to the part the school played in the church and communal life.

At the close in the church parlors the birthday cake was offered in sections to those anxious to partake of this memento of the occasion.

Rev. Mr. Neal read a letter to the work of the women's organization in preparing the anthal banquet.

The Builders

Mr. Neal mentioned the part that Mr. James Wicket took in the erection of the church, and Mr. Ross contracting for the brick work and the plastering. Mrs. Sinclair, daughter of James Wickett, long a member of the congregation, had written Mr. Neal on the occasion expressing the pleasure she would have had to be present, but she regretted she could not come. Mr. Neal also welcomed Mrs. Vermilyea, a daughter of the late Lewis Ross, one of the contractors, who had charge of the carpenter work in the church. Then the inimitable Mrs. Hudgins gave a reading to the work in the church of her father. They numbered among members from the very inception of the congregation, and as a faithful leader for over forty years. "Illness prevents his attendance," remarked Mr. Neal, "but he is present in spirit with him God's blessing." Referring to Mrs. Hudgins, Mrs. Woodley, who at the age of over eighty years, was unable to attend on account of the weather. "We wish her every blessing."

Mr. Neal, in a sense, the founda-tion of the building, offered congratulations to those anxious to partake of this memento of the occasion.

BRONCHITIS
Bronchitis is a catarrhal condition of the bronchial tubes. It may be acute or chronic and is accompanied by a cough, difficulty in breathing, and a sense of constriction in the chest. Because of the increased mucus a quite common with bronchitis owing to the cough.

In bronchitis we find that many of the bronchial tubes with nerve impulses are subject to pressure and it is owing to this why some people are subject to bronchitis and others are not. Once the pressure is removed from the nerves the bronchial tubes become normal.

MISS ANN GAUTHIER, TRENTON, WINS CAR

Varsity Student Lucky Holder at Newman Alumni Ticket

"I guess I am just awfully lucky!"

That is the way Miss Ann Gauthier, second-year student of architecture at the University of Toronto, explains her being the winner of a Pontiac Sixth car.

Miss Gauthier, who is in residence at Loretta College, "could hardly believe it" when she heard her number called at the Newman Harvest Festival dance at the Royal York Hotel Garden on Monday evening. She said: "I cannot realize that I must be deceiving her—and then I heard her say, 'No, you're not the truth!'

Student of architecture, Miss Gauthier admits that she is much interested in the graceful lines of the car which has come to her on the wings of a twenty-five cent raffle ticket.

Will she drive it. If course she will, and the lucky girl intends to be at home in Trenton—and that right soon.

Has she ever had a car before? Well not of her own; but she can drive a car! Oh yes! And she knows quite a lot about the mechanism of a car, and before she arrived in Toronto Newman Harvest Festival Committee had a number rides so she will know a lot more. She purposes studying the mechanism—actual and on the builders' plans—this young woman who has visions of building not only fine homes but graceful and stately churches. The automobile, perhaps may have come her way so'she may the better study her profession—for although the girls at Loretta are not limited as her look that none of them can think of much else but the car and that it will help her see the finest buildings within motoring distance, and she is quite confident that the combination of the two will have an elevating influence on her architectural and artistic bent, but the fact is she is so glad and so excited at winning the Pontiac that she really, she just doesn't think to say what she will do—because it is all so wonderful that no one never knows.

ERADICATE INCURABLES IS NAZI AIM

JAMES STENBOUSE

Because his three-year-old son was mentally unbalanced, James Stalbosen, prominent farmer of Clermont, Q., admitted the murder of the boy as a self-ascribed "act of safety," for which he was acquitted of any criminal blame by a grand jury.

Three conditions attached to the proposed eradication of incurables by German doctors, a writer says, must demand that his misery be ended; second, two official doctors must testify that he has an incurable ailment; third, the fatal drug must be administered by a qualified physician.

A proposal to authorize physicians to end the sufferings of persons incurably ill, through the practice of euthanasia has been advanced by the German ministry of justice in a detailed memorandum explaining what would surround his three German penal code. The memorandum, which lacks the force of forcing law, is expected to bring emphatic opposition from the church.

The proposal recalls numerous instances of so-called "mercy killings", although they may be in the minds of many.

James Stenhouse, Clermont, Ohio, farmer, killed his three-year-old son because he was suffering from an incurable mental ailment. He was acquitted by a grand jury.

ALL women at one period of their lives need strengthening tonic. Read what Mrs. Elizabeth Sellers of 41 Bishop St., Toronto, says: "I suffered from woman's trouble following my confinement and was very bad. I had an awful pain in my back. Then my days that I was to do my usual round. I did not rest well at night, could hardly eat a thing, and my complexion became very pale. I had taken medicine but it did not help me. Friends recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I got them and after using them for a short time I felt better in every way, my appetite improved, the pain in my head and that heavy ache in my back disappeared."

WHAT A PLACE TO BE ON HALLOWE'EN!

Here is a nice place to be working on All Hallow's Eve. This little girl is the belle of pumpkins and decorating Hallowe'en—reproductions, of course, for medical institutions. It is not true that these skulls leave their places on Hallowe'en to perpetrate mischief dances in some dark graveyard.

DUNLOP RUBBER COMPANY HEAD THINKS FUTURE BRIGHT

Sir John George Beharrell, Managing Director, Pays Visit To Canada

SCIENTIFIC ADVANCE

Declares Development of Dunlop Cellular Latex is Notable Step

Tire-builder to speed kings of the world, head of the largest growers of rubber in the British Empire, Sir John George Beharrell, D.S.O., managing director of the Dunlop Rubber Company, England, was a visitor in Toronto recently, bringing to his associated company, the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Goods Company, Limited, of this city, the news that Dunlop was faring better in world markets today than at any time in the company's history.

Sir John, who is also a director of the Canadian company, and a director of Imperial Airways Limited, president of the Federation of British Industries, and president of the Institute of the Rubber Industry, was asked how the Dunlop Company was faring in world markets. "Today we are considerably," replied Sir John. "Dunlop is today enjoying a greater prestige as the world potential than ever in its history."

Boss Big Fellers

Sir John in the course of a conversation on the rubber industry, spoke of many interesting developments, outstanding among which was the development of the new cellular latex products in the past two years. This Sir John characterized as "unquestionably the most important development in the rubber industry in the past twenty years." Of this development, which began in Dunlop laboratories in Canada, a whole new industry has arisen—an industry in which Canada has "an enormous developing coming".

This new material, christened Dunlopfil, expressed in Sir John's words, is a "new type of cushioning product possessing advantages of softness, coolness and cleanliness heretofore obtainable." In England, Sir John pointed out, this new material had already been adopted as standard seat-cushion equipment on two of England's highest grade cars. Rumber seat cushions, in the same English cars, he said, were using the new material on certain models. The London Overland Omnibus Company had recently ordered 1,000 seats for their buses, and the railways were making increasing use of it.

Tremendous Spread

Describing briefly the magnitude of the Dunlop organization, Sir John observed that Dunlop had become the largest growers of rubber in the British Empire, while it operated, in Malaya, Africa and the largest cotton factory devoted to the making of cotton fabric for tires in the British Empire. Today a crop of around 100,000 acres of rubber trees in Malaya alone is Dunlop's bearing now, and all of which would be produced by them.

"Then," continued Sir John, "we maintain a system of liaison which closely links the various Dunlop factories all over the world. This enables us to keep in touch with the facts about tires and other rubber products that are being researched, division, which scried them out, added to them and passed them on. Such was the case with the Canadian organization latest that Dunlop, with its world-wide experience based on by holders of world's speed records in both Canada and the United States," said Sir John, "they had fewer changes and less risk to life". Sir John, who succeeded Sir Harold Hartley as president of the Institute of the Rubber Industry, was awarded the D.S.O. in 1917, and was knighted in 1919. At one time he was Associate Director of the Eastern Railway as assistant to the general manager. He was Director of Statistics and Requirements, Ministry of Munitions, Assistant Director-General of Transportation, France; Assistant Director-General of Transportation, France; Assistant Director-General of Transportation, War Office, holding the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He was Director of Admiralty, and Director General of Finance and Statistics, Ministry of Transport.

WESTERNIZING THE EAST

The Orient is getting a good taste of the west and such is the quality of western progress that once it is tasted, it can never be quite forgotten. The Oriental who tastes western invention eats as it were the lotus flower and while he does not forget his past he cannot forget the occidental advantages of saving of time and labor and so on.

It is stated that Palestine is to have the largest automobile bus in the world for use in desert travel. This will probably take away romantic musings on the Arabian sands of the desert which are supposed not to grow cold, all that mooning about love, in the modern ballad, but the fact is that even the Oriental who loves his bards, once he uses a bus, will never trust again to the fleetfooted horses of the deserts. Modernization of Palestine is proceeding apace with the development of huge hydro electric plants.

The east is in a peculiar position. The easterner will probably in the long run give up his dresses for the western style. Now the westerner came to his dress by slow gradation through the centuries as fitting the social and economic changes of the west. But while eastern countries are being socially, economically and industrially affected by the west, their change to western costume is making much more rapid progress. Here and there stands a Gandhi to stem the advance but it would appear as if at the last the west will dominate the east with its inventions, its materialism, and its dress, thereby speeding up the development of the Orient along by gigantic strides in a few years which would have taken centuries if the east were left to itself.

But the soul of the east will probably resist the west to the last. And it will probably be well for there is in the Oriental something which is attractive in its devotion and its idealism, backward though the east be socially and religiously.

Would the development of the west have been without the Oriental influence emanating from Palestine? What would be the development of the east unaffected by the west? No one can tell, for the one did not happen and the other will not.

THE DOLE

This truly is a world of flux. Even the dole, thought by many to have fastened itself upon England and given credit by others as having saved the nation from financial disaster and mighty labor disturbances, may have to pay its own way, according to the Montreal Star. It is planned under a new bill now considered by the British Commons, to remove the unemployed person idle for thirteen weeks from the dole instead of allowing him to draw on it for twenty-six. He will be passed on to the unemployment assistance committees.

Commenting upon this change the Montreal newspaper says that this means the dole will be confined to those occasionally unemployed. The proposed scheme will remove one and a third millions at least from the lists as soon as approved. Chronic cases will be handled by the unemployment assistance committees while the cases of poor persons unlikely to work again through physical disabilities, will be handled by poor relief.

The dole has proven expensive and the change would lift a heavy burden from the shoulders of the government, though placing a load on the local authorities. Probably British authorities believe that in throwing back a load of the cost upon the local boards, they will be readily benefiting the country and in the final analysis lowering the total of persons receiving assistance.

In Canada the effort has been at work to finding a working system to handle the unemployment problem. Once discarded, relief by work is again in force. That this will be the final stage no one believes unless the load is preternaturally lifted, a situation which is not expected even with recovery making rapid progress.

Sudbury reports show that out of 646 families on relief only eight heads of families responded to a call to labor. In this Anglo-Saxon centre of Belleville such an unusual thing could not happen. Anyone who doubts the truth of this statement should see the anxiety which the men show in their eagerness to go to work.

IN GAINING YOU

What have I gained in gaining you?
An earth more fair, a sky more blue,
A glorious promise with each dawn,
A star of hope when day is gone,
An armor for my weary breast
That gives me peace, that gives me rest,
A universe grown strangely sweet,
A self more balanced and complete.

Since you have come, what have I gained?
A life grown purer, and unstained
By any falsehood, any fear,
A sense of heaven very near;
A quickened insight into hearts
Pierced through by sorrow's flying darts
A knowledge of my brother's need,
And love and pity for my creed!

ADVICE TO BELLEVILLE HUNTERS, particularly those who frequent the Wesleymkoon Lake district — when treed by wolves or a big, bad, bull moose, don't stop to argue the question, just grab the biggest and best tree handy and shin up out of reach. Then send a wireless message to Jim Curran at the Soo who says Canadian wild animals will not attack man, asking him what to do about it, and if it'll be all right to come down in the morning.

RADIO IS USED A LOT in the United States by the government to explain new phases of public policy. The Hoover administration used it, and the Roosevelt administration is using it more, particularly now when such radical departures are being made from standard policy of administration. This is good policy, for whether the majority of citizens listen in or not they feel that they are being consulted, and if they do not listen in at night they can read the message in the morning papers.

The following extracts from letters received by the Ministry of Pensions are taken from "Scalpel, Sword and Stretcher" by Col. Robert J. Blackham, D.D.M.S., Ninth Army Corps in France.

"Sir—You have changed my left leg into my right arm; will it make any difference to my pension."

"Sir—We have received yours truly. I served in Ireland and Isle of Wight from 1915 to 1916 in answer to your request."

"Sir—If I don't get either a pension or work my wife will have to go on the streets and lead an immoral life."

"Sir—You ask me if I was born in Wedlock; no, I was born in a Kentish town."

"Sir—In accordance with instructions at the Klink (Clinc) I have had fever and ague enclosed in an envelope.

"Sir—I have been in bed three weeks with Dr. Brown and I don't feel any better, can I try Dr. Smith?"

"Sir—Just a few lines to say owing to delay in sending my pension we have not a morsel of food in the house. Hoping you are the same."

"Sir—Any further inflammatin you can give me about my bad leg would be deprecated."

The visitor with the hooked nose, beady eyes and profusion of jewellery sat in the lounge of the Brighton Hotel while a page boy passed through with a telegram on a salver, after the manner of his kind intoning "Mis-ter Mac-pher-son!" Mis-ter Mac-pher-son!"

Apparently no visitor wished to claim the missive until the beady eyed one roused himself sufficiently to inquire: "Yot initial is id?"

IS BEAUTY A HANDICAP TO WORKING GIRL?

Situation Defined in Regard to Homely And Beautiful Girls

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Common gossip has it that the pretty girl who must needs earn her own livelihood in an office or factory, in fact anywhere, is nearly always subjected to indignities that make her comeliness of face and figure a distinct handicap rather than an asset.

That a certain justification exists for such opinion cannot be denied. Surely places exist in all the fields of business where the entire attention of the day is not given over only to commerce and where flirtations on the part of the male employees as well as employers, even, deliberate love-making, are common occurrences.

Indeed, it may be admitted that there are executives who deliberately hire only good-looking female help because they intend to make the future relationship between them social. And every now and then, of course, a public scandal brings to light the circumstances that have prospered in business unions.

On the other hand, it may be said in defence of employers that many refuse under any circumstances to employ a beautiful girl for the very reason that they desire to avoid possible danger.

Such men definitely prefer girls whom nature has not blessed with good looks. I have heard such men claim that homely women are more efficient because they are not as ear-conscious as the pretty ones. They make the same claim for women past thirty-five.

The average girl goes to work, of course, because she has to. Rather she is compelled to support herself, or she goes to help with the family budget, or both. Usually her purposes are serious, namely to make a living until such time as the proverbial "right man" happens along and she is led to the altar.

A certain type of girl exists, nevertheless, whose idea in getting a job is not so altruistic or so serious. Such a young person considers the office, let us say, as a convenient place to meet men. She it is, too, who surveys her personal appearance with critical eyes and often selects one of them as her quarry, whether he happens already to be married or not. The girl I have in mind is the familiar "gold-digger" variety less model. It is the particular type which, although in the minority, gives all pretty girls a bad name, so to speak. It is the girl seeking, sensuous kind of girl who is responsible for the idea that beauty is a handicap, when a decent young woman wants to make a living and at the same time retain her self-respect.

Further to refute this rather catty idea let it be pointed out, that, in the last analysis, in business man thinks more of his pocketbook than he does of his amours. Surely no penible man is going to risk wrecking his own business by employes when more vital matters are at stake in the conduct of his business. If a man has any sense at all, he knows that the kind of girl who will respond to his advances at once ceases to be useful in her work.

What is more—and this, it seems to me, is the crux of the whole pretty girl problem—it is always and invariably up to the girl herself whether or not she resists any advances an employer may make.

Even if her beauty is well-nigh irresistible and her boss cannot fight off its influence, neither her virtue nor her self-esteem need ever be in danger. For after all, a woman, pretty or a pretty one—can make any man behave just about as she wants him to believe.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

For a good skin the diet must be carefully watched. Whatever, in particular, should realize that variety in food is important, as it is the adequate daily elimination of the residues of digestion. Fresh fruits and plenty of greens are beauty aids. Starchy and sugary foods make the skin grow coarse and oily in excess. Besides, from one to two quarts of water, drunk between meals, is invaluable.

Pitting One Child Against Another Not Best Says Inspector

London, Oct. 25—While the discontinuance of class standing in public schools, and abolition of the marks for each subject formerly given on report cards, announced Principal Inspector-Administrator Whebable at the teachers' convention is as yet an experiment, according to Mr. Wheable, that official was confident that it would prove its worth, and remain as a fixture.

"Much depends on how the parents react," Mr. Wheable said, pointing out that it remains to be seen whether the newer idea will enable the teacher has occasion to inform the parent of any factor in the child's work that needs more attention, the teacher will make a fuller report on it.

VRGO LAURILIA ACQUITTED OF CHARGE LAID

Held For Murder of Fred McLaren, Cavan Twp. Farmer

BENEFIT OF DOUBT

Identification of Articles Not Sufficient For Jury

Oshawa, Oct. 25—Tryo Laurilia, Finnish translator, was acquitted of the murder of Fred McLaren, 38-year-old Cavan township farmer, whose frozen body was found in his shack last February with the head battered.

"Prisoner, the jury has taken a merciful view of your case," said Mr. Justice J. M. McEvoy when the jury had returned its verdict. "However right the verdict may be, you know. Perhaps, later on, seclusion they have realized you are a stranger in a strange land, and the desire to show you and the world at large we try to deal out even-handed justice to every one within our borders."

He was announced later Laurila would be held pending deportation proceedings.

Jury Deliberates

Shirting to seclusion late in the afternoon the jury began its task of considering evidence given by a long list of witnesses which was read by A. J. Skeans that the Crown had failed to link Laurila's statement with the Finnish prisoner; W. B. Horkins' finding of McLaren's body on which the prosecution sought conviction; and the finding subsequently of a blood-stained mitt.

"The twelve of you must agree," his Lordship told the jury. "Whatever evidence as to the identification card taken from the prisoner, the Crown says belonged to McLaren, had been in the purse he assumed he carried on his person when the farmer fell, he had battered in.

It had been found, the Crown said, the fragment or identification card was in the handwriting of McLaren's name, that letters and numerals on it represented the location of farms in the district.

"Examine that carefully; is that McLaren's identification card as all?"

Reliability of Witnesses

One witness, Wegman, had said the prisoner was at his shack on certain days. If that was so, he could not be in Toronto on the same days. It was for the jury to consider whether the Finnish witness could be relied upon and the prisoner because of their national ity.

"Did the prisoner have in mind on January 29 an intention to go back to Toronto, return to Cavan and then go back to Toronto?" was another question for the jury to ask the prisoner, if he intended to commit a murder. Is it likely that he will tell these people in Toronto that he was going to get money if he had to kill to get it? Is that likely? You would say that?

Then, one witness had related that the accused told him of knocking a man on the head with a club in his watch. Would any decent man whose word was credible, listen to this story and not tell the police? Is it likely that

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)
(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A colorful life is forecast for the season as color becomes more and more important in mode. Typical of the new trend is a double-breasted suit of soft, blue diagonal woolen with a coral blouse. Blouse, too, is worn with a matching top coat trimmed with a huge pouch collar of beaver. There is also a beaver muff.

The winner for the informal evening costume is that of burnt-black satin with a waistcoat blouse of white satin having a double-breasted effect marked by rhinestone and black enamel buttons. The long sleeves of the jacket are finished with matching rhinestone and enamel links.

Ride the wrist with Fur trimming. That seems to be the rule for many of the new gloves. A new suede in greasy-gray hairy woolen has a collar trim of narrow bands of Persian lamb while the cuffs of the sleeves sport enormous gauntlets of the fur.

Never too many shoes in the wardrobe, since the mo'e shoes one has, the less likely they are to wear out. A most useful shoe is in brown patent, a one-button pump with cut outs at the side fastening. The toe and the throat are accented by an ascot, edging in gilt piping.

What else is the nicest evening costume without the right handbag? A delightful new bag is of white and gold brocade, its color scheme carried out in the scalloped flap which is of filagree gold with pearls arranged in latticed effect.

You will find purple velvet becoming to almost every type, if the purple is dull and dark. A new dinner dress, in this medium has sleeve sections and bodice in matching lace. There is a draped neckline with flowers of purple velvet and lace and a twisted girdle of velvet.

Mode Turns to Heavier Eyebrows

Use The Tweezers, But Only in Interest of Facial Harmony

(By Helen Follett)

Thread-like eyebrows or no eyebrows at all are old stuff. When will the pretty dollies find out about that? They have but to size up the beautiful gazellas of the silver screen, who are getting back to the normal patterns. Eyebrows are revered but not completely annihilated. Not heavy of course, just clean lambs' wool.

Brushing, no more than shampooing, will injure a dermanedk wave. What it does, of course, is to demolish the pattern of the finger waves; the curve quality is there just the same.

If brushing is out of the question, give your hair the air. Fluff up with the fingers, give the scalp a five-minute friction. A little brilliantine on the scalp won't make the wave stringy, and it will loosen dandruff. As a dressing for the wave itself, brilliantine is excellent.

More than one woman has found that the pretty dress which hasn't been worn for several monules can't be wriggled into without bursting the seams. She knows then, what she has suspected, that the scales are telling a tragic story. She shouldn't let out the seams, she should decide to eat sparingly of the good things of the table.

If, for a term of three months, she will cut sweets, fats and starches down to the limit, that lovely frock can be worn again. She can eat her fill of lean meat, fish, poultry, green vegetables, green salads, rye bread and fruits. They won't put fat on her ribs.

Advice to the Lovelorn

(By Beatrice Fairfax)
(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

He's 13 Years Older and Married

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Should any single girl keep "steady" company with a married man? A very dear girl friend of mine has been keeping steady company on the sly with a married man for the last three years. She is only 20, and her boy friend is 33 years her senior. Although he claims he loves her, he makes no attempt to gain his freedom, but just keeps stringing her along. Does he love her? Or does he just care for her as a playmate? Thank you.

A.

To waste one's youth and sweetness on this type of love affair is like throwing our earnings out the top storey window for the full of seeing how valuable poverty can make us in a given time. If the man cared at all he would have made some attempt to gain his freedom and put an end to a situation that puts her in such an equivocal position.

Even if he did this, it's questionable if they'd be happy. An older man, to make a young girl happy, has to have qualities which the gentleman seems to lack. Among them is unselfishness, and surely he tells far short of that here.

So many young girls are flattered by the attention of married men, instead of realizing they're giving all and getting nothing in return. The trouble is that when a girl realizes this she's pretty well passed to have been a married man's playmate, which is a doubtful distinction.

Why Don't "Some People" Mind Their Own Business

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and very much in love with a man of 34. He loves me, too, for he has often told me so. You know how some people get to talking. Well, they have been talking about us. They say he is too old for me. Now he wants me to forget him, but I can't. My mother says I'd better approve of the man. Please give me some advice. Thank you.

Lonely

Why should you give up a man you love, and of whom your parents approve, because gossipy outsiders take it upon themselves to talk? It positively none of their business. If there is no moral objection than the difference of ages you mention, go ahead and marry him.

He Rebels Against "No Dates" With Others

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a boy of 20 and like a widow a bit younger. She's very high-handed and will only grant me an occasional date. She let me call when her other friend is away, but she takes very good care of events. Then to tease her I began to go with a young girl who grew to like her very nearly as well as the widow. She treats me almost as mean, breaking dates at the last moment and sending word she's out when I know she's in. Now I've given her some mighty good presents.

Both these girls are nice. I'm not going with other girls and are raving when I see them. Do you feel that I'll never bother with any more women. What's become of the girls of the type my mother represented? I'm a little bit lame and talk slowly, that's all. Please help me. Sad.

Can you figure out my bad luck?

Your bad luck, my dear man, is because you've been too good to a couple of thoroughly selfish women. They've been working you for an easy mark. Drop them both, and when they call you up, as they will undoubtedly when they see that gifts are growing scarce, tell them you have stopped playing Santa Claus.

The loneliness of recent girls in a strange city is appalling. Why not try to get acquainted with some of them. Church, community centres, girls' clubs, have dances and other social activities, there is properly introduced young man is always welcome. In fact, one of the troubles is lack of men. Don't lose any more time before going enrolling on their list of bachelors.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)
(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Introductions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When approaching the receiving line at a large social function, what is the proper course of procedure?

2. When a lady and gentleman are received together, or two ladies for that matter, does the one to be received first introduce her companion to the first hostess in line, and each hostess in turn repeat the name all down the receiving line? Or, if one is announced, does one simply shake hands and not bother to introduce one's companion.

3. Should one shake hands with everyone in the receiving line or simply bow? If a gentleman, I believe he bows only? If a lady, should she shake hands?

4. If I, accompanied by two or three friends, meet a friend who is accompanied by strangers, should I, after being introduced to my friends to me, introduce them to us, and I to mine, introduce my friend to them? Does it matter, or is there some special rule?

Interested

1. The arriving guest greets the members of the receiving line in order, that is, beginning with the first one in the line. If this first member of the receiving-line is busy with another guest, we should wait until this conversation is finished and then greet this member instead of going to the next member of the line while she is talking. I mention this especially, since I have seen many people do this incorrectly.

2. We should introduce first the person who is with us. This is the greatest help we can do, and makes the receiving much easier for all concerned. This means, too, that the co-hostess will make the introductions to the "receiver" standing next to her. And, by the way, we should say the names very distinctly.

3. Usually the hostesses offer their hands to shake hands with every guest as he or she arrives. Just as you say, a bow is quite correct.

4. It doesn't matter who makes the introductions, so long as they are made. A socially alert person will, when spontaneously asked, then there will be no awkward wait so that the determination is made as to who the "proper" person to make the introduction. The important thing is that they be made.

"Sweet Girl Graduate"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. How soon before graduation should the announcements or invitations be mailed?

2. Is it necessary to mail a note of thanks for gifts, even if the giver lives next door?

3. Please me a form for the "thank you" note?

Sweet Girl Graduate

1. Graduation invitations should be mailed about two weeks before the date set for graduation.

2. Yes.

3. Something like this, perhaps:

Dear Mary;

How very kind of you to make me so happy by your thoughtfulness about my graduation! You are such a perfect friend. . . . always doing the beautiful things that make one realize how precious and generous your friendship is. Thank you a million times.

The pen and pencil set is a beauty. I cannot tell you how many times I have wished for one, but I never dreamed of having such a perfect one. It will always be a joy to me, and every time I use it much of course will be often. I shall sing a song of thanksgiving for you! Mother will tell you how anxious I have been of my friends who owned a set.

Best wishes, and deepest thanks and appreciation. Do come to my graduation. . . . won't you? . . . I'm waiting you the invitation.

Devotedly yours,

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

Beauty .... By Helen Jameson

Directions For The Home Manicure

Since the left hand seems not to know what it is doing when it manicures the right one, it's rather senseless to say that the home manicure can be as successful as the one given by a professional. But there are occasions when the time can be spent trot-trotting to the beauty-torium, yet something must be done to make the corral talons more presentable.

Provide yourself, beauty quoter, with a long, sharp, flexible file, a pair of curved scissors an orange-wood stick, some bleeding files of emery board, a cuticle cream, a small bottle of peroxide, some powdered pumice stone and a polish. The file and scissors must be of high grade steel. Cheap ones are a total loss and a strain on the disposition.

File the nails. The metal file will leave some ragged underskin, but that is to be removed later.

Soak the hands for several minutes in warm soap suds and use the nail brush. Run the orange-wood stick under the eaves, forming an even line. Use the bevelled file to cut off ragged bits of cuticle. Be careful always not to dig down too far at the sides; nails are ruined by that practice.

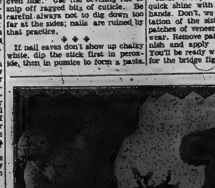
If nail eaves don't show up chalky white, dip the stick first in peroxide, then in pumice to form a paste, and go under them again. If you prefer, you can purchase a nail white which does the purpose.



Now comes the treatment of the cuticle, which is a decidedly delicate operation. It's there that some inadvertently fall down, working too quickly and causing wounds.

The cuticle should be soft from the soaking, but if it isn't, soak again. Rub olive oil or cuticle cream into the flesh about the nails and life it up gently with the stick. Don't force it back at the base, or there will be an injured matrix to send forth nail substance that is ridged, or bearing those white polka dots that distress some of us.

Use the scissors to remove the hangnails, but don't cut the skin at the nail base. If that received enough cuticle cream every night, it will take care of itself. Don't borrow down too far when using the scissors. If the cuticle receives too much attention with the scissors, it will fortify itself by producing a heavier, thicker skin.

Attention laying on the coral high lights, use but one application. Place the end of the brush at the bottom of the nail; sweep upward. After the polish is dry, give a quick shine with the palms of the hands. Don't, we beg, for the reputation of the sisterhood, bear with patches of veneer when it starts to wear. Remove patches with the varnish and apply a fresh coating. You'll be ready when the call comes for the bridge fight.

Distillery Shares And Nickel Main Traders, Prices Being Irregularly Higher Over the Board Exchange Has First Profit Taking Rocked Min ing Hour—New Price For Gold Set at $31.36 an Ounce.

NEW YORK FINANCIAL

New York, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Buying waves rolled through the financial markets today as both traders and investors sought to get out of relatively neutral at inflationary purchases of stocks, money into commodities and equities.

The government's new price for gold of $31.36 an ounce was not quite as high as had been expected in some quarters and kept things mulled about a little uncertainly at the start. Profit taking was quickly absorbed, and another forward push was started after the first hour. Bonds were mixed.

There was a renewed demand for the oils, with the standards of New Jersey and California, Atlantic Refining and Texas and Gas Boat gaining 1 to 2 or more. American Telephone reversed its recent trend with an advance of nearly 4. Allied Chemical was up 3, Chase 6 and others ahead by fractional sums.

Canadian stocks moved on a fair, by even, broad front, with fractional to higher prices predominant in International Nickel, Canadian Pacific, Inc. Dome and McIntyre. Trade on the curb the same range embraced Hiram Walker and Gooderham & Minor. Dominion government obligations ruled 1-8 point lower to 3-8 higher.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Oct. 25.—(CP)—Profit-taking rocked the Standard Mining Market in the first hour today as shaking various guns up to $1.50 off the hooks in Gold and Base Metal Groups but prices steadied before noon and resumed the upward trend of the volume was better particularly in Dome, McIntyre, Hollinger and Teck Hughes and Nickel and Noranda in the other group.

McIntyre jumped to 47.50 up 75 cents as the opening quotation and up 2 cents to 49. Other Gold leaders were proportionately stout. While New York sold down most of the early later McIntyre dropped to 46.50 and Dome to 16.50. Hard they were up to 46.75 and 538 respectively before noon. Lake Shore was unchanged at 251, Hollinger gained 20 to 10.90, Teck was steady at 5.50 and Wright Hargreaves at 8.35 was off 15 cents. Bralorne advanced 50 to 10.75.

Following a moderately higher opening Yellow Metal leaders receded $1 to $2 before noon under a flurry of profit taking and influenced also by a mild sell-down in New York. The afternoon session was featured by rising in volume and the Golds recovered the bulk of the loss.

Noranda and Nickel traded in heavy volume and showed narrow advances at mid-afternoon while such Coppers and other Base Metal issues as Sherritt Gordon, Sudbury Basin, Base Metal Corporation, and Hudson Bay advanced substantially under accumulation.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 25.—(CP)—Distillery and International Nickel continued the main traders today on the Toronto Stock Exchange with prices irregularly higher over the board. The "sets" issues were a little off at the opening and at noon had firmed up to about where they closed on Tuesday. Business eased down with the afternoon session developing slightly reactionary trend at the end of the first hour but definite strength later in the session.

Metal shares were steady to firm from the opening. While working up to $30.05 to show a gain of 30 cents and Smelters had a net gain of 1-4 at 24 1-2 Inco was unchanged at 45½. Hollinger gained 10 to 10.90. Teck was steady at 5.50 and Wright Hargreaves at 8.35 was broken tree branches and limbs which littered every section.

Flooding of the streets caused by the rain backing up in the leaf-clogged catch basins added to their troubles.

Weary of beating against the storm all night, many travel on the highways throughout the district dangerous, travellers and transport drivers were glad to lay over in the city during the afternoon Tuesday, and the hotels did a full day's business.

A shoe merchants stated that almost every available pair of rain shoes in his shop had been snapped up by customers before 10 o'clock in the afternoon.

A coal dealer confessed he was getting a permanent cramp in the arm from reaching for the telephone.

Fishermen south of the city are standing by for the "big run" which is expected to start with the sudden change in the weather.

A string of lines from the southwest corner of Sophia and Dundas Streets to the Belleville Club building went down during the night, no one about eight o'clock, and a member of the police force was on duty there to direct traffic because of an hour directing traffic, until repairs could be made.

Wish the Telegraph

Canadian National Telegraph lines in this immediate district escaped the severity of the storm. Except for the local office, they reported "all clear and little damage in this section," when enquiries were made today. Canadian Pacific Telegraphs, however, reported that lines had been carried down on Wednesday. One is in line between Kingston and the other is the Toronto-local line. Transmission was being carried on, however, to-day, with little inconvenience over the other lines.

Coal and wood dealers found little fault with the storm. It meant an unparalleled rush for coal and both varieties of fuel. Household-ers, caught with low coal bins, kept telephones in local offices ringing throughout the morning, and the day, while clerks were busy booking orders. One coal dealer reported their office staff to handle the flood of orders that were received soon after the first flurry of snow.

IN MEMORIAM

ELLIOTT—In loving memory of Mary Elliott, who departed this life Oct. 25th, 1932.

Two dear bright eyes, a tender smile,
A loving heart that knew no guile.
Deep trust in God that all was right,
Her joy to make some other bright.
Ill will or suffering on the knee
Some gentle act of love she'd do,
Her thought of self, but for "the other"!
I know He said, "Well done, dear heart"

Montreal May Enjoy Big League Ball by Purchase of St. Louis Franchise

Sportsmen Have Bid in For Past Eighteen Months

THREE MILLION LOSS

Late Phil Ball Tried For 18 Years to Produce Winner

(By George McGuire, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Oct. 23 (CP) — Baseball's storm leagueurs were seething along Broadway today. Death of Philip De Catesby Ball, owner of St. Louis Browns of the American League, added explosive material to the flaming question that has been in the minds of experts and others for some time. Where will the Browns end?

Montreal is considered the most logical city to move the franchise to although there is a possibility objections could be overcome regarding transfer of the club to Milwaukee.

Two well known Montreal sportsmen have been known to have persistently bid for the Brown franchise in the last 18 months. United States observers have stringently admitted the Canadian metropolis is the best bet from a baseball viewpoint and Major League ball in Montreal seems nearer reality than ever.

Will Sell Franchise

It is taken for granted in most quarters that the Brown franchise will be disposed of by the Ball family.

Only a stubborn determination to produce an American League pennant winner for the loyal St. Louis magnate in the game, it has been disclosed by a close friend. The Ball estate in general Ball had suffered losses approximating $3,000,000 in his fruitless 18-year effort to produce a championship club.

St. Louis, for some years past, has not been rated a city capable of supporting two Major League teams and even the indomitable Ball finally conceded this last summer, when he offered the St. Louis Cardinal owners a release from their Sportsman's Park contract, they would move to another city.

Montrealers were in the van in making their most active bid for the franchise of either club.

Cards Draw Better

The Cards, however, always a better drawing card, declined to move. Then Ball's real nature became apparent when he signed Rogers Hornsby manager and also when he swaddled the past season with the inclusion of a general record table talk relative to the baseball situation in the Eastern Ontario will come. In the meantime the scrutiny of the local Nationals are marking time.

No sooner did the Kingston Hockey League start in function before the fists began to fly. We were present at Monday night's game but have been informed that a few local players drew down major penalties for demonstrating unsurpassingly their ability to engage in fistic encounters. It is only time that participants of local games such as hockey, etc. should learn to curb their temper. If that is the fundamental cause of the trouble. No fears are entertained for games while some of their team mates are serving lengthy sentences in the penalty bar. We sincerely hope that Monday night's outbreak will be the first and last to be chalked up against the Cities hockey players. Such scenes were not present at the game and do not have the circumstances but we do know that a hockey team cannot win hockey games if their players in the penalty box. Maybe the local players were not the aggressors but they no doubt have received the penalties at the hands of the officials and therefore are illegal, to some extent the chances of their team mates in the cause of victory.

Don't forget the present Y.M. C.A. annual financial campaign now in progress. The "Y" is a deserving of any and all support at the hands of the citizens. They sponsor baseball, softball, and hockey for teen age kiddies, all of whom are welcome regardless as to whether they are members of the members or not. It is no unusual sight to see hundreds of kiddies engaging in the play at the "Y" on Saturday afternoon, cross country runs, etc. at different intervals. Secretary Shortt and Instructor Morden are constantly planning activities for the under-privileged children. The cause of the Y.M.C.A. is a notable and just one, get behind it.

We understand, that the local badminton club will convene on Thursday evening to elect their annual slate of officers.

SLIGHT SHOCK FELT

Los Angeles, Oct. 23 (AP)— An earthquake of minor intensity was felt over a considerable area of Southern California at 11 p.m. last night. The shock was sufficient to awaken many who had retired, but no damage was reported.

Petitfer, only 22 years old, weighs 220 pounds and is six feet, two inches in height. Note his startling resemblance to Primo Carnera. In Italy, the present heavyweight champion of the world.

From the Hockey Training Camps

Keen eyes of the hockey experts are on the Montreal Maroons this forward lines when the National Hockey League season starts, with its new rule drawing particular attention. For Eddie Gerard has decided to use overhead the idea made popular in recent seasons of keeping intact various strings of attackers.

The Maroon coach's idea is that if a man is a good centre, right or left wing he will be effective on any line. He figures he will be able to get more value out of his material by switching his players rather than keeping them in one combination.

Gerard's reversion to the system in vogue when teams carried fewer players than they do today is unlikely to draw a following from among the other coaches. The trend for the past few seasons has been all the other way. Art Ross started it with his Boston Bruins and since several famous combinations have been developed and kept intact.

Most famous of all lines is the New York Rangers trio of Frank Boucher and Bill and Bun Cook. Toronto have their "kid" line of Conacher-Primeau-Jackson. Montreal claims their Morenz-Joliat-Gagnon combination and various other front lines have been worked out with success.

Far from abandoning the fixed line idea, Coach Dick Irvin of Toronto Leafs is planning another. He and Hap Day and Hec Kilrea working on either side of Bill Thoms and while they have not practised long together are shaping up well.

Frank Clancy, it seems, has nothing on Roy Worters. Two seasons in the week-ago Clancy took a voluntary salary cut from Toronto and the sport world raised a more or less incredulous eyebrow. Now, the American goalie has volunteered to accept a reduction in his yearly salary.

Other members of the American team were cut with the stipulation the reduction would be restored if they made the grade. Worters was exempt as his contract had a year to run but, when he heard of the general slice he offered to come in under the arrangement. When owner Bill Dwyer was refused he accepted the goalie's offer.

Big Bill Stewart, usually a laggard in getting into shape, reported to Boston Bruins 12 pounds lighter than when he showed up for training last year. With Marty Barry and Dit Clapper, holdouts also returned to the fold only Eddie Shore, delayed at his Saskatchewan ranch, is missing from Boston Bruins training camp.

Perhaps the N.R.A. has something to do with it. At any rate Lester Patrick, Vice President and coach of New York Rangers, announced unexpected seat prices would be increased. Recently Toronto Maple Leafs, who held out against similar reductions last year, sliced their prices.

Lester also let it be known Babe Seibert is his only hold-out but he did not announce the bar to his signing. Perhaps in view of the seat price increase, the Babe has demanded a salary increase.

With the signing of Taffy Abel, giant Stark defenceman, Chicago have all but two of their players under seal. Tommy Cook is due to look over a contract today, while Lionel Conacher will be along later this week.

Three Fighting to Replace Stars on All 1932 Grid Team

Names Not Familiar to Fans Comes to Fore Rapidly

Toronto, Oct. 25 (CP)—If any explanation is needed why three teams are taking turns at smoothing the All-Canadian football champions of 1932, why another three are fighting to displace University of Toronto stars from Intercollegiate throne and why Sarnia imperials are running away with the O.R.F.U. race, then cast an eye on the leading candidates for the East's all-star team.

Where it was Sprague and Boadway and Timmis smashing wingmen to bits last year, Tommy Burns, Ted Morris and Frank Tindall form the most formidable 1933 combination. Thus have the Tigers given way to Argonauts.

The greatest halfback of 1932 was Frank Turville, of Hamilton. This year it may be Jack Taylor of Argos, Andy Toogood or Abe Elowitz or Lorne Johnson of Ottawa, Hornsby of Sarnia, Jack Sinclair of Varsity or Huck Welch of Montreal.

It all depends on the next two or three games in the three big intermediate series. Already the outstanding team of the year, Ottawa Rough-Riders can just about land the Big Four championship by beating Wheeler (a Montrealer) Saturday for a fourth straight victory. There wouldn't be much left to it then that case, though both Argos and Wheelers seem equipped to make a real fight of it.

Argos must defeat Hamilton Tigers here in the running Queen's and Varsity meet at Kingston in a crucial intercollegiate tilt. Both teams are now tied at the top of the standing. The winner of the McGill-Western match has only a slender hope.

If R.C.A.F.U. Sarnia invades Hamilton to play Cubs and St. Mary's Orioles and Sarnia Imperials resume their feud here. They played a 6-6 tie Saturday that the Beachers are protesting.

Contests Have Bearing

The battles may be a long way toward decisive but they have a bearing. The 183-pound, six foot Argo flash, is primed to step into the shoes vacated by Jack Taylor, carrier of the year. This was Turville last season but the lanky Bengal half had no such success as Taylor with as 72 yards last Saturday as far during the current campaign.

Not quite as big or strong as the Lionel Conacher of 1932, Taylor nevertheless looks capable of slashing the end or centre of a line as the Big Train once did. He'll be never does. He hits for the short field, running far more widely than any back in the Big Four. He does not have amazing drive and because a mighty wingline is protecting his way, he frequently reaches the secondary for gains of from 15 to 50 yards and more. Three of last year's scores are chalked up for some reason or another—fumbles, players pronounced injured and coaching, Patterson and Taylor being pleased. And into the limelight with Taylor have come Tommy, an intermediate last year, Jack Wilson, Elowitz, Johnson, Andy Mullian from the other side of the border, all A.I.F. performers for all-star berths.

While the widespread recognition of Sarnia's power has come serious consideration of Normie Perry, Roy Brown, Hugh Stirling and Mike Hayes for all star calibre. Johnny Wing and Curley King of Queen's have jumped into prominence. There is Boyce Reid of Western and Herbie Westman of

ONCE WEALTHY BROKER, NOW LIVES IN SMALL YACHT

Two years ago he could write his personal cheque for any figure up in the hundreds of thousands; just 24 months ago he lived in a 20,000 home, drove to work in a magnificent limousine, hobbled in a small yacht, the Naiad. Today, W. Deane Tyrer lives in the one thing that remains in his possession—the Naiad. His home is in the dockyard of the National Yacht Club in Toronto. Mr. Tyrer used to be a member. He lives there in lampstein over the yard-arm, set up a garden, and stove, brought in a few odd bits of furniture, and is pleased as Punch there for the winter. He spends his time reading Stuart Chase, Norman Thomas and other works of philosophy and economics. All of which means that W. Deane Tyrer went down in the stock crash, floundered in the sea of depression, and is cast away on the sea of poverty on a floating spar. About all he has in the doorway of his new home, partaking of his breakfast coffee.

CURRENT SPORT

Yesterday's first harbinger winter came rather heavily and reminded one of the old "red flannels."

If the present cold snap continues the two local interscholastic football games booked for today and Saturday will prove to be the "battles of sleep" or something. Coach Laughlin has been drilling his junior squad of grinders all week with the expectations of "taking" the league leading Trenton kids and creating a title for first place in the local junior group. The latter took a well deserved shellacking at the hands of the Trenton Juniors on opening day but, Friday is another day and may see a reverse of the score. The kids about the River Trent have the smart squad of Junior (?) grinders but, the locals have been playing consistent faithfully of late and expect to gain sweet revenge on Friday.

Then on Saturday Coach Shiels' seniors are on the well known spot

Ramblings . . . .

It may have been just a coincidence, but while snow flakes were flying thick and fast over the city on Tuesday afternoon, an energetic salesman for a novelty concern arrived from many miles to the downtown section of the city. On each counter he snapped open a sample case, displaying the latest 1933 Christmas aids, resplendent in their red crepe paper, shining tinfoil and holly berries. And so Christmassy was the air out on the streets that the majority of prospects, further convinced by his brisk sales talk, bought and bought —Orders were good.

A gentleman with a very wearied and disgusted look on his face, nite looking car which pulled in to the side of the curb on Bridge St., West, just back of the traffic lights on the four corners later in the day, though, I heard of the demise of the unfortunate Ford.

The talk was about Huck Finn and fun in general, when man recalled that he grew up in the wooded wilds of Northern Canada. The kids of the settlement skated, mostly.

If they wanted a real swell time they'd take a 200-foot rope with a hook in it, and bacon along. Starting timber wolves along the lake's edge would smell the bacon and tear after it. The kids would skate away in a circle, dragging the bacon. They could skate faster than the wolves could run on the ice. Whereupon they'd draw the circle, and faster and faster, the circle narrowing, the pack trying to cut corners on ice, would slip and roll helter-skelter. Then one of the boys would fire a gun and the wolves would run away, in some fun, eh?

Ketcheson spent a few days in the north of the county partridge hunting.

The threshing machines have made their final trip of the season in this neighborhood.

The snow storm was somewhat of a surprise while it will serve its purpose, in settling the soil, making it much easier for ploughing.

Mr. Harry Lott entertained a number of friends on Sunday last.

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

The girls showered Eve with questions about her trip to New York and exclaimed rapturously over the gifts she had brought them—a dram of jasmine perfume in a crystal bottle for Marya and a new lipstick for Arlene.

Eve corrected the proofs and sent them to the buyers of the departments represented for their approval. Then she went to the basement hat shop to discuss tomorrow's sale. She joined down descriptions and prices and selected several hats for sketching. "Please send them up at once," she said. "Miss Vinal wants them right away."

The query bell I haven't anyone to send now." Janet McElroy replied crisply. "All the girls on the floor are busy and there isn't an errand boy in sight. I'd bring them up myself but I have to go to the receiving room to look over a new shipment that just came in."

Eve stacked the hats into an unwieldy pyramid and carried them to the office herself via the freight elevator. She regarded this task as beneath the dignity of her position and did not wish to be seen by anyone she knew. The buyers, she suspected, did not feel about this as she did. One of them was likely to appear in the advertising office at any time with a great armful of the merchandise. Even Mr. Bixby could be seen at times balancing a stack of handkerchiefs or carrying an evening gown over his arm. Mr. Bixby believed firmly in the dignity of any useful, honest labor. At staff meetings he frequently enlarged on that theme.

Eve entered the office and dropped the hats on a table near Marya's drawing board. A girl she had never seen was sitting at her desk—he desk that had been Allen Marshall's. A small, blond girl with round, blue eyes.

"This is Miss Allen, Miss Bayles," Marya said. "She's going to have your old place."

Eve smiled and offered her hand. "How do you do, Miss Allen. I hope you will like it here as much as the rest of us do."

Languidly the young woman with straw limp hand from Eve's friendly clasp. "I know I'm going to adore it here," she drawled, taking Eve's measure with a hostility that she scarcely took the trouble to veil.

Eve brought a layout sheet, a ruler, sharpened pencil and a piece of art gum to the desk where the new girl was seated. Mona Allen made no move to vacate her place. "That will be your desk over there, Miss Allen," Eve said, indicating a smaller, shabbier desk stacked with newspapers and merchandise. "I haven't had time to clear it off because I've been away for a week. But you get my things out of the drawers by the time you return from lunch and I'll have Charles put those newspapers and that merchandise somewhere else."

The new girl surveyed Eve with cool impudence. "Oh, I think there must be some mistake," she drawled. "I am sure this is the desk Mr. Barnes meant me to have."

Eve thought rapidly. Miss Allen, she suspected, was trying to "put something over" on her. But Eve had no way of knowing what Barnes had said or implied. Fortunately Marya interrupted to ask Eve's advice about the sketch she was making. They went to Barnes' office to compare it with the layout he had prepared. Then Miss James head of the glove department, called up to ask for Eve, but Mr. Barnes informed that he had not yet reached his office, she asked if Eve would come to her department to see some new gloves that she was eager to have advertised in the Times next morning.

When Eve returned to the office 30 minutes later Miss Allen was to have in sight. "I'll be back about 1 at lunch," promised Arleen, looking up from her typing desk.

"It was this way," she said plaintively after they had given their orders at the flat. Floor tea room. Barnes came in while you were talking to Miss James, I suppose, and Miss Allen and me a cook. Great scott, you'd think I were molecules and sailed right through to his office and slammed them door.

"I think that dashed the new stran a little, but not for long. She took out the good old paint box and revised her face some, and was about ready to go into conference with the boss when little me barged in ahead of her with a message.

While I was there I thought I might as well call his attention to the fact that your former desk had become a dumping ground for this and that and should I have Charles clear it out so the new girl would have a place to park her vanity case. He grinned and agreed it was out to pull our new playmate to browse around the store this morning and take notes on anything she saw that seemed interesting and that by the time she got back Charles would have a desk cleared for her. Then he said you and I should make a new schedule of lunch periods as one of us would be on hand all the time to take care of 'phone calls."

Eve did not tell Jack that evening of her unpleasant encounter with the new girl. She cried it to him, she felt so keep their first week together free from office gossip and office cares. But she was uneasy. Mona Allen was not one who would easily accept a defeat. She would try to make trouble in some way, Eve was very sure.

CHAPTER V

Eve and Dick stayed at the Hotel Miramar for a week. They usually dined in the marine dining room overlooking the lake. Eve enjoyed the formality of their surroundings and each evening wore a different costume. She had a flair for clothes and was aware that, though many of the women about her were garbed more expensively, few were smarter costumes. And because she was happy her eyes glowed and smiles curved her lips. When she looked at Dick, correct in his severe evening clothes, she was proud of him.

"Dick," she began enthusiastically the fourth night of their stay at the Miramar, "I've an idea!"

"You're full of ideas," teased Dick. "What is it now?"

"Let's always dress for dinner. There's no reason why people who have fortunes should monopolize all niceties of life. It's fun to change into evening clothes for dinner. Don't you think so?"

"M-m," answered Dick.

"Then we'll do it always! Oh, Dick, I'm so glad you see things as I do. You're a perfect dear to agree with me all the time! I'd hate to have just an ordinary husband. You will let me plan everything the way I want it, won't you dear?"

"M-m," answered Dick.

After dinner he suggested going out to watch the skating. They put on warm wraps and trudged through the snow over the deserted bridle path to the lake.

"Reminds me of the lake at home," said Dick. "I'd like to be out on the ice now. Haven't skated for 10 years. My old skates got too short and I never seemed to have money to buy new ones."

"Oh, Dick," Eve interrupted him, "I've just had a grand idea for the Christmas issue. Have Charles pull one scarcely wait to write it. See the red and white outfit that girl is wearing? It gave me the idea. Here she comes now. Why, as I live and breathe it's Gladys Pippel! Dick, let's leave. If we want to keep our marriage a secret we can't afford to be meeting people we know."

Eve turned back toward the hotel and Dick followed reluctantly. He would have enjoyed skating in the moonlight on the frozen edge of the lake.

He took Eve's arm to keep her from slipping on the icy walk. "Eve, sweetheart," he said, "I don't like keeping our marriage a secret. As far as I'm concerned there are few to whom it matters. But dear, have so many friends in the city that it is bound to cause complications."

"I'm thinking of my position," she said. "We'll announce it later." With this Dick had to be content.

Each morning he drove to "the job" before 9:30. Eve, in her smart black business clothe, boarded an eight o'clock trolley. She never glanced at the morning Times until she reached the older district of the city where the streets were lined with stores and office buildings. Instead she looked at the beautiful homes along the boulevard over which she rode. Eve wondered about the people who lived in those houses and was sure she could never be acquainted until she had such a home. The apartment at the hotel would do, however, she told herself until she and Dick could afford a home like one of those.

Her journey to the office had not brought with it the satisfaction Eve had expected. She had not realized that Allen Marshall had smoothed her way and made things easy for her.

Eve was particularly annoyed by Barnes' thoughtfulness in deciding how much space was to be devoted to each advertisement. This delay often made it necessary for her to prepare her copy at a speed making careful work impossible. Inevitably there came a day when she was obliged to remain an hour over time.

True, Barnes and Arlene were also detained, but that did not lessen Eve's resentment. She knew that if Barnes had been prompt the work easily could have been completed by 5:30. The store's closing hour.

Eve was anxious not to give Dick any cause to resent her work. She suspected that secretly he cherished an ideal of a home-keeping wife who would be watching for him at the window when he came, each evening. Dick's work kept him outdoors much of the time and he always arrived with a healthy appetite. Eve seldom was ready for dinner before seven. This evening it was nearly eight, but Dick did not complain.

Saturday night came and the hotel held its weekly dinner dance. Eve wore the green of pale gold lace that she had worn on her visit to the night club in New York with Theron Recce.

As she turned from the mirror she called to Dick: "It's no longer dear! I think this is the most adorable place to live. And I love dressing for dinner."

"It would be nice if we could stay on here," Dick agreed. "But I suppose since tomorrow is Sunday we can live around and try to locate a place to settle in."

Something frozen in Eve. She asked, very so quietly, what Dick's plans were.

"We'll have to find a place within my income," he told her.

"But we have two incomes!"

"We're not counting on anything you may earn," Dick announced with finality. "Your money is yours to do with as you please. If I were you I'd bank that money. You may do as you like, however. It's never question you about it. But I am going to support our home on my income and I will endeavor to add to our savings each payday."

Eve was not in the most pleasant frame of mind as they descended to the dining room. She had been enjoying the luxury of the past week and saw no reason why she and Dick should not combine their incomes and continue this mode of living which, she felt, would leave them free from the petty cares of the average young married couple.

"Dick," she began after the waiter took their order, "I don't want to argue but it seems only fair to remind you that we agreed marriage is a fifty-fifty proposition. So I want to pay my share."

"Successful marriages is always a fifty-fifty proposition," Dick agreed. "But that doesn't necessarily apply to finances the way you mean it. I would say it is important for each always to meet the other half way. What I mean is, turn for turn and fair play."

Eve recalled Dick's nonconmittal "M-m," each time she had thought she had scored a victory.

She took her cue and said, Let's have a marriage free from quarrels now, Dick. Each of us will always think of the other's side of the question, won't we?"

"That's the only kind of a marriage I will have," he answered with emphasis.

Eve was determined to enjoy the present and let the future take care of itself. No need to hurry in locating another apartment. She would meet that unpleasant contingency when it arrived.

So she replied brightly and said, "I'm the meantime on with the show."

They dashed between courses. It was not until after they had finished dinner that Eve saw Theron Recce.

OCT 25 MR. AND MRS. — IT NEVER FAILS TO HAPPEN SO

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The king-ape, seizing the girl in his arms, fled into the jungle, pursued by the bellowing, screaming bull-apes. Go-Yad, Culnaids fought to free herself from the hideous creature. She had never seen or heard of such a thing as this. She believed her captor was some awful kind of dragon. Toyat soon realized he could not escape while burdened with the "ape." Coldly he turned, releasing his hold upon the Princess.

Appalled by the hideous circumstances of her flight, Culnaids sank to the ground, too weak to move. Bristling, snarling in frenzied rage, the two huge anthropoids prepared to fight it out, while spellbound by the horror of it, the Princess watched the bestial savagery of the primordial man-beasts seeking her possession of her. Nor was she the only witness of these terrifying happenings.

From the concealment where he lay, another watched with steady, keen interest. Just as the moment the two apes were about to grapple each other, there stepped into the open a great lion—whose yellow coat gleamed golden in the sunlight. Toyat saw him first. With a growl of rage he turned and fled. Go-Yad, thinking him afraid, beat his breast and roared forth the victory cry of the bull-apes.

A moment later the ape saw the lion between himself and the girl, gazing steadily into his eyes. Then Go-Yad, too, lumbered off into the jungle. Now, as the lion walked slowly toward her, Culnaids prayed for a quick death. The king of beasts was close. She felt his hot breath upon her cheek. The little Princess' tortured nerves could endure no more. With a sob, she fell fainting before the tawny beast.

The new girl surveyed Eve with cool impudence. "Oh, I think there must be some mistake," she drawled.

POLICE REVISE THEORIES IN DEATH OF CHILD

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE ADJOURNS TO DECEMBER 4th

Police Dragnet Thrown Out after Body of Child is Found Nude on Dump

Unnamed Escaped Criminal Sought by Police For Questioning

FACE CUT

Father of Child Faints Twice During The Search

Toronto, Oct. 26 (CP)—Murder theories in the death of little "Sunny" Hillier, whose nudad body was found in a city dump today, were under revision early this afternoon as Chief Coroner M. M. Crawford announced the body bore marks indicating external violence.

"Death would appear to have been due to exposure," he said, as autopsy neared completion. "There were no large lesions that would cause death."

The Chief Coroner found "no signs of violence which would indicate the child had been criminally violated." Earlier, working on the assumption of murder, police began a search for an unnamed man who escaped last summer from an Ontario institution, with several convictions against him for assaults on children. A routine check up was made of several mental institutions to determine whether convicts or inmates of asylums had escaped recently.

It was understood that as a result of the autopsy, medico-legal opinion was inclined to the theory that 18-months-old girl, who wandered away from her Boothroy Avenue home Tuesday afternoon, had removed her clothes herself as she played about the dump, and had died in that way. The body when found, lay partially under a rusted automobile radiator, and it was thought possible this had fallen on her as she played, and pinned her there helplessly.

Toronto, Oct. 26 (CP)—As the unclothed body of 18-months-old Alfreda Hillier was found today, a deep wound in the head, Toronto police began a search for an unnamed escaped criminal who had served terms for criminal attacks on children.

They declined to identify the suspect, but it was learned the criminal sought made his escape from a prison some time last summer.

Until the body was found today, not a trace had been seen of the little girl who toddled away from her Boothroy Avenue home at mid-afternoon yesterday. A frantic hallor twice fainted as he led police and volunteers in an all night search in ravines and backyards in the neighborhood of the home.

The body of "Sunny" that was the name by which she was known to her parents, neighbors and playmates, was found on a street—was found on a dump within 300 yards of her home. The child had apparently had been torn off and thrown into a basket, an old, rusted automobile door covered the lower part of the body, which lay downward, the woollen mitten on the baby's hand not were missing.

Body Apparently Thrown

The body had apparently been thrown to the ground. A jagged brick had cut a deep gash in one side of the face, and the lower part of the body bore several scratches. The blood were rigid indicating the child had been dead all night.

From the bricks and discarded tin cans and rubbish dotted over the city dump between Page and Greenwood Avenues the father and police were led away by police. Hero of justland, typical of the mystery plays, Alfred Hillier called down maledictions on the killer of his child, then broke from the grasp of a police to rush back where she lay and pray.

"I thought she had left us, that someone has killed her—what did a child like that ever do to anyone?" the father cried.

His questioning of circumstance was still unanswered. Except for the stark evidence found on the city dump police could point to nothing indicating definitely Bunty's movement after she went out on the verandah of the house to play—except the fact that somewhere in an escaped criminal on whom they seek to lay their hands.

Autopsy Ordered

The child's body was removed at once to the coroner's building and authorities said "action would commence in earnest" after an autopsy had been made.

Chief Coroner M. M. Crawford said it was impossible to say for certain whether Bunty Hillier had been murdered.

"But it is undoubtedly very peculiar that the body should be found naked and that the clothes should have been placed in a basket," Dr. Crawford said. "There are many red patches on the body, but scratches could be explained that way.

Shortly after the tragedy was discovered it was understood a reward would be offered by the Police Commission for clues to the identity of the person responsible for the little girl's death.

The discovery was made by two policemen, and a crowd had already gathered when Alfred Hillier reached the spot. He was told Bunty had been found dead, and when he first saw the body exclaimed "Someone has done that!"

Later, composure partially regained, he told of the hope he had had for the girl. "I guess some day I'll get over it but it seems now as if I never would. It will nearly kill "Trotsie" (Mrs. Hillier)."

Hundreds of police and volunteers had combed the neighborhood, but investigators failed to believe the baby had been kidnapped and were at a loss to explain what a lonely spot. Once, as an officer flashed his light, something resembling a baby's body appeared in the bottom of a ravine, and the father was restrained with difficulty from climbing down. "The object was only a frost-covered cardboard box.

Dog Assists in Search

Among the little groups, who tracked Buck and forth in the search was Prince, a policeman's dog, and tracking upward when anyone said "Bunty." He was one or her favorite playmates.

The last person to see her alive was believed to be little Jackie Mareland, who went home at four o'clock because of the cold. He saw Bunty on a corner not far from the Hillier house.

When Bunty failed to come in, and a quick search revealing no trace of her, Mrs. Hillier summoned her husband at the plant where he worked. He left at the time, and did not get the message at once.

Reaching home two hours later, early in the evening, he began to search again. Neighbors were called and the extensive scouring of the neighborhood by the city, and morning in the rubbish-littered environs of the dump.

Time for very old for her age, her father said. "She started to walk at nine months. She was always talking a little. She was always up to no."

Water Holes Dragged

Alfred Hillier's first act on arriving home was to call last night was to visit every home in the neighborhood. He questioned in the backyards of surrounding houses and questioned children. He left with hope that a neighbor had taken the little girl in to visit had been given and that the child would be found in wool on her sweater, and anyone who had seen her would have recognized her to her home before dark.

Then began a search of the lakes, brickyards, and dumps. Climbing down into the deep ravines and around it, officers and citizens started a "drag search" on the dump, which extends northward for nearly half a mile. It was on the edge of these cliffs that Alfred Hillier was standing when light fell on the cardboard box, which he thought was his child.

Later a cave-in in the banks was unveiled away in the possibility of what might have been caught there. An investigation of the Don River, Dei Rio, Joan Bennett, and Ricardo Cortez.

Skis on Terrace at Court House

A record was established in this city on Wednesday night when three youthful skiers were observed taking full advantage of the recent fall of snow. The skiers were observed gliding gracefully down the terraces in front of the County Court House and seemed to enjoy every moment of their new sport. Although snow had been known to fall earlier than October 25th it has been many years since the season's first fall of snow remained intact as was in evidence yesterday and today. The three young sporting skiers are believed by many to have had the distinction of heralding the outdoor winter sporting season earlier than was ever recorded in this community in years past.

STOCK BURNS AT TRENTON

Loss Custained by "Moe" Charney Estimated at $2,000

Trenton, Oct. 26 (Special)— Fire destroyed practically the entire stock of Charney's Headquarters Store last evening the estimated damage being in the neighborhood of $2,000.

The store was opened last summer by Moe Charney, former Argonaut roster star, of Toronto, who purchased the stock formerly owned by W. Wise.

Mr. and Mrs. Charney had left the store about 6.15 p.m. and about twenty minutes later the fire was discovered by Mr. Orby Weese living in the apartment above the shop, who summoned the fire department.

The blaze had gained considerable headway to the rear of the store.

The heat was so intense that the plate glass window was cracked.

The firemen confined the fire to the shop with no damage to the adjacent stores nor the apartments above.

It is thought the fire started in the store pipes in the rear of the store and is partly covered by insurance.

EXTRA AND BIT PLAYERS JOIN FORCES

Hollywood, Oct. 26 (AP)—Hollywood forgot its class distinction today when Central Casting and the Screen Actors' Guild announced that extra and bit players would be taken into the organization in its fight against "salary control" features of the proposed picture industrial code.

"For the first time in motion picture history," said Kenneth Thompson, secretary of the guild, "there are cracks between stars and no dates among the players. The star and the extra will work together to solve their mutual problems."

Among leading actors who registered with the guild today were Wallace Ford, Ralph Morgan, Leo Carrillo, Del Rio, Joan Bennett, and Ricardo Cortez.

Smallest Printed Book in World of Omar Khayyam Verse Now Completed

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 26—(CP)—Completion of what is described as the smallest printed book in the world, a tiny volume of 28 pages of verses by the Persian poet, Omar Khayyam, was on view here today.

The book, so small its entire contents would require half of an ordinary postage stamp, contains 46 quatrains from the Rubaiyat of the translation made several years ago by Wm. Worcester man, Edwin Francis Thompson, a students of Persian.

The tiny book is the work of Brooks Woods and Frederick K. Plimpton, who completed it some time ago after more than seven years' effort. Its tiny metal form, bound in leather covers, is a 2-16ths by 6-16ths of an inch in dimension.

It was printed from copper plates, by hand, each containing four pages were made by photo-engraving. The completed book weighs a third of a carat.

ELECTION IS WARMING UP

Bitter Remarks Hurled by Candidates in New York

New York, Oct. 26 — A "red plot" and woman suffrage entered the political campaign today as Joseph V. McKee and Fiorello H. Laguardia grew fighting mad and reached for new clubs with which to whale each other.

McKee, the recovery party candidate, accused Laguardia last night of being a dangerous Red and a leader of a "plot to put us under the politics and philosophy of Moscow".

"He would be the first to lead the mob," McKee said. Laguardia, replying, called himself an "independent Progressive" owing allegiance to no party.

A woman leader in Laguardia's tuition camp hurled at McKee an accusation that in 1915 he wrote for the "Columbia World" an article impugning the morality of woman suffrage leaders. Mrs. Courtlandt Nicoll rose from the article and called it a "scurrilous and unwarranted attack made on the moral probity of those sincere women."

Laguardia himself assailed McKee for insisting that "a vote for Mc-Kee is a vote for Roosevelt." The fusion leader said McKee thereby "confessed that he cannot win on his own merits."

CAR BACKED INTO RIVER

Seven Drowned, While on Way to Birthday Party

Binghampton, N.Y., Oct. 26 (AP)—Seven persons, laughing and joking on their way to a birthday party, were drowned last night when their car rolled into the Susquehanna River. The dead are: Miss Ethel, 14, in whose honor the party was planned; Avis Houston, another 14 year old girl; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Loef, and their son Marcus, Lopia, 9, Austin, 6, and Arden 3.

After steering into a driveway to ask the way, Loef started to back out. The car backed down an embankment into the icy water. Half an hour later a passerby saw the headlights, almost submerged, shining out of the river. All but Meg trapped inside the car, except two children whose bodies were found nearby.

GOLD PRICE IS ELEVATED

Theories of Gold Inflation And Depreciated Dollar

Washington, Oct. 26—(AP)— The United States government sought to give increased impetus to its price boosting programme today by increasing the price it will pay for newly mined gold by 12 cents an ounce over yesterday, the figure set being $31.64.

It was asserted at the White House later the increase did not mean necessarily there would be a daily increase. Indications were voiced that so long as the American price keeps ahead of foreign market levels, a point may be reached when it will not be felt necessary to increase the quotation.

Purchases of the metal will continue on a daily basis. Yesterday, when this Roosevelt policy was inaugurated, the quotation was fixed at $31.36 against a London figure of $31.26.

Gold Inflation

Washington, Oct. 26—(AP)— President Roosevelt's pronouncement of a world gold market in the United States has led gold capital experts to believe that he has but one thing in mind—depreciation of the dollar through gold inflation.

How then does gold inflation operate?

The answer, most experts agree, is that the dollar (varying old price) operates not by increasing the currency but by changing the standard of value.

In these countries still on the gold standard, money in every form represents either gold itself, or something representing gold, or something that can be exchanged into gold.

In other words, gold is a commodity value to this own, and it is accepted as payment for debts largely for this respect all money, everywhere, passes on this same basis; and for the same reason.

Division of Dollar

Gold inflation theories operate by dividing the dollar into smaller units. To use an illustrative figure it operates by dividing a bag of potatoes into smaller units. So far as transactions are concerned, the potatoes will purchase only half what they have but did before because it circulates on its inherent value. But supported on the gold standard, given a number, for instance, dollars—and thousands of people over many decades think of dollars and some presidential edict decrees that half a bag of potatoes instead of a whole bag shall constitute one dollar, then it is obvious that the position of those who owe is immediately.

Gold Inflation

To carry out the hypothesis further a home owner with 100 bags of potatoes would then be worth 200 bags of potatoes. He owes a debt instead of 100, and each of the 200 half bags would pay off one dollar of debts.

This is the theory of gold inflation, carried to the extreme. Gold's value of its own, by setting a higher price for its purchase and thus cheapening the dollar, is said to be exactly similar to reducing the potatoes in the bag. The amount of potatoes would be necessary to purchase a bag, and the world, naturally, called more dollars than before the inflation.

London, Oct. 26 (CP Cable)— "Prohibition has been a complete failure," declared General Richard Higgins of the Salvation Army, returning from a visit to North American during which he attended the Salvation Army Congress at Toronto.

Moral Failure Too Grave Says Henderson as Arms Conference Rises Today

Disarmament Work Will Go on Without Germany

INTERIM PLANS

Spain Convinced World Progress Linked With Disarmament

By George Hambleton
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Geneva, Oct. 26 (CP Cable)—The work of disarmament will go on with no rain regrets over Germany's departure from the World Disarmament Conference. After approving the plan of work recommended by the Steering Committee, the general conference arose this afternoon until Dec. 4. In the interval the Steering Committee will go to work.

Captain Anthony Eden, British Foreign Office Under-Secretary, left no doubt in Geneva that it was quite clear the withdrawal of Germany could not be without effect on the work of the conference and that it would cause some disturbance. He added, however, British government feels this should not be allowed to delay work of disarmament. We must look forward and not indulge in recriminations.

Captain Eden pledged Great Britain's wholehearted support to the efforts to achieve progress.

Plans for Interval

The Steering Committees will endeavor during the adjournment interval to find out the reasons for differences. Even the Germans will have the right to be heard if they wish to present any proposals.

Salvador Madariaga of Spain, minister of the Liberal government, opposed the action of Germany in withdrawing. He added that Spain is confident in the future and the hope of the world is linked with the future of the League of Nations, which he said Spain considers permanent and universal.

Expressing hope that Germany would return, Madariaga said: "We must be sure to do nothing which would cause prejudice to those absent."

Opening the discussion, Arthur Henderson, president of the Parley, expressed his conviction that all the delegations wished to bring the parley to a successful conclusion.

Hard Is Where The Grave

"Any failure owing to timidity or a lack of will," said Mr. Henderson, addressing a packed hall at the opening session, "would be a moral failure too grave for the future of the League of Nations and the cause of world peace."

ACCIDENT IS AMICABLY SETTLED

A slight automobile accident in which the left fenders of both cars were damaged, happened at the corner of St. Charles and Bleecker Sts. yesterday afternoon, when a car driven by J. B. Cummings, 32 Highland Ave., collided with another automobile driven by Pearly Parks, 19 North Front St., Mr. Cummings was proceeding eastward on Moira St. and as he was about to turn left into St. Charles St. the accident occurred as Mr. Parks was proceeding westward. No one was injured and was about to make a right hand turn into Moira St. Chief Wills is further investigated and the matter was amicably settled between the parties concerned.

CORD WOOD CHIEF ARTICLE OF TRADE

Cord wood cut into stove lengths proved the chief article of trade at Thursday's market, a large loads of wood were purchased by eager citizens from farmers. Hay was in plentiful and had a hard gorge. Potatoes, turnips, cabbage and apples proved the main farm products to be found on the early fall market that was held under adverse weather conditions. Eggs and butter were offered at 25c a dozen. No variations in the price priced of farm produce was noted.

TAKE SOUNDINGS IN LOCAL HARBOR

Government surveyors who have been taking soundings or the local harbor during the past week or so were still at work today. Mounted on a large scow equipped with the latest machine, the men are taking soundings of the bottom of the harbor to find out if there is any silt here to fill the centre of the upper harbor. Members of the Belleville Harbor Commission, who were questioned, had no knowledge of future plans of the government.

BULL BONUS DISCUSSED

Farmers Assisted in Purchasing Better Herd Sire

A meeting of the Agricultural Representatives of Eastern Ontario was held in Ottawa where discussion of the new "Bull Bonus Policy" was led by Mr. R. W. Wade, Director of the Ontario Live Stock Branch, and by R. S. Duncan, Director of the Agricultural Representative branch. "There is now a chance to assist every cattle owner to purchase a better herd sire" declared Mr. Wade. Under present conditions the farmer needs this help if the standard of our live stock is to be kept up and improved. Every farmer is eligible. Classes A and B are open to pure breds and is need not be his first pure bred bull as was the case under the former plan.

Bonuses are paid to the purchaser as follows: Class A, $40.00; Class B, $20.00; Class C, $10.00; Class D, $10.00.

Classes A and B are best suited to pure bred breeders and are limited by economic factors. Class D are to be had for from $15. to $25 and are eligible for the $10 bonus. They are especially suited to cheese factory patrons. Bulls must be inspected and passed before they are purchased by the farmer.

Mr. Duncan declared that the new policy is practicable and workable and will be of great service to the agriculture of the province.

APPLE TREES HIT BY STORM

Weight of Snow And Heavy Crop Causes Trees to Sag

From all parts of the apple growing sections of this district, reports of the disastrous effects of Thursday's storm are arriving in the city. In Prince Edward County, the older trees seem to have been the heaviest sufferers, where the fruit had remained unpicked. With the heavy crop of the present season, and foliage still on the trees, the weight of moist snow added to the load the branches were unable to carry, carrying many to the ground where they have been split badly. The young trees carried the weight better but many of them have broken branches. Along the Bay of Quinte, from Trenton to Colborne, the great apple section of the district, the damage is not so great as the trees is reported to have been considerable, both old and young trees having suffered.

Thursday night's frost had no effect on the fruit remaining on the trees, but just how the freezing temperature of Wednesday night may have damaged the crop has not yet been learned.

Plum trees have also been damaged to a considerable extent. With the weight of snow clinging to the unshed foliage limbs have been broken or split and in some cases the trees themselves split.

From vendors on the market this (Thursday) morning it was learned that the apple crop, yet remaining on the trees, will be harvested Friday or Wednesday night. Such a freeze would ruin soft fruit, but most apples of that class have already been harvested throughout the district.

Provided the thaw is gradual, little harm will be done the hardier species of apples, if another freeze-up does not follow the thaw. There will however, be a demand for a quicker maturing of the fruit, owing to the low temperatures of the past two nights. Another two weeks should see the finish of the picking in this section of Ontario, and favorable weather conditions is fostered by the experience of this week.

WINTER HOLDS CITY IN GRIP

14 Degrees Above Zero Registered, When Mercury Dips

Winter temperatures held the city in their grip last night and early this morning while cool blasts straight from the north, whistled and howled throughout the district. Forming ice on rivers and ponds, and causing residents scurrying through deserted streets with coat collars high up around their ears.

The lowest point reached Thursday morning was recorded at 24 above; a creditable mark for even a day in December. The highest mark at noon was still little above freezing.

Ice formed on the river just below the lower bridge early in the morning; on the fringes of the nearby marshes the thickness was almost strong enough to bear the weight on a small boy; plants and flowers throughout the city received their coup de grace from the wilting touch of Jack Frost.

In local garages the biggest hum of business since the paralyzing sleet storm of last January was registered. Cars from which hose boxes had congealed with heavy grease, and whose radiators were split and cracked being steadily towed throughout the city during the day.

But, while Belleville temperatures whooperated to the lowest levels for this date on record, northern townships of the county also experienced winter's first action. Snell, according to reports from transport drivers and residents of the back areas, the first sheeting of ice has begun to coat on the lakes, and heavy snow still covers the woods in the township, and first migration of ducks and geese is reported.

MANY DUCKS ARE CRIPPLED

Hunters Shoot Before Birds Come Within Range

Thousands of wild ducks, crippled by the spent shot from guns aimed at them by hunters in the forlorn hope of their making the kill, were cut of range of their boats and blinds, are annually lost, without giving them a chance to retire over the decoys which they are approaching, it was learned in this city today. Immediate district the annual toll of ducks in this manner reaches an astounding total.

"And it's all so needless" commented a well known hunter of the city, who is a veteran at the game.

"Many hunters fill all in their blinds and take a shot at anything that flies past them. Generally they start shooting long before the birds are within range, without giving them a chance to retire over the decoys which they are approaching. The birds are flying too high and too little time and let the birds get within range he'd be able to score clean hits and there would be little danger of the birds dragging off into the reeds to die."

Generally, for every three birds shot there will be six or more crippled that are never recovered, stated this veteran.

"If a man had a dog to follow him after they were hit, then a hunter would have some excuse for taking long shots at the ducks. But he hasn't then it's just pure slaughter."

OBITUARY

MRS. LYDIA A. BROWN

(From The Evening Times, Little Falls, N. Y. Saturday, Oct. 21st.)

Little Falls, N.Y., Oct. 21.—The first frost of Saint Luke's day of dawn were silvering the eastern sky this morning, heralding the coming of another day, the soul of Mrs. Lydia Ann Brown, 80, one of the most highly esteemed women, passed from this life into the dawn of eternal day at 4 o'clock. She died at the local hospital to which she was taken the day before. Mrs. Brown lived at 28 Monroe street, late yesterday afternoon when she was stricken with ill health until early Friday morning, when she was suddenly taken ill. Her condition grew worse and she was removed to the hospital. However she failed to rally and peacefully breathed her last at about six this morning.

Mrs. Brown was born in Manchester, England, May 2, 1853, her maiden name being Lydia Ann Doolittle. She became the bride of Arthur Brown, at Kilmarnock, Scotland, on April 24, 1872, and for over half a century they lived side by hand in hand through life. Ten years ago they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in this city, where they took up their residence in 1913, coming here from Deseronto province of Ontario, Canada. Mr. Brown died in 1930.

Despite her four score years, Mrs. Brown retained her interest and enthusiasm for the finer things of life until the very end. She never ever old in spirit, and she was as welcome at gatherings of the young people of the Methodist Church, of which she was a life-long and devoted member, as through the dignity in their ages existed. Both young and old seemed refreshed and inspired by contact with her lovely personality.

The union of Mr. and Mrs. Brown was blessed with ten children, three of whom preceded the parents in death. Surviving are four sons, Arthur H., of Schenectady; S. W. of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada; Robert J. of Belleville, Canada, and Wentworth H. Brown, who is connected with the Herkimer County Trust company of this city; three daughters, Miss Maude Brown, Miss Harry B. Jones and Miss Kathleen Brown all of this city; also a sister, Miss L. Doolittle of Southport, England, and four grandchildren.

"The funeral was held on Monday afternoon, October 23rd to Church Street Cemetery.

Dr. Wm. T. Macoun Called Wizard of Horticulture

Dr. C. T. Currelly Places Him Above Luther Burbank

That the late Dr. W. T. Macoun, chief Dominion horticulturist at Ottawa, and formerly a resident of Belleville and a native of this place, did more for horticulture than Luther Burbank, the so-called wizard of the, claim of Professor C. T. Currelly Director of The Royal Ontario Museum of Archeology at Toronto Dr. Currelly says:

"Some years ago a brilliant writer, the late Peter Macarthur, said: 'Isn't it time that we Canadians stopped saying Isn't it good for Mary Anne?' I suppose this habit is a hang-over from our early days of struggle to provide the simple necessities of life; but it is certainly time it looked at Canadian affairs from a world standpoint and said 'Isn't it good for anybody to say anything?'

"This habit would perhaps not have died so quite as much harm if we had been isolated, but we have been deluged with newspapers, magazines and books that are partly propaganda for the greatness of other people and the wonderful men that have been produced. I suppose, for instance, that all upper school children in Canada know something about 'the American wizard of horticulture,' Burbank; most of the things they know about him are untrue. How many know about the late Dr. W. T. Macoun, Canada's own horticulturist, who made Burbank's genius look more for horticulture than Burbank's. Macoun was a hard-working government official on a small salary and inexhaustible energy and thought of advertising himself, and unfortunately we have not yet reached that stage of national development in which there is full recognition of outstanding scientific work done at home.

"One reason why our achievements in horticulture have not gained more publicity is that many of the big things have been done by men generous enough to share thoroughly with their associates. The important fruits produced at Vineland have never been signed upon by the head of the station as his production. Among those who know of them they are always spoken of as 'by Palmer and his associates' or more commonly still, simply as 'produced at Vineland.'

"Predictions are risky but I should like to make a statement that the Melba apple will be grown and valued long after nearly every other recent production in horticulture will be forgotten—and the Melba is only one of Macoun's great apples. The best collection of hardy apples in America was brought together by him at the Experimental Station at Morden, Manitoba; he was a servant of the whole Dominion and worked as much for the Prairie Provinces as he did for the best fruit lands of the country.

"Vegetables, fruits and flowers all responded to the touch of his gentle friendship. His wonderful development of peas are known to the few who are scientifically interested as is his incredible development of lilies in respect to the number of flowers borne from one bulb.

"In the profession, of course, Macoun's position was very high. One of the greatest honors accorded him was that of the Wilder State Fruit Testing Association named its choice apple the Macoun. Many more were awarded to his productions, including the Grande Medaille de Vermeil from the National Society of France, a gold medal struck by the International Exposition of horticulture at Brussels for the Melba apple and a medal struck by the American Pomological Society to commemorate the Melba apple and the Lobo apple another of Dr. Macoun's productions. The Veitch Memorial Medal for Gold Medal of Honor for the Advancement of Horticulture was to Dr. Macoun, and many other similar honors showed the appreciation of the scientific world of his work.

"I feel sorry that Dr. Macoun's name is not known to every Canadian school child. Some years ago I was very much interested to hear a Japanese student speak of a certain compatriot as 'the greatest horticulturist in Japanese history, and to find that the children of Japan are taught about their great work.

"I sincerely hope that the movement now on foot in preparing some of our school books will develop, so that through these books Canadian children will know about those Canadian men of science who have merited such recognition."

Editorially the Mail and Empire treats of this as follows:

"In Dr. Currelly's view, Dr. Macoun did much more for horticulture than the late Mr. Burbank, the so-called 'American wizard.' The explanation is that Burbank happened to carry on his work in California and that he was widely advertised and trumpeted long, with rain and commonplace. The people of California wished to popularize their state as a wonder health resort for the whole continent, and they took hold of Mr. Burbank and used him as a part of their propaganda. So it came that the 'American wizard' was considerably on the tongues of Canadians as well as of Americans. This is certainly not intended as a criticism of the California horticulturist. He was a sincere worker in his field and he accomplished a good deal, though he seems to have been let down badly at the end of his career by those who had supported him and boomed him. Dr. Macoun, on the other hand, did his work quietly behind the scenes as a conscientious, earnest and brilliant scientist. No particular publicity was sought for him, but it is within the bounds of accomplished much for horticulture in this Dominion."

William Tyrrell Macoun was born in Belleville, January 7th, 1871, and was educated here. He was a son of the late John Macoun who went to Ottawa, when quite young. His father was also noted in the same line of scientific work. Dr. Macoun became horticulturist at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, April 12th, 1906, and was a frequent contributor to the "Ottawa Naturalist."

Mrs. E. W. Cooley, 235 John St., Belleville, is a cousin of the late Dr. W. T. Macoun.

STIRLING H.-S. RUGBY TEAM IS DEFEATED BY TWEED

Stirling—Stirling High School junior team of soldiers' and the return visit to Marmora Continuation School on Friday afternoon and were badly beaten by the townners who took the game by a score of 4 to 3. A large crowd of rooters journeyed over to the northern town to witness the game but in spite of their encouragement, the local lads failed to turn in a win.

On the first quarter, the play was fairly even with Marmora having a slight edge. However no score was recorded until the second quarter when Marmora gained a point on a kick. The third quarter saw some rough rugby with each side putting up a real fight. It was rather unfortunate that three players were penalized for differing a criticism of the referee's decision. AT THE BELLE Memories come to life again—and with the present in "Broadway to Hollywood," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stirring drama of three generations in the theatre, embellished with the performances of Fay Templeton, Alice Brady and Jackie Coogan as members of Broadway's greatest, spanning Mr. and Mrs. Russell Seton such of today's screen celebrities as Alice Brady, Jackie Coogan, Frank Morgan, Frank Morgan and Madge Evans.

The picture which comes to the Belle screen today, is essentially drama, a vivid story humanized with the heartbeats of human emotion, which, through its many interesting variations, is made of many of the features of a revue.

It is a colorful, pulsing, poignant drama among the people of the stage in their every mood, then cuts to what is going on upon the stage, to view famous stars of an earlier day in their greatest hits.

Covers Three Generations

The play covers three generations from Tony Pastor's to modern Hollywood. Jackie Coogan, Frank Morgan play the original dancing team. Their son, played by Jackie Coogan, joins the act. Finally the veterans are seen in Hollywood with their grandson, a money-mad screen star. In the dramatic climax the old grandfather saves the boy from himself.

Miss Brady and Morgan play through varying ages and contribute stirring characterizations. Jackie Cooper romps through the best role of his career and Eddie Quillan as the screen star is a "natural" for the part. Madge Evans and Russell Hardie are expert as the romantic juvenile pair and the work of the remainder of the stellar cast is of the very best. Sheridan Ransom contributes brilliant ballets in full beautiful color that are a delight to quench.

The dramatic climax is one of the most remarkable things ever screened. A ballet of five hundred girls flimsil in colors, dances in the largest set ever constructed at a studio. The ballet ascends from the mammoth dome while the grand father and grandmother, their work done, watch as the "March of Time" to the accompaniment of crashing music, marches relentlessly down the steps of the years, just as they proudly trouped through a half century of theatredom.

There are laughs and sobs, thrills and surprises in this cavalcade of the theatre. Willard Mack has done a fine job of directing while plaudits must also go to the men responsible for the splendid musical using in talking film some or the greatest artists of the American theatre.

Another of the popular Walt Disney Silly Symphony cartoons in colors completes the program.

DEFEAT MADE CERTAIN

Ex-Judge Stubbs, who carried the C.C.F. standard in Mackenzie, Saskatchewan, dismally failed to impress the electorate, even though the riding he sought to represent is not far from the scene of those alleged activities of which Mr. Stubbs complained so vehemently. The people whom he aimed to impress were not at all swayed by him and he did not succeed in sweeping his rivals off the field. There were 3,206 votes cast of which Mr. Stubbs secured but 3,321, which, no doubt, calls for an explanation from the C.C.F. as to how such a thing could happen. What is clear to others, though perhaps not to the C.C.F., is that Conservatives and Liberals made sure that no co-operative Confederation candidate would "get away with" the riding. That means that the so-called progressive party did not show itself at all suitable to the Canadian political field, and if there ever was a time when the people might have been lifted off their feet it was this time. But the people ran true to their history, the Western farmers have stood firm. They know that the other parties at least know the art of government, make what mistakes they may, while the C.C.F. is made up of so much uncertainty that the people would be foolish to throw away the certainties they have for the clamoring of some few for a condition of affairs which few reasonable persons believe would suit Canada.

Mr. Stubbs' defeat is a blow for the federation and should do much to strengthen those weak-kneed electors who have been hesitating or wobbling. They should know that the bulk of the people have sound views and do not want the C.C.F.

GOLDEN RULE ON THE DEPRESSION

The golden rule, about which all persons have heard as the ideal measure of life, is again and again as the way out of the anomaras in which the world is floundering. The present depression has its roots in causes which are moral causes, according to the Bishop of Chester of the Church of England in Canada, as voiced in a pastoral letter read in every parish in Canada on Sunday. There, no doubt, was a time not more than five years ago when a claim of this kind would be looked upon as a biased opinion, but today many persons who look with through critical and sceptical glasses in 1929 will agree that the Anglican claim is one which can be demonstrated as true.

"Of course the causes are economic, they are financial, and there are vast political implications, but this fact stands out today more clearly than ever that it is only the guidance of the moral law which could have prevented this present condition and it is only the application of the moral law which will correct the present train of evil. Back of all the changes, the uncertainties the failures of solutions, lies one factor at least as stated, "greed, and self are the root causes of corruption in personal life, in industry, in commerce, and in public life. If we would serve and save our country we must grapple with these moral conditions.

How to meet this condition so as to gain the victory over depression is the problem. It is the duty of the individual man and woman to do his and her part, and then for the organizations of society to do theirs. It will not be necessary for every last person sceptical of the truth of this to become a convert to this opinion, but it is necessary for a large body of persons to be so cognizant of this that they will have powerful influence in their private and corporate lives so to correct these evils.

The word "greed" signifies a multitude of things in life. Every person could name scores of instances in which greed prevails: Archbishop Worrell says in this letter, "when we cut out unselfishness, greed, dishonor, class hatreds and racial animosities from the hearts of men, and substitute the principle of co-operation in service for the common good in place of unrestricted competition for private and sectional advantage."

Christianity does hold forth the ideal in which men and women can conquer the conditions which are due to lapses from the moral standards in the various spheres, and that ideal is capable of realization. It is in this faith that the Church of England pastoral letter was written and read.

PRAYERS

Somewhere, beyond the walls of earth,
Beyond the deeps of space,
The little whispered prayers go up
To seek God's holy place.

A mother's prayers, a father's prayer,
A baby's stumbling words.
Oh, higher, higher they ascend,
Like strong-winged, joyous birds!

The prayers for life, the prayers for love,
For joy with every breath,
And sometimes, from a stricken soul,
A prayer that pleads for death.

Beyond the stars, beyond the suns
Mount prayers that soar and sing;
The prayers that prove man's kinship to
The God towards whom they wing!

FOUR FIRES ON ONE ALARM was the experience of the Port Hope fire department last Saturday, as reported by the Guide of that place. The department was called to attend to a blazing truck on the street. While working at the truck up drives a blazing automobile which requires the immediate attention of the fire fighters. Then to make it triply interesting the fire department truck backfired into a pool of gasoline and was immediately enveloped in flames, putting a big blaze under the assistant fire chief's car—so believe it or not Saturday was a big day for Port Hope's fire department.

RUSSIAN PRISON REFORM certainly swings to the extreme opposite of what prisons formerly were in that country. Russia's new punishments place much more workshop than prisons, with the prisoners permitted to go home over the week-end, and with wives and children permitted to come to the prison for long visits, play rooms and nurses being provided for the children. Wages are paid the prison workers, there is no distinctive prison garb, and apparently an earnest effort is made to convert the erring one and make a good citizen out of him. Presumably if this way ward one persists they give up trying to make a good citizen out of him and bury him in some mine of salt, iron or coal mines in which the Nihilists used to be incarcerated—a living death—or perhaps they are just removed as bad rubbish encumbering and blocking the road to progress. One thing about Russia, authority is certainly thorough there.

TO GIVE BIRTH to seven children at once is the proud boast of a Spanish mother in Georgetown, British Guiana, according to cable advices. Mother and children are reported as doing well and sure of Front Page mention in every newspaper in the world. Folks who bet on seven as a lucky number should send a present to the Senora Carola Perez and her seven children. Whether the father considers seven a lucky number, or not, is another matter.

WHAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT proposes to do with gold values and the Yankee dollar as expressed by him in his radio broadcast Sunday night is being freely debated on street corners, barber shop, and corner groceries. Just about as clear as mud to most of us and we are immensely cheered by a cable press despatch from London, England, which says: "A number of financial experts in Britain, after careful study of the latest message of President Roosevelt, announcing the government would buy and sell gold with the object of controlling the currency, confess they are unable to understand it." All of which takes a heap of misery off our mind, revealing, as it does, that we are not as dumb as we thought we might be.

The minister advertised for a man servant, and next morning a nicely dressed young man called.

"Can you start the fire and get breakfast by seven o'clock?" asked the minister.

"I guess so," answered the young man.

"Well, can you polish all the silver, wash the dishes and keep the house neat and tidy?"

"Say, parson," said the young fellow, "I came here to see about getting married —but if it's going to be as much work as all that, you can count me out right now."

"Tommy," said his mother, reprovingly, "what did I say I'd do to you if you remained out too late?"

Tommy thoughtfully scratched his head and said:

"Why, that's funny, ma, that you should forget it too, I can't remember, either."

OBSERVATION OF CHILDREN FOR DEFECTS

Eye-Strain is One Possible Defect to Be Regarded

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Now that school has fairly started it is an excellent time to observe your child closely for possible defects.

Any mother is likely to think she knows her child well, especially where his physical welfare is concerned. She is sure, for instance, that he eats his meals regularly and that he gets proper food for body and brain building. Her watchwise is certain about his hours for sleeping, and about his attitude toward school progress and the like.

Yet, no matter how conscientious a mother may be, there nevertheless is always the possibility—may, the probability—that something which she has overlooked at least one, if not several habits or peculiarities that eventually will seriously affect the child's general well-being. And not naturally, the chances of overlooking a really important factor are much greater if she has several children instead of one.

Take eye-strain as a case in point. If one is to wait until a child complains about headaches, digestive upsets and the like, before one has the child examined, or especially has the old ones changed, considerable damage may already have been done.

Adenoids and diseased tonsils may be holding a child back by poisoning his system. Yet they may not produce any marked or noticeable symptoms for years.

Often, too, bone, dental or kidney disease creep on so slowly that a parent cannot realize that they are in the making. Deformities of the feet and spine are other examples. Menstrual disorders in the adolescent girls are often neglected because the girl is bashful about talking on the subject and in fact she is scarcely able to judge what is normal and what is not.

A child may suffer a vacious tooth for a considerable time before he complains about it. Defective hearing may exist and not be mention be made of it. Since trouble or a deviated septum in the nose may be other physical defects that escape notice.

Then when it comes to the "glands of internal secretion" often spoken of as the "endocrine glands"—added difficulties arise because an unbalance of the glandular system reveals itself only in subtle ways.

A child may not be getting along well in school for any other reason than that a gland disturbance exists. Yet this condition can be discovered only by an expert versed in these matters, nervousness and excitability, as well as bad-temper and general insensibility, may have a similar basic cause.

The key to the discovery of all such possible defects whatever kind the course, the periodic health examination, a thoroughgoing examination by a competent physician may, and often does, bring to light astonishing facts about a child's condition.

Such an examination should be conducted at least once a year, an excellent time being the day after the child's birthday. By making the visit to the doctor coincide with a holiday of some kind, there is less likelihood of his being forgotten. The advice of the physician or dentist must be closely followed. For unless the little defects are corrected they may grow into real develop. In fact, most of child-hood's defects can be avoided if taken in time.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Inasmuch as it is assumed generally that prohibition will soon be written off the statue books, it would be well for everyone to acquaint himself with the effects of alcohol and, in particular, the food values of the various kinds of spirituous liquors. For this, popular literature is available in public libraries. Drinking is really an art and people should learn what and how to drink.

Calgary, Oct. 26.—(CP)— The Attorney-General of Alberta has intervened in a divorce case in which the Court of Appeal held recently in marriages between minors, and has given notice of motion for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Rendering ultra vires the 1931 amendments of the Marriage Act, the Court of Appeal last July 25, handed down judgment that the marriage of two parties, under the age of 21 years, without consent of their parents, could not be annulled on the plea there was no consent.

The Port Hope Guide says: "Belleville has picked up another one in the person of Forester and this probably is the player that Belleville mentions as being able to shoot a puck through a two-inch plank. Belleville plays of cocpoints for Barrie last year and did most of the scoring from his position. Belleville will line up with something like this: Goal, Winchester, point, Cowan; cover point, Forester; forwards, Marks, Kennedy, McGuire and McMillan." One of the Port Hope management was in town last week and some of the boys must have filled him up. That the way the story about the two-inch plank is a mistake, it is a three inch plank our man puts it through.

APPLE CROP NOT DAMAGED BY STORM, SAY GROWERS

Heavy Frost to Follow Snowstorm Only Danger

Trenton, Oct. 26 (Special).—A real old winter storm swept the district Tuesday doing a great deal of damage. Snow fell continuously for nearly twelve hours followed by a cold blizzard.

Snow shovels, ploughs and sleighs made their appearance about town yesterday.

The Bell Telephone Co. had several poles down in Marmora and Byron Streets and up till noon Wednesday over forty poles were still unusable and the difficulty was hard to be called in for assistance. The Trenton Public Utilities Commission had men out Tuesday night till after 3.30 replacing fallen wires and several men are still working on the storm damage.

The question of damage to the fruit of anxiety among the apple growers according to Mr. Stead James of the Trenton Cold Storage "But if we do get a frost no serious damage will be done to the apples unless blown from the tree by a high wind."

"Apples will stand a couple of frosts but the third one is usually fatal," stated Mr. James.

Mr. Geo. Wynn, prominent apple grower on the Wooler road told the press that morning that the apples are unharmed but damage to the trees is considerable.

Many trees had large limbs broken by the heavy weight of soft snow which covered the branches and frost may cause the death.

Driving was almost halted yesterday on the highway. Windshield wipers failed to work as the snow clung to the windows. No serious accidents were reported to the police although a large transport was overcome on the hill on the East Dundas Street Tuesday evening owing to the slippery road.

Farmers had thoughts of sigh years ago December 26th, 27, when a heavy freeze up ruined the apple crop of that district.

DEDICATION OF ORGAN IN ST. JOHN'S

Archdeacon Blagrave's Parish Installs New Instrument

BISHOP ON MUSIC

Peterboro, Oct. 25—Dedicating the new organ at St. John's Parish Church "to the glory of God and to the worship of His Name," the Right Rev. J. Lyons, M.A., D.D., third Bishop of Ontario, afterwards occupied the pulpit, and delivered an inspiring sermon to the large congregation present at the morning service on Sunday.

The Bishop's first word from the pulpit was one of congratulations to the rector (the Ven. Archdeacon R.-C. Blagrave, D.D.) wardens, and congregation of St. John's, upon having the justly proud possession of such a magnificent instrument to lead the worship of God in this picturesque church.

In extending a cordial welcome to Bishop Lyons on behalf of the congregation, Archdeacon Blagrave took the opportunity of expressing the gratification, especially of the Organ Fund Commission, to all who by their generosity and assistance had contributed to the new instrument. Special thanks were made to Frederic G. Mann, L. Mus., organist and choirmaster, to whose specifications, the rector said, the organ had been built.

Seeking his text from Revelation 4, 8-11, a passage of Scripture having reference to John's historical vision which Bishop Lyons felt were vivid pen pictures of the courts of God" and was a "splendid interpretation of real fellowship and worship," His Lordship felt it was an ideal towards which the church might well aspire.

In answer to the materialist who might say that it was merely a vision, and who would question what it had to do with "our worship here," the speaker remarked, "everything that is worthwhile has its beginning in idealism."

"What," he asked, "is the man or woman accomplishing today, who is not guided by some ideal?"

He spoke of the "ministry of music" as having a great deal to do with the fellowship of, worship.

"There is something about music," he observed, "that seems to raise us out of our ordinary selves, and lift us to higher realms of experience and bring us into touch with God. Music seems to satisfy an inner craving of humanity and carry us out of our everyday selves."

There was one danger, the Bishop warned, associated with the art of music. There was a danger, he thought, on the part of many people to regard the act of worship as a form of entertainment. Such people, he asserted, could not be found from time to church unless there was a special preacher or special music.

"That," he said," is simply because many of us have lost sight of the fellowship of worship." Worship, the Bishop said, yielded proportionately just what one put into it, as in all other phases of life.

He reminded his listeners that your choir reason for coming into God's House to worship is to address Him in word and sacrifice."

The organ, he noted, was an instrument through which the congregation might address God.

Special Music

Appropriately enough, special music was a feature of both morning and evening services. At the morning service the choral anthem, "I Will Give Thanks," was one of the chief numbers. Specially composed by Frederic G. Mann, the organist and choirmaster, the composition was first used by the choir at the centenary services of the church in 1927. The program of music for the day was as follows:

Morning—Te Deum in key of F, Frederic G. Mann; anthem, "I Will Give Thanks," centenary anthem by F. G. Mann; organ number, Grand Choeur in G, by Dr. R. Maitland; postlude, "Hallelujah", Handel.

Evening—Anthem, "Praise God in His Holiness," Geoffrey Shaw; organ numbers, Second Organ Concerto, Handel; Ave Maria, Arcadelt-Dickenson; Chorale, Es ist das Heil uns kommen her, Kirnberger; Caprice in B flat, Rotting; Berceuse, Aberdony, Stewart.

Built by the Franklin-Legs Organ Company, Limited, of Toronto, the new organ is two-manual, electro-pneumatic, (straight organ system), with thirty speaking stops and peal of chimes, twenty-five bells. All of the speaking pipes of the old organ which had served the congregation for the past 51 years were incorporated into the new instrument, and the tonal blend of the old pipes with the new is excellent.

Special features of the organ include an all-electric draw knob console (the first of its kind in Canada), and the adjustable combination action is operated by remote control, the adjusting action being in the organ chamber. Part of the great organ is enclosed in an expression box and three stops, namely: Clarion, Salicets, and chimes, which are also on the second touch register. The great organ has 12 stops and chimes, the swell organ 13 stops, and the pedal organ 6 stops.

Installation of the organ was made possible through the realization of a five-year subscription plan, which under the leadership of the rector, Archdeacon Blagrave, proved a success and resulted in the purchase of the organ on a cash basis. Much of the credit is due to Fred Bibb for his faithful efforts as secretary of the fund for the past five years.

Special emphasis was laid upon this excellent addition to the church's assets throughout yesterday's services, the occasion being made a festival one of dedication, one also of thanksgiving.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)
(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

For Favors Received

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me whether I am in the right or whether I am decidedly in the wrong?

My set and I have been going out very often with another couple, in the other man's car, and accepting lots of favors from the boy of the other couple, and when my last birthday this week, and I think it would be rather nice for my girl and me to give her a gift. What do you think?

P.

This would be a fine gesture and you could not do a more charming that it would show your appreciation of those many kindnesses. Too, I suggest that you plan other thoughtful things to do for their couple, so that all of the friendly gestures will not be on their side. People who know how hospitality constantly from friends should be most careful that they do their share of hospitality in some other form, in return. This is now the occasion for days when this question so often arises. The man who—woman, either, will get a fine bid fat up by constantly giving, and he is quite justified.

The Prospective Daughter-in-Law

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Our son who is away from home, writes that he is engaged to a young lady whom we have never met. How shall I should write to her or to her mother. Which would be correct, and please tell me what form?

2. Should I invite her to visit us? I should very much like to know her.

Mother

If. Yes, you should write both the young lady and her mother. This is one of the most charming kinds of letters to write, for in it you can reveal delightful things about yourself and also show how much interest this young lady into the family circle. It can be a most sweet and "motherly" letter, telling of your wish for her happiness, happiness of the care for your son, and your desire to meet her and to know her; and to offer to help you see, meet, of course, make your letter formal. It should be chatty, and in closing say just what you would like to say if you were talking with her.

2. Yes, by all means, ask her to come to see you, whenever it is possible for her to come for a visit, and, for instance, write to her mother and to her son and tell them definite date for a week-end. This would be the most hospitable thing that you could do.

Visiting Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly let me know if it is proper to enclose a calling card or name card when sending a gift, and if so what other way, can a house card be used?

Male Reader

Yes, it is proper and very convenient to enclose your visiting-card when you send a gift. If you wish, it may be sent as is, or, you may write a message on it. If you do write a message on it, you cross out your name on the card. When you know the person very well, you may simply wish to cross off both the Mr. and your last name. The written message, you see, makes a note of the card, and so we cross off the name, usually from courtesy.

A man uses a visiting-card also for calling....leaving it when a lady friend is not home. He sends a message of condolence on his card. He sends his card at the home of a friend who is ill, or at the home of a friend who has lost a dear member of the family. He sometimes sends it to another friend. He sends flowers to a debutante and sends his card with them. He incloses it, too, with a box of flowers or a corsage, if he does know to whom! There are many uses for a visiting-card and that is why I always urge that the card should be properly done.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

Toronto Exchange Became Active Turbulent Session in Early Part of Week—Trading Draggy—At One Time McIntyre Off $2 But Rallied to an 80 Cent Drop—Bonds Irregular in New York.

NEW YORK FINANCIAL

New York, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Stocks and staples were in a muddling mood during the major part of to-day's trading as somewhat fitful influence by market analysts to read between the lines of the government's new gold programme. There was a final drop now price for the yellow metal at $31.36 an ounce, up 10 cents from yesterday and 48 cents above the London rate. Equities, grains, cotton and most other commodities were little enthused, however, although they were not too mercenary. Bonds were irregular. Dome and McIntyre, continued to lead activity in the Canadian group, were inclined to ease internationals. International Nickel maintained a sharp course while Canadian Pacific slipped a shade. On the curb, Lake Shore Mines conceded 1-3 point and Hiram Walker sagged nearly 2. Dominion Government obligations ruled 1-8 higher to a fraction lower.

TORONTO MINES

TORONTO, Oct. 26. —(CP)— Traders were waiting for the secondary reaction, following the sharp run up of the last few sessions and stocks were drifting idly today on the Standard Mining Exchange. Some business was passing in a few of the issues, particularly Dome, Teck Hughes, Wright Hargreaves and in a few of the oilseeker golds.

McIntyre took quite a sharp swing down in the first trading, declining $46 for a loss of nearly $2 but the price improved to $47 before noon, where it showed a net drop of 80 cents. Dome held around $38.75 up 45 cents, Hollinger held a gain of 10 cents and Lake Shore was off 75 cents.

The Base Metal group was slightly lower with Noranda, Kirkland and Noranda off 5 to 10 cents each and Coast Copper 30 points.

Although the mining list had a cheery appearance from the opening ch a smattering of recessions, offerings were not sufficient to drive down the price level in General. Some of the big gold shares slipped and only recovered and other shares held to the upside throughout the early trading.

McIntyre was the weakest member of the big Gold group in the morning session and but only partly recovered its loss at mid-afternoon. Dome held a steady course. Lake Shore was a shade off at the opening but other leaders took losses of 5 to 25 cents.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 26.—(CP) — The Toronto Stock Exchange was below last Friday after the lunch-hour sessions of the early part of the week, outside of fair volume. Its Canadian Companies and a little business in the Golds and in trading were draggy. Prices in general were under Wednesday's close.

Base metals were pushed up to 30 in the first hour and then slowly worked off to 1-8 from a point or a point and Distillers Seagram sold off 1-4 to 1-2 point. Golds were unchanged, at 30 and 16 3-4 respectively.

Milling shares were unsteadied by the influence of the New York market where they were pressured by slip. Brazilian weakened 1-8, C.P.R. was down 3-4 and Fleet Aircraft Preferred 1-4. Bell Telephone was a strong spot in the utility group, firming at 119 while Montreal Power was down 1-2 and Steel of Canada 1-4. Banks were steady.

Trading dragged from the opening, with prices following a similar course to the New York market. Three days of boiling operations appeared to have exhausted the bet to a spot. The news also was not bullish. The advance in the gold price as Washington was small to cause a stir.

Distillery shares had a narrow tic downward in the first hour and firmed, at the close the rest of the board; in the third hour, but up till mid-afternoon there was no attempt to press the advance.

DRAMA CLUB NOW FORMED

B.C.I. Students Produce Three One Act Plays This Term

The success scored at the Dominion Dramatic Festival last season by the Belleville Collegiate Institute Dramatic Club, resulted in keen enthusiasm for drama this term. A dramatic club has been formed for the purpose of promoting dramatic interest among the students. It is the free definite dramatic organization in the six-year history of the new school. The aspiring actors are assuming the name "Green Room Club" and plan to produce "three one-act plays, "The Bride," under the direction of Miss R. I. Wellbanks, and "The Ghost of Barry Mahon" and "The Devil's Work Quilt," both directed by Miss N. P. Merry.

The programme of the new society will be wide in scope, including all the intricacies of play production, make-up and stage work. Last evening a regular meeting, Miss Rose Lazier, member of the club, gave an enlightening exhibition of the art of make-up. This is the first of a series of talks to be given by the more experienced members.

FOOTPRINTS BRING ARREST

Police Suspect And Arrest Man And Find Goods

Earl Lawrence, 25, of Frankford, was arrested by the Provincial Police in the town of Trenton late Wednesday afternoon after they had tracked him through the snow from the scene of an alleged break-in at Frankford the night previous when Scott's grocery store was burglarized and the safe later opened before Magistrate Mikel and was remanded for one week. He was charged with breaking, entering and stealing goods to the value of over $15.00.

The robbery was discovered by Mr. W. H. Scott early Wednesday morning when he opened his grocery store on the main street of Frankford. County Constable Lockwood was notified and immediately called the Provincial Police. It was later found that the intruder had entered by breaking a side window. Groceries, cigarettes, alarm clocks and other articles of value were taken.

The retreat of the man was easily followed in the snow. The police followed foot prints for nearly two miles to a point where the stolen goods were found cached in an abandoned house south of Frankford. No signs of the thief were seen near the shack when the police arrived. Further footprints in the snow led the police to the highway. Police suspected Lawrence and after the arrival at Trenton arrested him. The Provincial Police allege that the accused man admitted the breaking, entering and robbing the store.

No later than last Saturday night another grocery store in Frankford was robbed but the thief successfully evaded the police at that time.

Suspicion pointed to Lawrence by the large boots evidently used by the man, who left prints in the snow.

BOY FELL OFF WHEEL INTO PATH OF CAR

Handle-bar riding with an older chum, who piloted it along Highland Avenue, almost had fatal results early last evening for nine-year-old Freddie Miller of this city, when the bicycle skidded on the icy road near the Devil's Elbow as they were about to make a turn and threw the small passenger to the road almost in front of an oncoming car. Only the prompt application of brakes and a sudden swerve, which sent the car into a ditch saved the small boy from being run over as he lay on the road. After stopping his machine the driver of the car brushed the boy off, learned his name and after warning he was unhurt, sent him home.

CURRENT SPORT

In Canada to at last have a major league baseball club!

For some years past there have been rumors and rumbling over the big league horizon relating to the St. Louis American League franchise being transferred to Montreal but nothing ever materialized along such lines. With the recent passing of Phil Ball, owner of the Browns, once again the cry is raised—"Montreal is to be the future home of the Browns".

About the only stalemate to substantiate this move, however, have recently been issued from the Mooney City when it was announced following Ball's death, that the heirs of his estate would dispose of the American League franchise as long sponsored by Mr. Ball. It is rumored that major league baseball had cost Phil Ball well over three million dollars but, as he once was quoted as saying: "I have had three million dollars worth of fun." When Mr. Ball received a bid, Rogers Hornsby as manager it was thought by many, that at last the Browns were headed towards a pennant.

The future of American League baseball in St. Louis will assuredly be followed with interest by Canadian lovers of baseball as the transferring of the Browns to possibly Montreal would mean by Canadian standards it is just think, we may soon be able to hop the old railer eastward to see the Senators, Yankee, Athletics et all in action just "this nation east of Belleville". What a break!

We understand, that a special train has been chartered by the Varsity football fans in Kingston to take them to Kingston on Saturday next for the big Varsity-Queens game. The train, which is being operated over the C.N.R. lines, will stop at Belleville about 11.30 a.m. Saturday to pick up those desirous of taking in the big game. The fare from Belleville and return has been set at one dollar.

Beg with the pardon, it seems having scheduled right here in Belleville between the R.C.I. seniors and the Peterboro Collegiate squad many lovers of the fall classic will stay at home and take in this all important tilt. The local juniors will be the Trenton kids here Friday with the junior group leadership at stake.

In regards to Saturday's senior game here we understand that Coach Shiels is making a few changes in his squad and Jim Reynolds may be moved up into a middle position, with Morgan and Hiffy playing the flanks on the inside positions. Other changes in the line may be noted. It is highly improbable. It is not likely that the local squad will ever turn in quite as impressive exhibition as they did last Saturday in Kingston. The boys are on the down-hill's hope they get a real bad game and "get it over with".

"Jake" Turner, the genial manager of the Picton baseball franchise, dropped in the editorial room yesterday en route home with an invitation to the banquet being held at the Bell Hotel, Picton, on Friday evening when the sport lovers of Prince Edward County will gather to honor their baseball team. The Welsh Trophy, emblematic to the championship of the Bay of Quinte League, the Tip Top Tailor Cup, emblematic to the intermediate champions of Eastern Ontario and the prizes and medals given by the Picton Fair all be distributed to the Picton club and players. Many baseball notables from all parts of Eastern Ontario have been invited to pay homage to a club, that proved a credit to not only their own community but to the whole of Eastern Ontario.

The accompanying paragraph was observed published in the society column of the Lindsay Post following last Saturday's football game, with the defeat of the Scugog. We cannot vouch for authenticity of the social gem, but here it is:

There was one young lady at the rugby match on Saturday, one of Belleville's rooters, who we would advise to stay home the next time it the game excites her and causes her to speak nervous strain as it appeared to. Someone on the Whitby-Oshawa jersey must have meant a great deal to her for she followed the play so closely and so and drawn the field about three yards out from the sidelines. Once or twice when one or other of the players got hurt as they seemed to do a great deal in the game, she was seen to shed several big tears and as the play went from one end of the field to the other she made her way, shoving all people in front of her aside, and got closer at times than would have been wrong for her had someone made an unexpected play. We have seen many excited girls at a rugby match but this young lady was the first we have seen who was quite so excited. Her nervous system may suffer if she continues to follow the games too closely. One remark that was passed in our hearing was to the effect that "If I was a fellow out there on that field I'd thank her to keep back."

ARGOS PULLING FOR MONTREAL

Ottawa Must be Beaten to Give Other Teams Chance

Toronto, Oct. 26—(CP)— Montreal's football team, which has been getting along nicely without any support whatever from the Argonauts, will carry the wholehearted backing of the Scullers into battle Saturday against arch rival Roughriders. There is, of course, an ulterior motive behind this switch of Toronto tastes.

While Argos are playing Hamilton Tigers here in one-half the big four men, Roughriders and Wheelers will be deciding the immediate fate of the pursuing carnmen as well as seasonal supremacy between themselves. Montreal can keep both Montreal and Toronto in the running with a victory over Ottawa. It will look pretty hopeless for Wheelers and Argos if they are beaten.

Having done all manner of surprising things so far, Roughriders are pretty clear favorites to repeat. They have whipped the Tigers in Hamilton and Argos and Wheelers in Ottawa. If they can win one of their two remaining road games, it should be simple, for Wally Masters' men to win.

Except for a pre-season defeat by Sarnia, Wheelers have not dropped a home game in more than two years. The team will probably be at full strength, Ray Irvin is dieting on the strength of their 21-2 win over Tigers last week, will start as major favorite to repeat the win here. If Wheelers go what the Scullers hope they will not beat Ottawa, Argos face the tough job of whipping the Roughriders here and Montreal away to finish in a possible three-cornered tie for the lead.

This won't work out, however, if Hamilton springs a surprise by trimming the Argonauts tomorrow.

With all four teams still in the chase, the intercollegiate schedule reaches the vital point Saturday. The twin leaders, Queen's and Western of Toronto clash at Kingston and the loser will be on even terms with the winner of the McGill-Western game at London.

Team Coached by Woman Doing Well

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 26—(CP)—A woman coach, Mrs. Ruth Sheldon Hosbrook, widow of the late Dr. Foster A. Lambert, for years coach of football and basketball teams of the United States Football Rules Committee.

Two afternoon's each week Mrs. Lambert directs practice for her boys. Three sons of them, Sheldon coach, head linesman, referee and umpire.

Across the field the sound of her voice is heard. "Get down, Sheldon, that man out of there." Then the whistle and the whine of the mean Mrs. Lambert. The United States Football Rules give a tactful lecture on what should and should not be played.

Her boys, haven't done so well in their games. They lost 34 to 0, 13 to 0 and 6 to 0 in order, but, study Mrs. Lambert, they will get better. Lambert and her boys are confident they are improving and will start winning soon.

No More Piles

You Can End Your Awful Misery Quick Without Cutting or Doctor Bills

Thousands of Pile sufferers do not know that the cause of Piles is internal—lack of circulation of blood in the lower bowel.

That is the scientific truth about Piles—the reason why salves and suppositories do not give permanent relief, why cutting does not remove the cause.

Yet inching, bleeding or protruding Piles will only go when you actually remove the cause—and not one minute before. External treatments can't do this—an internal medicine should do it. HEMROID, the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, has a good record in stores everywhere, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, drives out congested blood, heals and relieves the almost dead parts.

Dr. Leonhardt's HEMROID has almost unbelievable record of success right in this city. So why waste time on external remedies or worry about an operation when J. S. McKown invites every Pile sufferer to try HEMROID with guarantee of money-back if it does not end their Piles, no matter how stubborn the case!

WEAR DISTINCTIVE HATS

St. Louis, Oct. 26.—(CP)—It's deer hunting season in Missouri's rugged Ozarks and a hunter without a red hat isn't well dressed.

A red hat—or at least red feathers in a hat that isn't red—is supposed to be the signal to other hunters that the wearer isn't a deer. Not a single fatality was reported last year and red hats and red feathers were given much of the credit.

From the Hockey Training Camps

When Toronto Maple Leaf players are penalized this season Coach Dick Irvin won't have to depend entirely on "Hairbreath Harold" Cotton and "Ace" Bailey to keep the puck out of the Leaf end of the rink until his team is back to full strength, Ray Irvin is drilling most of his staff of forwards in the fine art of "hagging," a key point in hockey business at which few players is adept.

Last season Cotton and Bailey carried much of the load of killing time and when Bailey was injured Cotton was the man on the ice most. A few times Cotton was the player penalized and then it was just too bad. Irvin plans to have others of his forwards perfect himself in the manoeuvre so that no matter who is waved to the bench he will still have players capable of fighting off opposing forwards.

A feature of lead workouts at Kitchener has been the fine defensive work Freddy Robertson, up from Syracuse, has displayed. "Hagg" Day and "Red" Horner have been shooting plenty of power, but Robinson has been as good as any of the Leaf regular defencemen in practice.

Coach Joe Simpson is making sure we won't mix up his forward lines. Simpson, behind Coach Dawes, has differently colored sweaters for his three forward lines and can change them by shouting "Blues ahead" or "Whites ahead."

Simpson is particularly pleased with the showing of his "kid" front line of Fred Herbert, Dave Shrimpe and L. Jackson. "Bullet Joe" claims the trio should be regulars before the close of the season.

Ottawa Senators strengthened their staff yesterday with Albert Leduc. Canadiens defencemen only to lose Nick Wasnie through injury. He will be out of the game for several days.

NEWSPAPERMAN NOW IN FILMS

Managing Editor of Daily Mail, London, Tenders Resignation

London, Oct. 26—Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express announced the resignation of Beverley Baxter, the Canadian managing editor who will join the British Gaumont Film Corporation.

Mr. Baxter's spectacularly successful career with the Daily and Sunday Express newspapers dated from 1920, shortly after he terminated his services with the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

At the same time Mr. Baxter declared his belief the British film is on the verge of a great adventure. "Its future development is going to prove a fascinating labor," he said. His position was not made known.

Mr. Baxter, was born in Toronto 47 years ago and he served with a Canadian Army company from 1905 until the outbreak of the war. He was a lieutenant with the Canadian Engineers from 1915 to 1919. He became managing editor of the Daily Express for years after he had joined it.

His wife is the former Edith Letson of Vancouver.

B. C. MOURNS PASSING OF GREAT FIGURE

Hon. W. J. Bowser, K. C. Former Premier Stricken From Heart Attack

ELECTION CONTINUES

In 2 Constituencies Where He Was Running Will be Deferred

Vancouver, Oct. 26.—(CP)—Stricken in the midst of the political strife which had been his life during the great part of his career, Hon. W. J. Bowser, K.C., lay dead today while British Columbia mourned the passing of a great figure.

Political and public men paid tribute to the former Premier and Attorney General who died here yesterday from a heart attack.

"All British Columbia bows reverently to the memory of a man who for more than 30 years fought for it and at last gave his life in a final great endeavor in her service," stated Premier S. F. Tolmie, the man whose government, Mr. W. J. Bowser was trying to defeat. He was a fighter with whom opponents considered it an honor and a privilege to measure strength, added the Premier.

The elections in which the political leader had fought so hard and which probably hastened his death, will take place November 13, as scheduled, but not in the constituencies where he had been nominated, Victoria City and Vancouver Centre.

These two ridings, electing six members, will not vote until November 27. And in the contused situation with more than 200 candidates entering, the withholding of the decision in six seats may have important consequences.

The funeral will be held here Saturday at 2 p.m. The body will be cremated.

Few and Ardent Party Workers.

It was the fate of W. J. Bowser, K.C., to begin his political life as one chiefly responsible for establishing party government in British Columbia and to close his career fighting it.

Forty-two years ago a lawyer, fresh from Dalhousie University, Halifax, he reached the Pacific coast with a burning interest in politics and a firm belief in his own destiny. He had schooled himself for a political career at Dalhousie where he was the first student ever to be prime minister in the mock parliament. The leader of the "opposition" was Richard McBride.

When Bowser reached Vancouver McBride was in New Westminster, and the new arrival supported to his opponent of college days the two might do much in politics. Then began a partnership which was the basis of a government which endured from 1903 to 1916 under the leadership of Premier McBride (later Sir Richard) and in declining days with Premier Bowser at its head.

He had been attorney-general from 1907 to 1909 and in 1909 to 1910 was finance minister. He sat in the Legislature from 1907 to 1924.

The name of Bowser, who, Mr. Bowser led the Conservative ticket in Vancouver through a strenuous campaign, laid the way for formation of a Conservative Government.

Mr. Bowser's government was defeated in the election of 1916 and he personally lost his seat in the Legislature in 1924. He retired from public life in 1926 when a Conservative convention at Kamloops declared against the election of Hon. Leon Ladner former M.P. for Vancouver South. Hon. F. F. Pardee, now premier was chosen leader.

In 1931 it was rumored Mr. Bowser, who had retired from politics in 1924 would be appointed lieutenant-governor. He declined the offer however, and those who knew him well said his inclinations were not in the realm of active politics.

In the Spring of 1933 he was requested by large numbers of friends to enter the field again and after many conferences did decide to lead a non-party group.

Mr. Bowser was born in Rexton, N.B., birthplace of the British statesman, Bonar Law, the son of William and Margaret Bowser.

On September 4, 1895, he married Lorinda Doherty of Vancouver, who died July 12, 1928. There were no children.

NEW WAY TO TREAT NICKEL

German Representative Here to Meet Nickel Authorities

Sudbury, Oct. 25.—(CP)—In Sudbury to buy raw nickel for a German metallurgical firm, Rysten Berg said today that until he knew for what the metal could be bought he would be unable to say whether the new refining method developed by his company would be cheaper than that used by International Nickel.

The company, I represent, the J. G. Farbenindustrie Corporation of Frankfort, has developed a new method of refining nickel," he said. "I am here to negotiate with the International Nickel Company and Falconbridge Nickel Mines for the purchase of a quantity of nickel matter to test our new process."

The new German method, he said was chemical, somewhat like the old Mond process. He made no claims for it, saying only that he had not yet had a chance to compare costs with the International Nickel Company's process.

Sell Foreign Rights

Intention of the Farbenindustrie is to dispose of foreign rights to its process, retaining only the rights to refine nickel in Germany, but his mission is not in any way connected with the disposition of manufacturing rights.

Butter and egg markets continued higher at Montreal yesterday. Cheese, potatoes and poultry held unchanged.

The butter market was generally quoted 19 1-4c per lb. for cartots or Berg said today that until he knew 19 1-2c for No. 1 Finests, 19 boxes. The lightness of fresh arrivals, and demonstration of speculative holders to sell at a loss, together with a better demand, have strengthened the market this week.

The egg market was again featured by light receipts of fresh eggs, arrivals for the day being only 307 cases; same day last week, 356; same day last year, 810. Graded Ontarios in l.c.l. lots were being quoted 37-38c for extras, 31-32c for firsts; 26-27c for pullets and 18 1-2c to 19 1-2c for seconds. Storage eggs which are nearing it grades, volume owing to decreasing available supplies of fresh eggs, are 31c for extras, 29c for firsts and 16-18 1-2c for seconds, out of storage, as is. Further sale for export are reported.

The cheese market held unchanged at 9 1-4c to 9 1-2c for Ontarios, and 9 1-4c to 9 7-8c for Quebec specials, f.o.b. country points.

The potato market was quoted steady at 75-80c for New Brunswick Green Mountains, and 65c to 70c for Quebecs, per 80-lb bags.

The poultry market was steady.

ARMS PARLEY WILL ADJOURN

Date of Resumption on December 4th is Suggested

Geneva, Oct. 25—The Steering Committee recommended today that the Disarmament Conference be adjourned until December 4 as reports circulated that Germany would submit proposals under which she could return to the parley and the League of Nations.

These reports, originating in German circles, said the Reich's position would be set forth after the plebiscite elections on November 12, called for when the nation's intention to withdraw from both Assemblage was announced.

This recommendation was made with the understanding that the plenary begin on that date if the president, Arthur Henderson, and the committee are convinced sufficient progress has been made in the meantime and it would be useful to then convene.

MARMORA TWP. PIONEER IS IN HER 90TH YEAR

Mrs. N. Murphy Recalls Happy Days At School

Marmora—At the junction of the Cordova Road and the Beaver Valley road, about four miles from Marmora village is a cheery looking red frame residence which for about forty years has been the dwelling place of one of the oldest ladies in Marmora Township. This lady is Mrs. Maria Murphy, widow of Bernard Murphy, who predeceased her several years ago. She attained to her 90th birthday on August 9, which the 70th anniversary of her wedding occurred on June 10th of this year. Her marriage certificate, well preserved, states that she was married when a resident of the Township of Madoc to Barney Murphy of the Township of Marmora, by the Reverend Father J. Massey and Rev. Thomas Campbell, by the Rev. Geo. M. Wenmaker by the Rev. Geo. Jones of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the concluding declaration being "and may their future seldem days be same".

For her years, Mrs. Murphy is quite active about the house and is not content unless she is always up to and in her kitchen, who resides with her. In the sunny domestic duties of the day. Her hearing and vision are slightly affected and one of her few regrets is that she cannot read so freely as in earlier years or sew so nimbly.

She is the daughter of the late John and Sarah Doyle and on the maternal side is a descendant of the Van Wart family. Her father was a nephew of the late General Murray, who owns a large estate in Yorkshire, England, a fact which afforded her some pride. Her father was a school teacher, who taught in Prince Edward County and in the Scotch Settlement near Madoc, as well as in the Corner school house in Marmora Township. He was considered an excellent fiddler in his day.

School Days

Mrs. Murphy enjoys telling reminiscences of her school days. The residence of her father was about a mile away from the school and while he was home for dinner the scholars used to have noon hour dances to their great delight. The late Denis Crawford, who was a fellow scholar used to provide the music. This custom was not confined to this particular school, but existed in this district and in all other schools in the township had their merry dances at noon.

In her younger years, Mrs. Murphy resided with her aunt and uncle. The death of her brother James occasioned a walk of five or six miles to her home. On her return walk she was within two miles of her home and carrying a parcel of meat, when a lone wolf followed her. "I just walked calmly and said "and the animal never bothered me."

Though she is a hearty eater for a woman of her years, she has her preferences. She prefers black, to green tea and also pork, to beef. She is particularly fond of photographs and enlargements and is very pleased to show photos of her relatives to the Intelligencer staff.

Besides her daughter Mrs. Della Quinn, a son, Ira, completes the household. A son John resides at Edmonton and there are two more daughters far removed from their devoted mother in the persons of Mrs. John McGuire of Lawrence City, Mass. and Mrs. James Arthurs of Port Arthur.

GILLETTE SAFETY RAZOR CO.
OF CANADA, LIMITED - MONTREAL

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Wallace

He had just entered the dining room with a wracking looking cane. The couple had no time in getting on the dance floor. Reece's glance swept the restaurant, and he saw Eve at once. She looked sexy but the crowd was not large and before the dance was concluded she was forced to pass Reece's cool of recognition. Evidently he was determined to continue their honeymoon, alone. A shadow of apprehension clouded Eve's sky. She hoped Reece had not noticed her wedding ring. "Let's go now, Dick," she said when they returned to their table. He agreed without asking any questions.

But Reece was not to be disposed of so readily. He approached, bowing, and said, "You remember Mr. Bayless."

Eve felt a sudden panic but managed to introduce the men with out disclosing the fact that Dick was her husband. Before Reece could begin conversation the actor led her away with Dick.

After all, she reasoned, it was not strange that Reece should be there. Much business was conducted between Lake City and Cincinnati and Reece a salesman. lived in the latter city. The mirrored dining room of the Hotel Miramar was an attractive restaurant and it was natural for him to dine there. But Eve felt she wanted to leave the Miramar before her joy was spoiled.

So she said to Dick, "I think, darling, it might be fun to look for an apartment tomorrow. We will get up early and not lose any time."

She could not resist one guarded glance toward Reece's table as she Dick guided her toward the door. There was something sinister in Reece's dark eyes as his glance met and locked with hers. . .

Eve wore the gown of pale gold lace that she had worn on her visit to the night club.

CHAPTER 8

There were several columns of advertisements of furnished apartments for rent in the Sunday newspaper. Eve and Dick had decided to rent a furnished place because Dick was only temporarily located in Lake City. The entire office of the company he worked for were in Cincinnati but Dick had been in Lake City for more than a year superintending the construction of a theatre combined with a huge office building. The theatre was to open in March but it would be June before everything would be completed. Dick hoped his next job also would be in Lake City. Eve refused even to consider for possibility that her husband might be sent elsewhere.

The first apartment they visited was impressive. Eve glanced about the reception room and approved its furnishings. Then when she had learned how high the rent was she still wanted to live there.

But Dick would not listen to her argument that she could pay part of the rent. "No," he said, "we're going to live within my income and save some of it too, because I have plans for the future. It takes capital before anyone can become efficient."

The next addresses on the list proved equally discouraging.

Last they stopped before an old house on the opposite side of the city. It stood at the corner of a main thoroughfare and was in a quiet neighborhood.

"This house needs paint," Eve objected. "There's no use buying or renting to go inside. Look —the front steps are broken, too. I like the place next door better."

"That house next door is the home of Mrs. Sarah Dunning, John Worth," Dick told her. "I used to room a few blocks from there."

The woman who owned the house was a widow. She showed them some and daughter occupied one section of the rambling old mansion and the rest had been divided into apartments. Once inside, Eve had to admit the charm of the place. The walls were thick and the ceilings high. The woodwork varnished and the heavy ivory woodwork was magnificent. There was an unfurnished room at the front on the main floor. It had cream colored walls and ceiling, and doors. The windows reaching to the floor made a spacious room and ruffled curtains were tied back to permit a view of the snow-covered lawn.

"We have a fine garden in summer and hollyhocks and all sorts of old-fashioned flowers," Mrs. Brooks announced. "The garden was my husband's hobby."

"Why these rooms are lovely! We must take them", gasped Eve, much to her own surprise. "And I think we can move in today."

They returned to the Miramar, checked out and showed their belongings into the rumble seat of the roadster. Then Dick stopped at a delicatessen for chicken sandwiches, coffee, a bottle of cream and a pint of sherbert.

Mrs. Brooks let him make the coffee in her big, old-fashioned kitchen. She loaned them some dishes and cups and Eve set out the food. It was fun eating by candle light she declared. Dick beamed at her. "Tomorrow," he said, "we'll have a real dinner in our first home, won't we, sweetheart?"

"Why yes," said Eve soberly. She had put the slightest idea how it was to be managed since she had to be at the office until five o'clock. As she waited for the trolley at the corner next morning she turned to look at the house. It was downright shabby from the outside. Eve was not so pleased with her new home as she had been the night before.

But she forgot all that in a tremendously busy morning. At noon she purchased an ironclad linen luncheon set but there was no time for further shopping.

"Oh, bother!" she told herself. "I can't do everything. We'll just have

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

"Has some candy, Eve?" And with a smile he held out a box of chocolate centered butter cream candy. He grudgingly allowed herself one of them. "It's the only kind of candy I really care for," she explained. "This and fruit cake. You'll never have to bother making candy and fancy cakes for me; just keep a homemade fruit cake on hand." "Can't that interesting?" commented Eve.

But Dick apparently missed the sarcasm. "I'm not going to be difficult to cook for," he agreed. "Eve's heart sank. Why, with all her years of studying, had she never learned anything at all about cooking?

Dick threw a leg over the side of his arm chair, lighted his pipe and went on, "It's going to be nice to have a wife to cook for me. I used to get an hour of food and restaurant food that sometimes I've taken an apartment with a kitchenette but no I could do my own cooking."

"Indeed Where did you learn to cook?" she asked in a small voice.

"Oh, in the woods. Spent a summer up north peeling bark for a medicine company when I was a kid. Fine training."

"You like the woods, don't you?" Eve asked, in spite of herself.

"I'll take up north some time since; tell you don't like it too. Dick said in answer. "I used to go up in the fall with a group of friends. But that was different. Then we stopped at a lodge and there were cooks to prepare the food. That was wonderful, too. But you never really learn the woods until you have to fend for yourself."

"How much did you pay for that cooker," Eve demanded suddenly.

When he told her she gasped. "Why, you could easily have bought a cook for itself in gas saved," he defended. "But even if it didn't, there's the convenience! When you get home at night you won't have much bother getting a meal this way."

Dick thought he heard Eve mutter under her breath, "Boiled cabbage, tureine, spaghetti—!"

"What's that?" he demanded sharply.

"Well, my mother always cooked boiled vegetables when I wasn't at home. You might eat them at noon if you like them so well," she said sagrily.

"But you can't buy a vegetable dinner the way I like it," he answered. "And besides I was hoping to get away from restaurant cooking after I married."

BRONCHITIS BANISHED AFTER 30 YEARS TORTURE

The sanking case of Mr. Thomas Gulf, Toronto, Ont., is the talk of everyone who knows him.

His complete relief after almost overnight from Bronchitis of thirty years standing is regarded as nothing short of a miracle by friends and neighbours. Read what Mr. Gulf says:

"From the time I was a small boy until the age of thirty-two, I was never free from a hacking cough night and day. Doctors told me I was suffering from chronic bronchitis — that there was no permanent relief. One day I saw an advertisement for BUCKLEYS MIXTURE. The word bronchitis arrested my attention. I purchased a bottle. It gave me relief. I bought two more, and my cough left me completely. That happened six years ago, and the cough has never returned."

BUCKLEYS MIXTURE will give you the same instant relief from the stranaling tortire of Bronchitis, and it acts like a fish on coughs, colds and flu. Why not get a bottle today? Buckley's is sold everywhere. Refuse substituter

"What you wanted was a first class cook and not a wife!" Eve accused. "You should have considered my qualifications more thoroughly if you wanted a mere cook."

"Well," Dick answered slowly, "I did expect to get a home."

He had had no dinner and she felt hungry. Hence she answered sarcastically. "No doubt! A home filled with little cabbages. Well, I've heard of women who read nothing but cook books but I don't intend to spend my life trying to disguise groceries!"

Dick took a long puff on his pipe before answering. "I'm beginning to wonder," he said, "just what you expected to get into a home when you married. What were your ideas of the responsibilities of marriage, anyhow?"

Eve could not answer. She had thought herself beyond reproach. That there might be something to be said for Dick's side of the argument also, she had not realized.

He put on his hat and coat and went out for a walk.

"Where are you going?" Eve demanded.

"Out for a breath of air," he told her.

"I should think you'd need it when the house is filled with cabbage!"

He disappeared without answering. Eve burst into tears but nevertheless hurried to the kitchen and helped herself to some food. She was frightened because Dick had left her. Her marriage was taking on an entirely new aspect. Was it going to be the lark she had anticipated?

Towards them all marched a hundred ebon warriors, Taking short cuts, Tarzan of the Apes, following the Tarzan's famed Watusi. With them came Zayd, Atesh at the head of the column. A KISSING COP

By RUBY GRUBER

Jimmy Barnes smiled back languid blonde girl leaned over the pins boards, reading a magazine. Proudly he carried the message to the car, going back for two thick mugs of coffee. The girl his viewed with admiration the coffee to the last drop. Then she sighed. "Gee! you are a good kisser, Jimmy."

"Just a lonesome copper," Jimmy modestly.

"Are all cops like you?" the girl asked, smiling.

"Say, it's lucky you didn't happen along here last night. I was with Gus and he is a handful, boy! Gus would let you walk to New York or Texas." Jimmy continued sagely after a deep inhale of his cigarette. "Gus is the best fellow in line for the Chief's job and, just to show you what kind of a guy he is, he signed his brother last week for beating a car on a bill. He'll be good in the force, and can make or break one of us patrol officers."

"I don't think I would like this Gus," the girl smiled, "as well as I do you."

"Gus is all copper," Jimmy defended.

"And you?" the girl leaned nearer as the car swung back to the light way.

Jimmy laughed, as he answered. "I haven't been on the force as long as Gus."

The voice broke from the radio speaker. "Chief Calwell speaking: attention men. Judge Sparks has been found murdered in his office; fifty thousand dollars in cash and currency missing from the safe. The murderer has an Ace's card. Pick up all suspicious characters."

"How thrilling!" the girl exclaimed. "And you have spoken to me, up. An 2 suspicious enough to be called a character?"

"You are suspiciously sweet," Jimmy's cruising speed was falling short . . .

A few minutes later, Gus, the handsome cop came tearing down the highway. A parked car by the roadside caused him to reach for his siren. He stayed his hand as the headlights showed the car to be Jimmy's.

With a muttered oath, Gus skidded and came to a stop, thinking: That young fool! His first night out and the bandit on the run a month, a murder with the murderer escaping, a fiend in the Glen, with a truck load of chickens, and—

Gus angrily swung open the car door. Jimmy was sitting on the running board; his face grin as he nonchalantly smoked a cigarette knuckle.

"What's the trouble here? Why ain't you on your patrol?" Gus asked.

"I just knocked out Judge Bryant's murderer; the money in the briefcase," Jimmy wiped his knuckles with his handkerchief.

Gus climbed his light inside the car; a huddled figure on the seat. Turn to you then. "Good lord, it's a woman! No—that's a wig! It's a man, Jimmy, my boy, how did you know she was a man?"

"I—I—well, you see, Gus," Jimmy stammered, "when I k-k-kissed her—I n-n-noticed ah-she needed a sh-shave."

A KISSING COP

By RUBY GRUBER

Jimmy Barnes smiled back languid blonde girl leaned over the pins boards, reading a magazine. Proudly he carried the message to the car, going back for two thick mugs of coffee. The girl his viewed with admiration the coffee to the last drop. Then she sighed. "Gee! you are a good kisser, Jimmy."

"Just a lonesome copper," Jimmy modestly.

"Are all cops like you?" the girl asked, smiling.

"Say, it's lucky you didn't happen along here last night. I was with Gus and he is a handful, boy! Gus would let you walk to New York or Texas." Jimmy continued sagely after a deep inhale of his cigarette. "Gus is the best fellow in line for the Chief's job and, just to show you what kind of a guy he is, he signed his brother last week for beating a car on a bill. He'll be good in the force, and can make or break one of us patrol officers."

"I don't think I would like this Gus," the girl smiled, "as well as I do you."

"Gus is all copper," Jimmy defended.

"And you?" the girl leaned nearer as the car swung back to the highway.

Jimmy laughed, as he answered. "I haven't been on the force as long as Gus."

The voice broke from the radio speaker. "Chief Calwell speaking: attention men. Judge Sparks has been found murdered in his office; fifty thousand dollars in cash and currency missing from the safe. The murderer has an Ace's card. Pick up all suspicious characters."

"How thrilling!" the girl exclaimed. "And you have spoken to me, up. An 2 suspicious enough to be called a character?"

"You are suspiciously sweet," Jimmy's cruising speed was falling short . . .

A few minutes later, Gus, the handsome cop came tearing down the highway. A parked car by the roadside caused him to reach for his siren. He stayed his hand as the headlights showed the car to be Jimmy's.

With a muttered oath, Gus skidded and came to a stop, thinking: That young fool! His first night out and the bandit on the run a month, a murder with the murderer escaping, a fiend in the Glen, with a truck load of chickens, and—

Gus angrily swung open the car door. Jimmy was sitting on the running board; his face grin as he nonchalantly smoked a cigarette knuckle.

"What's the trouble here? Why ain't you on your patrol?" Gus asked.

"I just knocked out Judge Bryant's murderer; the money in the briefcase," Jimmy wiped his knuckles with his handkerchief.

Gus climbed his light inside the car; a huddled figure on the seat. Turn to you then. "Good lord, it's a woman! No—that's a wig! It's a man, Jimmy, my boy, how did you know she was a man?"

"I—I—well, you see, Gus," Jimmy stammered, "when I k-k-kissed her—I n-n-noticed ah-she needed a sh-shave."

Ramblings . . . . . .

Radio has not spelled the doom of the old time business as was predicted but a few short years ago it would. On the contrary, the big stores of today are the song sheets across music store counters have shown a remarkable recovery during the past year or so. Some of the present hits are enjoying the greatest sales. "In the Valley of the Moon", since it was first brought out and plugged to popularity last spring has to date enjoyed the sale of 210,000 copies, a remarkable record for longevity in these days of popular songs. The second hit is "The Lady in Red Round Up", now sung by everyone, will soon pass the 100,000 mark, and "The Big Bad Wolf," is rapidly approaching that total, while "Say it only in dots" 300,000 and "Songs of Bonse" and "Stormy Weather," two more favorites of radio audiences and music counterites have not yet exceeded the 200,000 mark but are headed that way. There must still be a lot of pianos in the country.

Humble citizen rises in revolt. After years of genteel floundering in the dark depths of trouser cuffs for odds keys, dropped coins and collar buttons and after having spent a good part of his time when not otherwise occupied emptying the handbags and city dust and fluff from the trouser cuffs after each day's work he asks why should trouser cuffs be turned up at all when it rains? Search us for that matter, why sooner cuffs at all? In a well as the Canadian papers, the quaint letter to this department he remarks on the utter futility of things in general. Why, for example, these long skirts little buttons on the coat sleeve? . . . . Why, should there be pockets in a lady's dress sleeves? And why are shirt sleeves always so long? Is this done to boost the sale of arm garters . . . and ask the shirt manufacturers in Canada who with the arm band manufacturers? Why doesn't some loyal Canadian set the fashion of wearing the old-fashioned, indestructible rubber collars again, he further asks. Here's a peeve, a peeve shot, he signs himself, "yours for more pockets and more to put in them."

A reader who asked some time ago what ever became or the old-fashioned foot scrapers that used to be so handy at entrances to stores and nearly every home has been answered by another reader who states that at least one perfect specimen of the old iron scraper can be found in any way into an uptown second hand store where it basks in the window in all its old time glory. Quite unconsciously, the second hand store man has given it a prominent position among the antiques.

FLOOD WATERS IN MARITIMES DROWN SEVEN

River Drivers Stranded on Bar And Carried To Deaths

HEAVY DAMAGE

Miles of Fields Flooded And Traffic Held up

Normalcy gradually returned to Gaspe Peninsula and the Maritime Provinces after snow and rain storms brought death to seven lumbermen, caused millions of dollars damage, and disrupted traffic, lighting systems and communications over a period of 48 hours.

As Quebec cleared away a record-breaking October fall of snow, temperatures rains swept over the Maritimes. In New Brunswick, the swiftly rising waters of the big Salmon River swirled the seven loggers to their deaths on the last day of the log drive while the Digby shore of Nova Scotia was heavily damaged and Prince Edward Island reported flooded roads and fields.

Montreal and district experienced the brunt of the storm first when 22 inches of snow fell from Tuesday noon continuously for 24 hours. Other parts of the province felt the storm yesterday and Montreal suffered a complete power failure for an hour. Navigation was delayed, highways were blocked in the Laurentian Mountains and on the Montreal-Three Rivers and Montreal-Ottawa routes. Trees and telephone poles were the main casualties.

Seven Drowned

A small foot bridge on the big Salmon River was carried away and the seven lumbermen waded out up a sang bar in the middle of the northern branch. Unable to make the other side of the river on account of the swift-running water, they stayed on the bar and were carried to their deaths in the rushing torrent.

The dead are: Lawrence Wilson, 36; Eldon Campbell, 35; David Keswick, 36; Robert Barrett, 20, all of Bass River; Alyre Richard, 25, St. Norbert; Zoel Belacarde, 30, St. Fabien, and Pidole Collette, 36, Upper St. Maurice. All were steam drivers for the Provincial Paper Company and were single.

Miles of roads and fields were flooded when two dams broke at Apohaqui, Kings County, N.B. In the same county 13 highway bridges were carried away. Twelve cars of a fast freight from Moncton to Quebec were derailed at Mile 37, but no one was injured. At Petitcodiac a railway bridge was swept away and washouts also caused delays at Port Elgin and near Penobsquis.

The washing away of the drawbridge linking the island village of Tiverton with the mainland was one of the results of the storm along the Digby coast. Electric power failed in Truro and Pictou when wires were down and highways were covered with water in other parts of Nova Scotia. Only slight damage was suffered in Cape Breton.

Although coastal shipping was hailed the storm failed to stop the Boston to Nova Scotia service, which crept into Halifax harbor to land Engineer Fred Thomas who was seriously ill with pneumonia. The American fishing schooner Ellen V. Marshall also braved the storm and arrived at Shelburne with the body of seaman George Rudolph, died shortly after the schooner left Boston.

LABOR GAINS IN ELECTION

Conservative Candidate Defeated After Stirring Campaign

London, Oct. 26—Labor gained a seat in the House of Commons when J. G. Wilmot was returned by a majority of 4,586 votes over W. J. Waldron, his Conservative rival in the East Fulham by-election held Wednesday.

The vote was:

Wilmot 17,796
Waldron 13,250

Result of the polling brought an end to a 10-year Conservative tenure of the seat. In the last general election Sir Kenyon Vaughan-Morgan had a majority of 14,531 over Sir J. Maynard, the Labor contestant. Sir Kenyon died recently.

Last night's result climaxed a stirring campaign in the big metropolitan borough which brought considerable disorder, including "stink bomb" throwing in which both Labor and Conservative factions appeared to have had a part.

It brought also his first election triumph to Mr. Wilmot who had been an unsuccessful candidate in East Lewisham in 1924, 1929 and 1931. Mr. Wilmot, an accountant, is a member of the executive committee of the London Labor party and has been prominent in the affairs of the Fabian Society. Mr. Waldron, the loser, is a Fulham alderman.

This was the first of six by-elections which will be held in the United Kingdom within the next few weeks.

Claims Health Ruined During Screening of Trader Horn

New York, Oct. 26—Edwina Booth, blonde film actress, Wednesday filed suit for one million dollars' damages against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, charging that she has been unable to work because her health was broken during an expedition into Africa where the picture "Trader Horn" was filmed.

Tarzan

How great writers first became obsessed with the idea they could write (for it is a truism that in order to become a famous author one must become obsessed with the conviction of creative ability) is always an intriguing subject.

Such was the case of Edgar Rice Burroughs, author of the many volumes of Tarzan stories. Burroughs did not start to write until he was thirty-five. He was an adventurer in life before he became one in the new world of adventure with his pen. He was successively a miner, a policeman in Salt Lake City, a cowboy in Idaho and a gold miner in Oregon, was this original writer's background. Then he suddenly achieved fame as the author of "Tarzan of the Apes."

The chimp gives Tarzan a tip in "Tarzan The Fearless" starring Buster Crabbe opening at the Capitol today.

Although starting comparatively late in life as an author, Burroughs always had an idea that he could write, so one day he just sat right down and started "Tarzan." It was written at odd times on scraps of paper. Every time Burroughs was stuck he would turn to the next page and start something entirely different. Then, when he got a new idea, he would turn back to the page where he had left off and go on with the story. Finally, when he had written all he could think of about Tarzan, he had a complete story. Then he typed it out and sent it to a magazine, was accepted and instantly scored a success. Ever since then Tarzan stories have come rapidly from Burroughs' pen, until they now number no less than thirteen, with still another volume on the way.

"Tarzan the Fearless," the supersitory based on these great Tarzan stories, opens today. The thrilling highlights of all these stories, Buster Crabbe, world champion swimmer, a young man of extraordinary physical equipment, and an actor and singer of outstanding talents, is starred in the title role, supported by Edgar Wells and Edward Woods in featured roles, with Matlew Betz, Philo McCullough, E. E. Clive, Wally Wales and Forrest Taylor in the cast. Bob Hill directed. "Tarzan the Fearless" opens at the Capitol Theatre today.

Buster Crabbe

Buster Crabbe has no expense item in his budget for comedies. While at the U.S.C. he made an "All-American Fearless," the young star was approached by a man who gave the Olympic champ a scrutinizing glance then inquired:

"How long does it take to get that sun-tan make-up on, and how do you get it off?"

Crabbe, engrossed in the business of his "Tarzan" role, had just time to grin back, "It took twenty years and it won't come off!" A moment later he was slithering up a giant forest tree at a gesture of command from Director Robert Hill.

Crabbe's tan acquired during a life-time of all-year swimming on the beach of Waikiki, has been a boon to him since his debut in pictures. Known as "King of the Jungle" sing as "Tarzan the Fearless" the athletic athlete has worn an unretarded leopard skin and a smile.

"Tarzan, Jr. Boy!" says Crabbe, "all I need is a little oil rubbed on the well known hide!" That gives the necessary high light that the modern photographers demand for the

FASCISM HOPE OF WORLD IS DUCE'S CLAIM

Mussolini's Message to Black Shirts on Eve of Anniversary

DOCTRINES PASS

"Step by Step We Go Ahead According to Roman Custom"

Rome, Oct. 27 (AP)—Fascism is "the hope of the world", Premier Benito Mussolini says in a message to the black-shirts which is to be read in every town in Italy tomorrow on the eleventh anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome.

The message read: "The eleventh year of the regime closes with an imposing balance of works and events.

"You have seen them day by day. One of them day by day. One of them, the decennial aerial cruise which has been the exaltation of the revolution in the skies and has twice across the ocean and demonstrated of what stuff is this new Fascist people.

"The world of doctrines, against which even from March, 1919, Fascism rose; is retreating and capitulating everywhere. In Italy it is now far away and squelched even in memory.

"The Italian people, the message continued, "are pressing even closer around the Duce and regime since the revolution and face with absolution and discipline the hardships of the present.

"The lories of youth, strong in spirit and muscles, rise up without uncertainty to their battle posts and are ready for a call to whatsoever sacrifice.

"We march into the twelfth year of Fascism with full fervor and enthusiasm of a new revolution more decisive than ever.

"Even at the beginning of the twelfth year, the revolution will make a step forward, creating new labor, disciplining the economic forces and making them adequate to the necessities of the nation.

"Without aberrations or involutions, we go ahead, step by step, according to Roman custom, and give the world an example never before seen in its history of a constructive revolution which continues, develops and evolves in a daily creation of the spirit and will of the people."

HUNTER SHOT IN THE ARM

Point Anne Man Pulls Gun Towards Him And Gun Discharges

With the flesh, ligaments and tendons of the right arm torn away with a direct charge of 410 gauge shot gun, which exploded when he dragged it towards him by the muzzle in a boat in Big Bay yesterday, Ralph Marcile, of Point Anne, victim of the season's first duck shooting accident in this district is in hospital in the Belleville General Hospital. Whether or not amputation of the arm will be necessary, Dr. J. J. Robertson in attendance was not prepared to say.

According to the story told by his father, Abe Marcile, also of Point Anne, the two had left yesterday for a duck shoot in Big Bay. While approaching their blind in the reeds, the son, Harold Marcile, observed a flock of birds flying towards them. In the excitement he reached for the gun, grasped it by the muzzle and dragged it towards him. Catching an obstruction on the bottom of the boat, the gun exploded and the direct charge at close range ripped the right arm. Rushed to Belleville by his father, Marcile received first aid treatment and was then taken to the local General Hospital.

FORM CABINET EARLY TODAY

First Act of New Premier Sarrant is to Visit President

Paris, Oct. 27 (AP).— Premier Albert Sarraut formed his burget cutting, gold standard cabinet early today.

Then, without a moment's rest, he hurried his ministers to Elysee where they were presented to President Lebrun.

The new cabinet—new in little more than name, since the personnel varies little from the old—was admitted to the presidential palace at 2 a.m.

It was just an hour later than this last Tuesday that the presidents received from Edouard Daladier the resignation of his cabinet.

Although M. Sarraut revamped the old ministry, injecting little new blood, he brought to the difficult task of protecting the franc and reviving prosperity two things his supporters deemed highly important.

He brought what his financial advisers termed "new, even more" financial ideas, along with a conviction that "almost anything can be done if necessary."

This attitude he gained during two years as minister of the interior under the Poincare cabinet when in 1926 saved the franc and finally stabilized it.

An outstanding name missing in the new ministry is that of Raymond Poincare, undersecretary of national economy, who had been subjected to heavy criticism by the opposition.

M. Sarraut became minister of marine, choosing M. Daladier as war minister and Joseph Paul Boncour to succeed himself as minister for foreign affairs.

First Train Moved Thru Belleville 77 Years Ago

Ancient Files Tell of Celebration Along Line

STORY OF DAY

It is just seventy-seven years ago today, October 27, 1856, that residents of the town of Belleville stood on the wind-swept platform of the old Grand Trunk Railway depot north of the town to welcome the first "through" train between Montreal and Toronto. It was an important event. For days and weeks the citizens had been busy with advertising in the daily and weekly papers all through the province. Excitement was high. The crowd surged and milled on the platform awaiting the arrival of the first train to pass through, the town on the way to Toronto. The previous longer trip, between Brockville and the town of Belleville was about to be placed into insignificance.

Far in the distance east of the town came the sound of a tiny whistle. Then, trailing in the wind could be seen the long plume of smoke. Wheels rumbled and clicked, and as the waiting crowd pressed dangerously close to the edge of the wooden platform, the tiny engine, with tender piled high with solid blocks and chunks of cordwood, and drawing seven gaily decorated coaches, pulled in with considerable amount of fuss, drew up in a halt and stood panting in front of the depot. A brief wait while oilers and engine men overhauled engine and coaches and took on water . . . again the whistle . . . and wheels started to revolve slowly. The engine gathered speed, and among the shouts of the crowd pulled off to the west. That day marked the first important step in the history of the town of Belleville.

Celebration Along Line

But, Belleville was not the only place where the event was celebrated. At Montreal, Kingston and Toronto heralded the arrival of the first through trains as important steps in the development of travel. Copies of the Montreal Gazette, Herald Transcript and Advertiser were received in Toronto for the first time on the same day of publication, while the Toronto Leader, a paper since deceased, reached Montreal at 10 o'clock at night on the same day of publication.

From the files of The Belleville Intelligencer, dated October 31, is reproduced a complete report of the important event. "Belleville has at last been placed upon the great highway of the Province," reported the unknown chronicler of that day. His story follows:

"The first regular train from the east, extending to Portland, Maine, through Montreal, and from Montreal to Toronto, 335 miles, (Continued on page seven)

LINDBERGHS VISIT PARIS

Returns to Scene of Triumph Accompanied By Wife

Paris, Oct. 27 (AP)—Col. Chas. A. Lindbergh visiting in contrasting quiet today the city which was the terminus of his historic transatlantic crossing six years ago.

Accompanied this time by a wife, the "Lone Eagle" dropped out of the limelight as he and his bride yesterday and skidded his big seaplane up to the landing dock on the River Seine at Le Mureaux, 25 miles west of here.

Cloaked as he had wished it—in silence—his arrival from Inverness, Scotland, was known only to authorities, chiefly Air Ministry Pierre Cot.

Soaring away from Inverness, the flying couple headed ostensibly for Southampton, England, at noon. Hours later they were unreported and apprehension grew.

Then, in the midst of heightening fears on the part of those who knew nothing of the secret, planes, the whirr of an approaching plane was heard at the little naval airport at Le Mureaux.

The commanding officer, instructed to obey M. Cot's secretary, who had been sent to the port in strictest confidence, switched on a red light to indicate the landing.

The flying pair entered the secretary's automobile with a military chauffeur at the wheel and were whisked on a roundabout way to Paris.

DOCTOR SAYS CANCER CURE IS "ABSURD"

Only Hope to Reduce Fatalities From Disease is Prevention

MANY FORMS

Annual Mortality Rate is 100 in Every 100,000 People

Madrid, Oct. 27 (AP)—Dr. James Ewing, director of Memorial Hospital, New York City, told delegates to the International Cancer Congress today that the idea of discovering a cure for cancer is "absurd." The only hope of reducing cancer fatalities, he added, lies in prevention.

In discussing prevention Dr. Ewing charged nudism and other public movements toward exposure of the body with increasing cancer.

"Sunlight," he said, "is one of the greatest causes of cancer. Every trips to the beach often result in skin cancer."

Cancer exists in hundreds of forms, continued Dr. Ewing as also the United States delegates to the Congress, and it is unwise and unreasonable to hope for a cure.

He said that in his opinion only lip, skin, mouth and breast cancer is curable.

These, he went on constitute only 25 per cent. of the cases, but the remaining 75 per cent. are not curable.

Early stages of cancer, saying that only a microscopic diagnosis is possible and even when possible is useless if the cancer belongs in the incurable category.

He advised moderation in smoking and drinking, avoidance of hot, irritating foods, exercise and hygiene and discussion of any available information concerning the disease.

No matter which form of cancer is most prevalent in any country the mortality is about the same in all and this is punning to doctors, Dr. Ewing added.

He added, however that although they were unable to explain it, the fact remains that the annual mortality averages 100 to 100,000 people.

"If there is to be any substantial reduction in the mortality from cancer," he said, "it must be other than prevention or from the discovery of a new agent which will control cancer altogether.

"This latter I consider completely impossible, although many younger doctors are more optimistic.

"There is no sign that any such agent is existent or indications that it will be existent."

No form of human cancer, he said is contagious, Dr. Ewing's former among animals occasionally are.

Golf Ball Sliced Into Open Box Car Travels 300 Miles Before Returned

Port Colborne, Ont., Oct. 27 (CP) —C. D. Seeman, local C.P.R. agent, sliced a golf ball that travelled approximately 300 miles and came back to him. Before the golf season, Seeman driving off the tee on the ninth hole of the Port Colborne Country Club sliced the ball going out of bounds in the direction of a railroad track running parallel with the course. Several days later he noticed appearing from view into an open box car which was traveling at a fair rate of speed.

No one was thought of the incident until some days later when Mr. Seeman received a letter from Walkerville containing the lost ball. The ball which had its owners initials on it was found and turned in to the station agent at Walkerville, who recognized Mr. Seeman's initials and forwarded the ball to

BODY OF BABY REEXAMINED BY POLICEMEN

Death Due to 'Exposure' But Certain Facts Need Explanation

'GROUND STUDIED

Effort Made to Find if Anyone Removed Clothes Frobe Babe

Toronto, Oct. 27 (CP)—Seven year old Howard Eyer, playmate of Bunny Hillier, 18 months, whose body was found yesterday in an east end dump, today told police he saw the little girl fall down into the dump pit Wednesday afternoon. Police believe the solution is near.

"She fell and I went down where she was, and she was not moving," the boy told police after leading them to the spot where Bunny's body was discovered. "I went home," he added.

It was the very boy whose story yesterday conflicted with those told by other neighborhood youngsters. Howard said he saw Bunny walk away with a strange young man Wednesday afternoon at a later hour than any of the other children recalled having seen her.

Police resumed questioning of the little boy today. He told the officers and a coroner through a lane leading to the dump. Although it is the highest part of the bank, that looked down on the dump, he stopped and said:

"That's where little Bunny fell from," he added, as he went up the spot where her body was found, unclothed. Police said he was not prompted.

Toronto, Oct. '27 (CP)—Police went back to the east end and coroner's assistants started a second examination of the body of Bunny Hillier today in an intensive effort by authorities to solve the mysterious death of the 18 months' old girl whose body was found in a city yesterday morning.

Bunny died from exposure, police have established, but they seek confirmation of a widespread belief the child did not remove her clothing without aid and lie down beneath an automobile done in a deserted lane. Her body was found three after an all-night search in weather many degrees below the freezing point.

Chief of Police D. C. Draper said he was confident a $500 reward offered last night by the Board of Police Commissioners for information leading to the arrest of the person or persons responsible for Bunny's death, would assist investigators.

Thomas Ashmore Kidd, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

Lieut.-Col. Kidd went to England and Flanders with the 1st Canadian Contingent as a sub-altern in charge of No. 1 Platoon of the Battalion, and received his Captaincy and Majority overseas. Returning to Canada, after service in Belgium, he was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel and during the months of demobilization was D. A. and Q.M.G., M.D. No. 2, Kingston.

Col. Roscoe Vandervaart, D.S.O., in introducing the speaker referred to it as a pleasant and agreeable duty and task to introduce to his fellow club members, a distinguished an ex-member of the 1st Canadian Contingent, and brother comrade of the old 2nd Battalion, Col. Kidd had gone with the first Canadians to England and Flanders; he had distinguished himself there in public life and in the field. Vice-Chancellor felt assured Col. Kidd would make the two addresses of welcome to Belleville, who went with him to Valcartier, Salisbury Plain and the battlefields of Flanders, Ed O'Flynn and Dick Ponton. To have Col. Kidd with them, Belleville felt a pleasure to every member of the Club. He welcomed Col. Kidd to the Battalion Club of Belleville and to the city and every member was grateful to him for coming.

Col. Kidd first paid his respects to the memory of the late comrades Dick Ponton and Paddy O'Flynn, and called upon visited parents of battalion history connected with Col. O'Flynn.

France Revisited

Reminiscences of a visit he paid to France and England in 1925, 10 years after the advent of the 2nd Battalion to the war zone of Belgium, Col. Kidd entertainingly talked of what he had seen at that time. Landing at Monte Carlo he and his party visited Paris then the King of Belgium was making his first official visit to the French capital in 10 years. The speaker witnessed His Majesty placing a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown soldier beneath the Arch of Triumph.

Col. Kidd then told of his visit to the battlefields of Flanders, depicting particularly his visit to various military cemeteries there in search of the last resting place of late comrades-in-arms and former friends. He told of the excellent upkeep of these maternally cared-for and the admirable system of their organization. He was particularly fortunate at Ypres, he visited an old couple with whom he and other 2nd Battalion officers were quartered, and the visit was productive of joy to himself and them. He told of what reparation had been made in that vicinity since the close of the war and the ravages of its visit. How the French government had recompensed the inhabitants for their suffering through the struggle the upbuilding of farms and villages and the general trend toward return of happiness. He related his visit to what is known as the "Tanks Cemetery" an area covering 4 or 5 farms, where some hundreds of tanks lie, representing the same positions when destroyed by the German guns.

To London

The speaker was in London, a fortnight in 1925 memorable in his life, for on the 24th May he attended a memorial service for Queen Victoria held in the Westminster Hall in the presence of 1,000 veteran officers and massed bands, numbering 1000 musicians played. It was a wonderful and inspiring sight to see the massed Highland bands with their plumes, coming years after her passing, in her death to pay homage to the memory of one of Britain's greatest sovereigns and perpetuate the celebration of the 24th of May.

The following 3rd of June he witnessed the Trooping of the Colour, when the Kings came on the Grand Old Duke of York's Day was played.

The third impressive event witnessed by Col. Kidd was the funeral of General French who was Commander-in-Chief of the British Expeditionary Force in 1914.

Col. Kidd's address was the grave respect that England still pays the memory of those who gave their lives for King and country. Passing down the Mall in Whitehall, clattered the cenotaph in Whitehall, clattered the gun carriage bearing the coffin while the young pages and mesenger boys bearing the caps, which fell had been one of inspiration.

Last year Col. Kidd again visited England and related incidents connected with his journeys to Flanders, Ypres, Mons, Ypres, to Salisbury Plains, to Folkstone and Shorncliffe Plains, to Bramshott and Moore Barracks and its adjacent Canadian Cemetery. Here the school children of Folkstone and nearby villages continue their annual custom of decorating the graves of the Canadian soldiers buried there.

Col. Kidd's reminiscences relative to his Belleville comrades might be summed up as "Praise and England Applaud". Appreciation of the club, for Col. Kidd's remarks was received with a resolution of Major S. J. Gilmore and President Will Jack presenting these sentiments to Col. Kidd.

IMPORTS MUST KEEP PACE WITH EXPORTS

Montreal, Oct. 27—Although increase in exports is absolutely necessary for the prosperity of Canada, imports from countries with which Canada is doing an export trade must be maintained in order to increase international business, E. He Stoops to Drop Kick—Who Knows How to Boot 'Em

Famous Coach Tells Proper Method of Trying for Those Three Points

This drop kick has become a play of major importance in Canadian football, many teams relying on it, and the placement kick, to score their points. The following, by an American coach will be of especial interest.

BY HERB McCRACKEN

Head Football Coach of Lafayette

The drop kick, seen often in Canadian football, is highly important the drop kick, as you know, is a scoring kick—used only in attempting field goals for which three points are counted.

For drop kicking the ball is held the same as in punting.

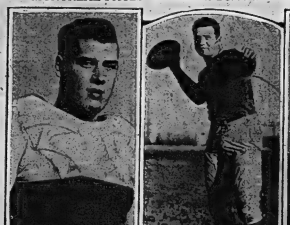
The kicker, with his right hand under the ball and his left on the side, slightly forward, should bring the ball down to the ground as closely as he comfortably can before letting it go.

In this way the ball is under greatest control and is not apt to twist or turn before striking the ground.

The points to observe in drop-kicking are:

1. Keep your eye on the ball until it is actually ascending on its way to the ground.

2. Keep your balance fool — the left foot for right-footed kickers—up beside the ball at the instant of impact.



3. The toe—not the instep—should strike the ball two inches from the bottom and strike it the instant the ball touches the ground.

Once more, let me insist that you be certain to bring the ball as closely to the ground as possible before releasing it.

I have seen some players who virtually touched the ball to the ground while it was still in their hands. Seldom do they let go when it is more than an inch above the turf.

On rainy days when the ball is slippery and grimy utilize the place kick instead of the drop kick.

MONTREAL FACES ANOTHER STIFF BATTLE WITH OTTAWA

Here are three of Montreal's foot- or suffer practically elimination. ball stalwarts who will make every thing on Saturday, Oct. 28, to stop the rush of the Ottawa Roughriders. Montreal must win this game but on the contrary it acted as a boomerang and lowered the class of baseball now played throughout the province. No person will nearly stand up and try to tell you that baseball in Ontario is not last or anything as it was some ten or twelve years ago.

In Carl Regan, starry U. S. player they have a quarter who is one of their strongest threats. A great defensive player, he is also brilliant on the attack, particularly with forward passes. Lou Newman, an old standby, is still playing his usual magnificent game. The same goes for Lynn Abbot, another tower of strength on the line.

From the Hockey Training Camps

Toronto Maple Leafs, it seems, are going to be the rough, tough outfit of the National Hockey League this season. Reports from Kitchener say that the Irvin men are wasting no pleasantries on each other. Rather, the players handing it out and taking as they have to during the league schedule.

Fans watching the Leafs in action can't figure how they can stand the heavy going as early in the season. "Why," said one, "if overbeard Jackson say that Red Horner is using his knee out there all the time."

The Leafs have earned a lay-off by their hard work and after their practice today Dick Irwin will allow them a week-end holiday. Hard work starts again Monday morning.

Cooney Weiland, Ottawa's star centre, joined Rick Wamie on the sailing list yesterday but both were expected to get back into action within a day or two. "Yip" Foster, who was with Detroit until Ottawa established their claim to him, is at work in the capital.

Coach Newsy Lalonde may start cutting down of his batch of players after tonight's game at Kingston between his regulars and Yanniscot. Frank Patrick, new managing director of the league, will get an idea of the woes his hired men run into when he referees the game.

Doctors were looking over Oli Heller's injured wrist at Montreal today to determine the extent of a practice injury. A crash into the board sent the brilliant New York Ranger gentleman to the dressing room. He will be kept out the ice for several days at least.

Whitey Fields, the 185 pound centre who placed for Syracuse in the International Series last year, is to have a try-out with Canadiens. Lalonde wired him yesterday to report to the Kingston training camp.

Harold Starr, traded by Canadiens to Windsor, has seen the light and will report to the International League club, after holding out for several days.

CURRENT SPORT

Secretary Newton Thompson of the Central Ontario Amateur Baseball League announced yesterday that the annual meeting of that organization had been scheduled for Saturday, November 4th at the Empress Hotel in Peterboro. Mr. Thompson was working on instructions from President Hall of Swanston. With the senior baseball situation in a turmoil in Eastern Ontario this meeting should have a tendency to settle once and for all the destinies of the O.B.A.

From what transpiration we could gather all-senior and intermediate O.B.A.A. teams in Eastern Ontario will be asked to, this gathering. Undoubtedly President Hall will throw the meeting open for general discussion before any attempt is made to elect the officers for the ensuing year. Incidentally we know of no better choice for President in 1934 than the man now holding office—Max Swanston. Rising from player to manager, executive member and president of the Oriental loop Max Swanston undertakes all angles and phases connected with the organization and would be given another term of office. At least that is the feeling of the members of the Maitland executive.

There seems to be a lot of controversy in this immediate vicinity relating to the possibilities of senior ball next year, whether it be O.B.A.A. or Inter Loop. Naturally the majority concerned are in favor of the old established organization, the O.B.A.A. About the only angle to prevent itself from the Ulster Stadium side of the fence is the residence rule which reads something like May 15th. Undoubtedly this residence rule would be a great help to the smaller centres as they could "import" a ball player or two so as to assure themselves of placing a high class baseball team on the diamond, thus assuring the fans of faster baseball. After all is said and done the fans are the ones who are paying for the sport and their wishes should be considered.

Well we remember when the old C.O.B.L. operated under the extended residence rule. Faster and better baseball was the result. When a small town like Cobourg, Belleville et al could bring in a player or two along about May 10th it added prestige to their respective teams. The O.B.A.A. introduced the January 1st residence rule to try and protect the small town

LADY BOWLERS ENTERTAINED

Enjoyable Evening Spent at Bowling Club Despite Storm

In closing their club house for the season members of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club congregated in it Tuesday evening last, when the ladies section of the membership entertained the ladies of the club. The event took the form of a jolly pre-Hallowe'en party and a committee, headed by Mrs. Charles M. Sulmon had the rooms resplendent with autumnal tints and decorations of a Hallowe'en character.

Members arriving through sleet and snow were delighted to find the club house so comfortably heated and the intermittent on and off of the electric lights caused by the storm in no way interfered with the jollity and enjoyment of the night. The committee had seen to it that there were plenty of candles available, and the attractiveness of the decorations were added to by their flickering lights.

Bridge and Euchre were the contests used as an excuse for the party. Mrs. Muir and Mr. C. I. Lent won Bridge and Mrs. Dave Fisher and Mr. L. S. Scott captured the Euchre awards.

Club members relate that first prize in the Bridge game might have been amassed by one of the lady members, an experienced 13-card-hand-handler, and an especial student of the Culbertson method had not her partner, Joe Delaney, slipped at the last moment and lost the winning hand. Mr. Delaney, who has been throughout the season a burden to any skip on the greens he has played with, had a chance Tuesday night to redeem himself, but no laurels for him this season after the play he made in the card game, is the unanimous verdict, of his fellow club members.

Several of the younger male members of the club whose tuition thru out the active bowling season had been a source of annoyance and anxiety to the more experienced bowl bearers, arrayed as waitresses endeavored to serve the delicious viands provided for the closing of the 1933 bowling activities. And in spite of the mussiness of the service the refreshments were decidedly appreciated by all.

The affair was thoroughly enjoyable and the lady bowlers acknowledge that when the men start to entertain, they entertain most successfully.

ACID STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Sufferers Free Indigestion CUT THIS OUT

"Stomach trouble, dyspepsia, indigestion, sourness, gas, pressure, food fermentation, heartburn, sleeplessness often due to excess acid stomach," says a well known authority.

Burning hydrochloric acid develops in the stomach as an unnatural result. The acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining and often leads to gastritis or stomach ulcers. Don't dose up acid stomach with pepsin or artificial digestants that only give temporary relief from pain by driving the burning, fermenting food out of the stomach into the intestines.

Instead, neutralize or sweeten your acid stomach after meals with a pure Bismuted Magnesia and not only will the pain vanish but your stomach will digest naturally. There is nothing better than Bismuted Magnesia to sweeten and purify a sour stomach. Your stomach acts and feels fine in just a few minutes. Bismuted Magnesia can be obtained from any reliable druggist. It is safe, reliable, easy and pleasant to use. It is not a laxative and is not at all expensive.

LOVERS OF BIRDS

Viscount Grey and the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt had a love of nature of which anglers and hunters might be proud. The former confessed that he loved to lie awake in bed fishing in the imagination in the streams he could not visit until March. He was so fond of wild life that he established a sanctuary for birds and it was the music of these birds which came thru to his sick room and was among the last sounds to beat upon the ears of the dying statesman.

Roosevelt once visited Grey and they went out into the woods near the little village of Titchborne in Hampshire to listen to the English birds. There Grey learned that Roosevelt had one of the best trained ears in the world for bird music, so that if three or four birds were singing at the same time, he could pick out each distinctive song. The best test of Roosevelt's knowledge was when a sound was heard in a fir tree-top and he remarked, "I think that is exactly the same song as that of a bird we have in America." It was the gold-crested wren, the only bird's song that North America and Britain have in common.

These great leaders of their day found time in a busy world of politics to secure that repose in nature which cannot but be the salvation of many a wearied body and tired mind. These men relaxed in the presence of the nature which they loved in all her myriad forms, particularly in the form of birds.

STATE MEDICINE

State medicine is possibly coming. Hon. Dr. Robb, Ontario Minister of Health, does not like the term, but he says the general character of medical treatment and public health is developing along such lines. He does not know, he says, whether state medicine will ever come or not, but he does know, he states that teachers who are paid for their services give a very fine demonstration of attention to duty, to initiative and to the educational welfare of their pupils. Just as efficiency does not fall because teachers are paid by the community he sees no reason why the medical men and dentists, if employed by the community, should lose incentive.

Dr. Robb's views substantiates a Belleville doctor who two weeks ago said that the class providing the greatest problem to the medical profession and to the health authorities is the class not on relief but unable to pay for medical or dental services.

England has a form of state medicine which is said to be working out with characteristic English thoroughness. That such a condition could be brought about in Ontario would not appear unreasonable because Ontario has in its social legislation the most advanced laws in the world for the protection and health of workmen, children and mothers.

FAVORABLE CONDITIONS

Only two cities in Ontario have a lower average per capita yearly expenditure than Belleville. Kingston spends $14.07 per capita, Stratford $16.85, Belleville $16.56 and Peterborough $16.62, while at the top of the list is East Windsor, spending per capita $53.68. This per capita expenditure includes protection to property, health and sanitation, highways, charities and hospitals, libraries, recreation, administration, and miscellaneous.

The total expenditure of the cities for all purposes including debenture interest and so forth show that Belleville is in the fourth lowest place, Woodstock $489,318; Welland $521,763; Gait $605,368; Port Sound $649,267; Belleville $650,358. In the case of these cities Belleville is the highest in population, being about the same size as Gait, considerably larger than Owen Sound, Welland, Woodstock, East Windsor is considerably larger as is Chatham.

While Belleville's per capita expenditures it low, the debenture debt is average and it compares so favorably with the debts of other cities in the province that Belleville residents must be proud of their city's fine showing.

One of Belleville's problems which also is that of the smaller cities is the cost of the provision of services. Toronto has only about nine times Belleville's acreage, but it has forty-five fifty times the population. But that this means in the proportionately high costs of services in Belleville is easily understood. Despite such drawbacks the councils of the city have been able to give a fair rate of taxation and to provide improvements which have brought this city into an enviable position.

SUNSETS

Through many years I have watched sunset skies
Of rose and mauve, of amber, turquoise, jade,
And I have seen the hues of paradise
Flare out in rainbow flame and fleetly fade.

I know where one tall pine against the west
Stands up to snare the young moon, dropping down;
And I have seen, above a high hill's crest,
The bright cloud-towers of some celestial town.

Oh, all the jewels, all the flowers are there,
Heaped for a little time along the sky,
And then their message: How can man declare
A despair,
When day in such triumphant mood can die?

"CHISELER," a recent slang word, reputed to have been coined in the underworld of New York City, has been elevated to front rank position as a regular word entitled to be included in any first-class dictionary. President Franklyn Delano Roosevelt put the hallmark on the word when he used it in his radio broadcast last Sunday evening. Its origin is unknown except that it came from the underworld, but it sprung into prominence lately by being applied to those who seek to use the N.R.A. Blue Eagle to further their own interests and try to evade the responsibilities which the use of the Blue Eagle of the National Industrial Recovery Act demands. The word "chiseler" is now being discussed learnedly in editorials and by the columnists and with the endorsation of President Roosevelt should speedily attain a complete standard of respectability.

BELLEVILLE LANDLORD with a number of houses which rent cheaply complains that everything else is paid for out of relief money but rent. Landlords are not supposed to pay heavy taxes which helps to provide the relief fund and if their tenants cannot pay the rent the landlord has to raise the money for taxes somehow, generally by a mortgage of the property. Food and fuel and medical attention is provided for out of relief funds as far as Belleville is concerned, but says this landlord, lodging is not provided for by the municipality, although it is done in other places, of which Sturgeon Falls was a shining example.

SOME DISCUSSION has started in the rural press about woman's bathing suits for next summer and it has been suggested that municipal legislation be enacted to make it a misdemeanor for the fair sex to expose the shape of their body or the curves thereof to the male gaze on bathing beaches or places adjacent thereto. This everlasting argument as to what constitutes modesty in women's bathing apparel never gets anywhere, and we suggest that those who get a pain in the neck when they look upon the female form divine undraped should look the other way and get out of the line of vision of those who have the soul of artists and can admire the masterpieces of Creation without a shudder of lascivious fear for the effect upon the morals or otherwise of the community.

CHANCELLOR HITLER of Germany, for a small man, makes a big noise, in fact there is little Germany now but much Hitler. Hitler, practically the dictator of Germany now, has called for a general election in November to approve of his policy in withdrawing Germany delegates from the League of Nations and Disarmament Conference. It is said that only Nazis will be permitted to vote, and as Hitler is head of the Nazis it is not difficult to predict the result of the election.

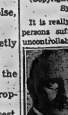
An amusing tale is told by a theatrical agent of a young man who came to him and asked if it were possible to get a job on the stage. "Got any experience?" asked the agent. For answer the applicant, with an air of quiet pride, took a newspaper cutting from his pocket and handed it over. With a mixture of amusement and amazement, the agent read the following:

"Accused, who denied the assault, conducted his own case in a somewhat dramatic manner."



HOW VIOLENT TEMPER IS CONTROLLED

Few Distinctly Abnormal Cases of "Temper" Exist

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

It is really astonishing how many persons suffer from violent and uncontrollable temper. At least they themselves claim it is uncontrollable.

As a matter of fact, although it is said by scientists that violent temper can be inherited, really few, and distinctly abnormal cases exist. Usually those who have a "quick" temper, or who fly into a rage upon the slightest provocation, are curable. Although psychologists say such individuals are "freely inhibited," the latter usually can raise their resistance to outside influences that provoke them if they try hard enough and know how.

Indeed, all persons who are subject to bad temper are seriously handicapped and it might be assumed that they would be mighty eager to conquer such a failing. Yet individuals undoubtedly exist who are rather proud of the speed with which they lose self-control. They figure, somehow, that it makes them more interesting or, perhaps, even feared by their associates.

Yet such persons not only often find themselves doing and saying things that they afterwards regret, but frequently are victimized by those who seek to "get their goat," as vernacular phrases it, or gain an advantage over them.

The person who gets angry at will opens himself up to a disadvantageous attack. Anger makes him lose his sense of proportion, his reasoning becomes blurred, his ability to size up and evaluate are gone—in short, any assets his personality or mind may possess, are lost.

It is as though the emotion of anger burned up all his energies. No matter how capable or intelligent the individual may be, quick temper will often wreck him.

A report some years ago by the Eugenics Research Association and based on 1,000 family histories of persons suffering from violent temper, goes on to say: "The tendency to outbreaks of uncontrollable tantrums in adults—whether more or less periodic, is frequently to be inherited as a positive (dominantial) trait, typically does not skip a generation and tends, ordinarily, to reappear, on the average, in half of the children of an affected parent."

This surely sounds like strong proof that most violent temper cases are inherited, and, furthermore, that nothing much can be done about it. Yet it must be remembered that those examined were wayward girls who already were held in State institutions. The problem under investigation was really to what extent is heredity responsible for violent temper in delinquents, or for criminal acts in criminal types.

Ordinary cases surely can be cured. First of all, a possible cause should be looked for in the body of the patient; next his mental and emotional mechanisms should be inspected.

Any irritation within the system may make a person "off his feed, cranky." Lack of exercise, too much monotonous work, or too few vacations may produce like results. Worry, liverspots in the face, ill health and general dissatisfaction with one's lot in life are mental causes quite commonly found.

Finally, it's further and deeper research the less need for temper is necessary, nothing short of a complete psychoanalysis can be called. This may take months but it most always works.

PLACE TRAIN ON PINNACLE

Royal Scot, Famous Train Will Visit City on November 10

Joint pressure being brought to bear by the local Chamber of Commerce on officials of the Canadian National Railways to have the celebrated train placed on view on the Pinnacle street grounds downtown instead or at the north station as originally planned, may result in residents of the city viewing and examining with perfect convenience the Royal Scot on its inspection arrival in the city on November 10.

Acting under instructions from Mayor George O. Tice, City Clerk J. Wilfred Holmes today despatched a request to local officials of the Canadian National asking to have the train placed on view on Pinnacle Street near East Bridge Street. The council will then arrange to have the street closed during the three-hour period the train is expected to stop over.

The celebrated crack train of the British Isles fresh from her conquests of the Chicago Exposition and the Canadian Pacific, is expected to arrive here with eight coaches, and will be completely open to the examination by the many hundreds from this city who expect to take the opportunity to examine it.

Action of council in the matter was prompted by a resolution coming at the last weekly luncheon of the local Chamber of Commerce at which the resolution was made, the City Council to forward a request to the Canadian National Railways to have the noted train placed at a convenient point in the city during its stay.

The large metal conduit, which comes in 36 and 48-inch diameter will conduct the flow of the small creek which runs through the north end of the park to the river and will end the nuisance of the marsh which is now being filled in with material brought from the river bed.

VICE REGAL PARTY VISITS HAMILTON

Hamilton, Oct. 26—Hamilton today welcomed the Earl and Countess of Bessborough on their arrival to spend a full day here. The Vice Regal party was met at the station by a civic reception committee, headed by Mayor John Peebles.

Her Excellency inspected a party of Girl Guides on the station platform while the Governor General was taken to the city hall, later visiting a number of industrial plants. At Hillfield School he presented the prizes won by students.

BRIGADE INACTIVE DURING STORM

"People must be getting more careful these days," remarked one of the city's veteran firemen. "Usually at the first cold snap we used to get from one to a dozen runs to all kinds of minor fires in the city. This year we haven't had a single run that could be said to the changeable weather."

Although members of both departments were on the alert in both halls on Wednesday night and Thursday morning for the first cold break of chimney fire not a single run was made.

ONLY FEW PIPES FROZEN IN CITY

Only the few who were caught napping by not having their outside water services turned off several days ago when the first cold snap was felt in the city, were the chief sufferers from frozen water pipes, it was reported at the city waterworks department today. A few instances were reported where outside taps and pipes had frozen early Thursday morning, but inside water systems were said to have been unaffected by the sharp frost.

"If the consumers haven't had their outside taps shut off before this, they are taking a chance of having the pipes burst," commented Manager K. T. Austin.

TURKEY BUZZARD IS CAUGHT AT TAMWORTH

Apparently Went Last as Seldom Seen in this Section

The capture of a turkey buzzard in a common trap by Wesley Hughes of Sowerby Lake, Tamworth, this week is causing much head shaking, and considerable talking amongst local naturalists. The bird, identified by its curious markings and peculiarities of its breed, was said to have never before made its appearance so far north in this country, and seldom wanders or flies far from his own haunts in the southern section of the United States or the Argentine.

The specimen caught by Mr. Hughes was as large as a fair sized turkey with dark brown plumage, and with the distinguishing red head.

When first captured natives believed it was an oversized hawk. None of them, however, had ever seen such a hawk before.

WINNING PRIZES FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

R. J. Garbutt and Son Still Attending Local Fairs

In the "50 Years Ago" section of "Looking Backward," on the editorial page of this paper, Wednesday last, the following appeared: R. J. Garbutt of Thurlow, winning first prizes at Central Fair, Kingston, for his Leicester Sheep and Berkshire Pigs. The date under the caption was October 23, 1883.

Following forward instead of backwards, 1933 came, and still 1883 arrives, but if R. J. Garbutt is still about at that time, it is predicted he'll still be winning first prizes for his sheep and swine. The awards made him in those classes must amount to hundreds in the past three score years, and this fall he and hearty Mr. Garbutt was to be found with his showings at nearly all the fairs in the district.

Being a awful auser, and Artie said, Well if you really want to know how dum you are, you're so dum you'd jump of a roof thinking you could fly, and it would be the smartest thing you ever did because smart people like me wouldn't half to listen to your dum tawk any more, Artie said.

Being a good one on me, and I was just to give him a even better one when pop said, Yee gods creee fitting. I was just on the point of paying your expenses for a round trip to one ice cream parlor, but if you're both as dum as all that, I dont think I want to be mixed up with you.

well G. pop, we're not really so dum, I said. Do you want to know how brite Artie is? He's so brite he cant go out at nite or eits people mite think he's a fire, I said, and Artie said, And do you want to know how brite Bennie is? He's so brite he can read by his own brains, he said.

Congradulations on the sudden improvement, watch out for a repetition pop said. And he gave us ice cream money and we can out like lightning.

The smartest dress, the most appealing personality, lose their charm if your complexion is blemished or your hands red and rough.

That's why countless women now use Noxzema, a greaseless cream for face and hands. For Noxzema is a "skin medicine" in cream form—designed especially to correct skin troubles and to restore the skin to normal, healthy beauty.

Ordinary creams fail to correct pimples, oiliness, large pores or blackheads. A medicated cream is needed to purge the skin of the infinitely impurities —to soothe and heal sore, tender skin —to relax roughened tissues. Noxzema does all this!

Use Noxzema Cream every night for a week after removing make-up—and during the day as a powder base. How much softer, smoother, lovelier your complexion will become!

For beautiful hands, too Noxzema is just as helpful for hands. If your hands are red and rough, make this test. Apply Noxzema on one hand tonight, leaving the other hand bare in the morning. Feel and see how much smoother and softer is the hand on which you used Noxzema.

Oxford Group Team Commissioned in St. Paul's

Ancient St. Paul's in Old London was this month the scene of a service of commissioning of an Oxford Group team by the Bishop of London, The Manchester Guardian reports the service:

If there were any doubt that the campaign which the Oxford Group Movement is launching in London this autumn is welcomed by an important section of the Church of England, the service of commissioning held this evening in St. Paul's Cathedral by the Bishop of London, and attended by the Bishops of Kensington and Kensington, has dispelled that doubt. Long before the service began every seat, with the exception of five hundred at the front reserved for the Oxford and the clergy of evangelists, was occupied, in the side chapels as in the gallery.

Among the visitors were several German adherents of the movement, four of whom, pronounced in the German Protestant or Evangelical Church, and flown over from Germany to meet the team, and colleagues from other foreign countries were there. Members of all the British universities were present, including those who have already become from Oxford for the service.

A Lancashire group, about to set forth to visit London, had sent a small coach to pay the fares of two other travellers.

As the congregation sang the opening hymn, "Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken," the choir and clergy came in procession followed by the members of the team, who filled the whole of the north aisle doors. More than a hundred clergy walking in the procession. The team remained standing while the Bishop, speaking from the chancel steps extended the welcome of the diocese and of the cathedral church and expressed his hope that "as this church was built that men may see and know that there is a God, so may the Oxford Group stand for a witness to men in their need and loneliness, that they may see and find the God of their salvation." He then prayed for them in words addressed by St. Paul to the Colossians.

Canon Inge read the lesson, the passage from the First Epistle to the Corinthians, in which he says that "the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved, it is the power of God."

The Bishop of Calcutta, who is also Metropolitan of India, Burma and Ceylon, in his address, spoke of Christ as the corner-stone which must form part of every building that is built to stand. "This is the challenge of the groups of the great city of London," he said. "You must put Christ into the centre of your individual and family life, your social, industrial and political organisations. We claim no unique position as messengers of the Gospel of God. We rejoice in that great band of men and women, devoted to His service, serving Him day in and day out, through the actual troubles, pains and difficulties of countless hosts in this great City of London. We know we are not to bow down and loose the shoes of that John the Baptist. We feel that God will enable us to bring some measure of help to them and to leave behind us a team and a fellowship where now there may be a lonely worker. And we witness of that which we have seen with our eyes and found with our hands."

When the time came for the Bishop to commission the band of workers who were standing, Dr. Buchman, leader of the movement, stepped forward, and the Bishop and the team towards the Bishop on the chancel steps. Then the Bishop's clear voice—asking the Reverend Father In God to "Add a blessing upon these who go forth in the name of Christ, that they may receive in the power of the Holy Spirit," and the closing of the solemn words of the Bishop's charge and the Benediction.

Finally the congregation sang the hymn "How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of God," and the organist, as the team filed out, gave it his charge, by playing Mendelssohn's "Wedding" inspiration to all who seek to make the fellowship of Christ real.

"An amazing service" was the comment of a Lancashire group, who certainly an exceptionally interesting service, distinguished by beauty, dignity and simplicity. As for the congregation, numbering six or seven hundred, the overwhelming impression was of its youthfulness. Clergy were young and women of all ages and of many types in the team but the majority, one guessed, were in their twenties. Quiet in manner they seemed entirely to lack self-consciousness, and if they were deeply stirred by the service, the fact was only shown by the earnestness with which they sang the hymns. One had never heard finer congregational singing in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Hopes Other Men Will Be Warned

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Will you print this letter, as it may keep some other man from making the fool of himself that I've been. I have been married four years and have an adorable little girl of three; and no man ever had a better or more capable wife—pretty, a good manager and devoted. I'd gladly give my right arm to undo what I've done, but it's too late now.

Like many another fool, I disregarded my blessings and ran around with a couple of girls of the type who don't care whether a man is married or not. It used to thrill me when a girl would smile at me on the street and we'd begin to talk but I discovered that a girl would smile at one stranger will do the same by another.

I've told my wife I'm sorry and begged for her forgiveness, but she's going right ahead with divorce proceedings, and the home and all I held dear are crumbling before my eyes.

Now what have I to show for my smartness? Divorce and a wrecked home, and the loss of my child. If I had my time to go over, I'd do differently—quite skirt-chasing, and sometimes take my wife and kid to the movies and be really affectionate to her. But I can't. And the comfort of my home for granted. Please print this letter. It may help some other home from wreckage.

H.

I'm glad to print your confession, but don't you know, my dear man, that if it hadn't been for that similarly affected husband's eye, he would regard you with envy? There is a type of man who does this every day in the Personal Service Bureau.

Here's hoping your warning may make some wife-chasing husband watch his step, and also that your wife may relent before the final papers are signed. Something like do, you know.

He's Not Demonstrative

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He sees me about once in two weeks and phones me about once a week. I'm 18 and he's 26. He has asked me to "keep company" with him, but it will be quite a while before he finishes college and gets a job so that he can settle down. Though I like him, I don't want any other boy I know, still he's never demonstrative. He never asks to kiss me. If I go "steady" am I free to make other dates? And why is he so undemonstrative?

Lucy

Unless you're positively ragged, you're as liberty to make and accept dates from whom you please. Such terms as "going steady" and "keeping company" are chaotic and may or may not mean an engagement. With some, the expectation stand for no more than one's best girl or boy friend for the time being.

Perhaps he is a bit backward about getting settled in a job, this boy's likes are more or less impossible. He may think that under these circumstances it is unfair rather than petting is the best bet. This implies a certain delicacy that some men lack while with this column we appreciate it.

Never Treated Anyone So Rudely

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The first time we met, I met a young man at a dance who made an unfavorable impression on me. He seemed attracted to me, too, and at the end of the evening we danced together he asked for a date a few later. I happened to have another engagement for that night, but it was not the fact of the refusal but the cold, abrupt manner in which I did so which I know hurt him deeply. I am sorry I did not hear from him further.

I chanced to meet him again at the same dance. He asked me again and I'll not be able to tell you what was the matter with me, but I just seemed to go out of my way to hear him talk to me. I offered him an apology, but when he asked if he would be seeing me I said "good-night."

I know my chances with this young man, should I ever happen to run into him again, are poor, in spite of this, I still feel that I would like to make amends for an injustice which he has done to me.

Bewildered

Your case seems to support the theory that love and hate are not far distant. You were rude, "insulting and all that," to this young man because you probably resented the immediate and unusual impression he made on you.

Psychoanalysts would quote you a chapter and verse for this little outburst on your part. There really is not any very satisfactory way of explaining your tantrum to the young man. Better rely on the old adage: "Least said, soonest mended," and be especially gracious to him when you next meet.

Perhaps he may know something of psych-analysis and has already diagnosed your little vicious attack as a compliment!

Eyebrows to Suit Your Type

Wise Girl Will 'Study Herself Before She Re-constructs Them

(By Helen Follett)

Like eyes, eyebrows have a language, tell tales. Or at least, they accent types and characters. Here's quite a picture. Without heavy bristling black brows he wouldn't dare show his face in any picture book.

Eyebrows can be sinister or sweet, commanding or cringing, flirtatious or demure, bold or quaint. So it is just as well for the candidates for beauty that the fashions decide just what kind of gals they are, before they start out on the job of eyebrow reconstruction.

For narrow, slanting eyes, the brows should start low at the inner end, sweep upward. The Madonna type should have hers of faint lines, but of normal pattern; the exotic doesn't suit her style. Full round eyes call for the arched—brow, which ends drooping. Serious girls wear their pretty lamburguing low, laughing eyes should have theirs high. It's all done with the tweezers a strong light a mirror and a system.

H.

To insure pretty movements of the hands, do a flattering exercise; it limbers the wrist and, unless that little hinge works smoothly, hand gestures are likely to be awkward.

Let the arms hang limp at the sides of the body. Lift, extend forward, do not bend. Watch. Unless you have cultivated graceful movements you are not surprised to find how difficult it is to wave properly. But keep on. Don't forget to lift the entire body animated and vibrant.

H.

Heavy housework, washing, ironing are likely to cause muscles to enlarge and how the bridge player does.

Once a day, have your hand exercises. Spread and flex the fingers a few times, then put the palm with a strong muscle pull. Follow with an application of coconut oil rubbing it into the joints with a circular motion and a movement of the thumb. Keep hands out of hot or cold water, have water-repid if possible.

The Shanghai Gesture is in the direction of pals as the Chinese line of evening satin. A rose Chinese new toque in rose red matt velvet is covered by a veil-like fringe of brown cords, which ends in a little knob at the peak of the round hat.

A Study in contrasts is provided by a new ice ensemble, consisting of a tiny bolero in ermine with puffed sleeves and a jabot of ermine tails. This is worn with an enormous pillow muff of the snowy fur.

A good trick by make the figure seem much slimmer is featured in a new dress of crepe entirely covered with black cire braid applied in diagonal lines. It has a square neckline, and lingerie flowers at the waist.

Have Faith in Your Child, Encourage Him

(By Constance Cameron)

To sit around coddling waiting for another to make a mistake, so that we may chirp "I told you so," is not admirable, yet how many of us do it! Occasionally, when some individual has made a signal success in life, we say our heads wisely and say, "Well, I always said he'd do it," but alas, much more frequently, when one has proved a failure in business or life, we are quick to remark, "I just knew he'd make a mess of that affair."

This lack of faith in others would not be so harmful if applied only to adults, but unfortunately, we seem to pursue this policy to an even more noticeable degree with regard to children, who are more in need than their elders of the encouragement and stimulus that comes from knowing that good things are expected of them.

"I Told You So"

Why wouldn't it be just as much fun to breathlessly await the achievement of success by our friends and children, eager to say "I told you so" when they make good?

I think the majority of us, if we are all quite truthful, perceive and each other, will admit that we thrive under the knowledge that some one has such faith in us that he expects us to be world beaters. Then why should we feel that children are any different?

Give a child a dime to go to the store and get a loaf of bread, with a confident "I'm sure you can get the bread and be home right away," and the line of action you have suggested to him is sure to get better results than if you said "Here's have, faith in his success.

Walk easily in smart shoes. A new dinner shoe is done in blue faille with matching blue patent kid trimmings and gold ornaments on the heel of gilt kid is piped with blue patent.

It is impossible to get along without a dressy suit this Autumn. Grand for informal evenings is a suit of black imsel crepe with narrow bands of Persian lamb mounted in metal lame. The rumor across the coat and form a bow-knot trim at the high neckline. The skirt is fairly long.

made their first appearance in our good town, on Monday last, to the no small pleasure and gratification of a large number of our citizens. The event is one of no mean importance to us as a town in particular and to the Province generally in general. Merchants and Tradesmen will no longer have to lay in heavy six months' stock or Goods to keep supplied until the season returns for navigation; but from the Manufactories in West, Provisions, or Produce, they will receive the prize of these articles, deliver their goods when any account of having of hold them over for five or six months. $1,000 spent in wheat one day can be replaced in two or three days later, thus rendering speculations comparatively safe. And who will be the most benefitted by this. While we admit that the whole community will be benefitted, yet the agriculturists will reap the principal benefit. Wheat will therefore become more enriched and independent.

Though we have from the inauguration of the Grand Trunk railway been much to condemn in the manner in which our public men have acted in connection with the affairs of the Province, yet we are free to say that the Grand Trunk could have been no than Canada deprived of a railway communication.

"The event is not to pass over without a grand demonstration by the people of this Town, Municipality and by the road, namely, Montreal. First day, Tuesday, November 12, 8 a.m.—General procession thru' the city.

"2.00 o'clock, p.m.—Banquet in the building belonging to the Grand Trunk Railroad at Point St. Charles.

"7.00 p.m.—Torchlight procession and fireworks.

"Second Day—Thursday, Nov. 13. 9 a.m.—Steamboat excursion to the Victoria Bridge—Inauguration of new city water works.

2 p.m.—Grand Military Review. In the evening Grand Ball and Collation and Ball at Bonsecour's Hall.

In addition to the above, we observe that the Committee of the Montreal Water Committee to erect a Jet d'eau in the Hay Market Square, for the purpose of testing the expected visitors the effect of this new improvement, at a point where it will tell with the best effect.

CLOWNS REPLACE GHOSTS ON HALLOWE'EN NIGHT

This drawing portrays the changing attitude toward the significance of Hallowe'en the mystic night of shrieking witches bowling owls, and chattering ghosts. Although Oct. 31 is now regarded as an occasion for hilarity and grotesque costumes not so long ago the night was taken seriously, witches were burned at the stake and numerous precautions were taken to forestall their evil machinations. For centuries northern European have regarded Hallowe'en as a night when supernatural forces are closer to the earth. The newer generations in Canada have failed to heed these old superstitions and regard Hallowe'en as a night for revelry and harmless pranks.

SEVENTY SEVEN HYDRO CENTRES TO PAY DEBT

Power Mortgages Will Be Burned With Proper Ceremony

GREAT SAVING

Seven Other Municipalities Within 10 Per Cent of Liability

Toronto, Oct. 27—Drawing back the curtain further on Hydro's progress and achievement in this province, Hon. J. R. Cooke, Power Commission chairman, yesterday revealed that no less than 77 Hydro municipalities are now in a position to touch a match to their power "mortgages" and that seven other municipalities have reached the stage of profitable development where their liquid assets are within 10 per cent. of their total liabilities.

Mr. Cooke's revelation of this power picture—a picture every which, he admitted, he could not express too great joy and satisfaction—supplements the recent Brockville ceremony, in which that town was able formally to establish the position for itself of being numbered as the first power indebtedness; of paying that one-eighth the domestic rate charged 30 years ago under private ownership; and of having saved to its citizens $1,371,341 in that period by going about its business of steadily wiping off its indebtedness.

"There is nothing I can say," declared Mr. Cooke, "that could possibly strengthen the story which the achievements of these municipalities represent. If I might say a word to the power users of the province as this moment, it would be: Do not in this age of Hydro advancement become too casual in your acceptance of Hydro benefits. Remember once and a while the Hydro pioneers and the great founder, Sir Adam Beck, who moved mountains to bring about Ontario's present day success."

Fifty-one of the seventy-seven municipalities no unable to burn their power "mortgages" are in the Niagara system; fourteen in the Georgian Bay system; eleven in the Eastern Ontario system; and one, Port Arthur, in the Northern Ontario system. The seven other municipalities whose Hydro assets are within 10 per cent. of their liabilities are Agincourt, Aylmer, Listowel, Merlin, Richmond Hill, Simcoe and Tilbury.

Asked if it were not possible for those "out of debt" municipalities to unite in one great mortgage burning ceremony, Mr. Cooke explained that such could be staged but for the fact that most of the outstanding debentures in each instance were held outside the municipality and had not matured, although sufficient money, derived from power collections, was on hand to redeem them without any delay.

Hundreds of millions of dollars worth of the mortgages, or debentures as they are officially called, are affected by the achievement of the seventy-seven municipalities. They have been paid out by means of coal, power and light revenues derived from charges that are about one-quarter of the charges under old private ownership of power regimes. And the position which the municipalities enjoy, Mr. Cooke stated, has been reached without incurring one cent of municipal taxation anywhere in the province.

PRICE-LIFT MOVE TO HELP FARMERS?

Winnipeg, Oct. 27—Unless meat packers and other interests dealing in farm products take action to raise the prices the farmer receives, the government may have to step in and do it for them, Hon. R. H. Sycamore, Minister of Trade and Commerce, told the Winnipeg Board of Trade. The same thing he said, applied to insurance and loan companies holding farm mortgages if interest rates the farmer was unable to pay.

THANKS TO BUCKLEY'S HE NEVER WORRIES ABOUT BRONCHITIS NOW

Mr. Clifford G. Morrison, Massey, Ont., has abundant reason to bless the day he heard of BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE.

Since the school days he has suffered terribly from bronchitis, but now at the first sign of an attack he sips it in the teal with BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE. He says: "My experience with this wonderful medicine has always kept a bottle in the medicine chest—I never worry about bronchitis now."

Mr. Morrison's experience can be yours. If you've a hacking cough at night, racked to pieces with coughing, choked up until you can hardly breathe, just try BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE. You will be astounded how quickly the cough will stop, how your breathing will instantly become easier.

There's nothing like Buckley's for quick, sure, safe relief. It acts like a charm—A single sip proves it.

B. C. Electorate Bewildered By All Shades of Politics

223 Candidates Seeking 47 Seats, Confound Voters with Varied Platforms

Hon. T. D. Pattullo

BY PERCY C. RICHARDS

Central Press Canadian Writer

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 27—With 223 candidates seeking election to forty-seven seats in the eighteenth legislature, British Columbia politically is bewildered, befuddled and bewitched. Never in the history of the province have so many candidates offered themselves to the electorate. Never has there been so unusual situation as a leader of a government seeking re-election to office with a minority list of candidates, and never before have there been so many conflicting political views expressed by candidates.

The death of former Premier Hoover has complicated the unique election situation in this province.

It is generally accepted that the lives of all Canada are turned today on the British Columbia election, which culminates with voters going to the polls on November 7 to make their choice from an array of political talent that has confounded the electorate beyond all comprehension.

There are no less than an even dozen factors in the election. They are: Liberals 47; one man, one vote; Co-operative Commonwealth Federation; C.C.F.; Non-partisan League; Independents 36; United Front 19; Unionists 12; Conservatives 4; Socialists 4; Conservatives 4; Socialists 4; Independent Labor 1; and Ox-ford Group 1.

Conservatives Not Represented

For the first time in the history of party politics in this province, the Conservatives are not represented as an organization. The provincial executive refused to take a stand, having abolished the district Conservative Association. The result is that no organized effort was made to put a Conservative party in the field, and the four Conservatives that are running, are not association nominees.

Premier Pattullo, former minister of agriculture in the Federal House, was elected to the provincial legislature in 1928 with an overwhelming majority of thirty-two supporters. Today only two members of the original cabinet remain. They other ministers deserted the Conservative ship to seek re-election as Independents. Hon. H. E. Foley, attorney general, and Hon. Joshua Hinchcliffe, minister of mines, are the two standards. This cabinet personel is supplemented by two prominents made outside of the elected members to the House. Private members are pointing Premier Tolmie have changed their political hues more rapidly than a chameleon, and are all in the race under various shades of independence.

Liberals vs. C.C.F.

Real significance of the campaign however, apart from the obviously humorous aspect, is the C.C.F. threat to secure power, which is quite pronounced in this province. The Liberal party is fighting with candidates contesting forty-six of the seats. It is a fight between the Liberals or party Socialism, as the C.C.F. platform has been branded by opponents, against the most candidates of opposite views prefer to fall in behind the so called third edition of the O.B.U.

Speculation revolves around the question of whether the plethora of Independents and minor parties will split the vote sufficiently to allow the C.C.F. to steal into power on a minority of seats.

Premier T. D. Pattullo, leader of the opposition during the past five years, has marshalled the forces of Liberalism on a platform of social reform including freedom of speech; state health insurance, contributory, unemployment insurance; slow down of interest charges; creation of a board of industrial relations to seek means of assisting the unemployed; public works program for immediate relief; land relief and other such legislation.

The C.C.F. party platform is offering socialization of industries and banks.

Independents and minor groups

Hon. Wm. J. Bowser

have selected what they feel will get the most votes from the Liberal or C.C.F. platforms, and are trusting to luck and the multiplicity of candidates to get them in.

There was only one really honest candidate and he withdrew at the last-moment, frankly admitting he did not know what it was all about. He was John Rowland of Victoria.

Bowser Was Head

W. J. Bowser, K.C., former Conservative premier whose death has just occurred was head of the non Partisan Group, which is an aggregation of Conservatives and Liberals pledged to a Union government under the leadership of Bowser. Premier Tolmie, who heads the thirteen Unionist candidates, offers to leave the question to leadership up to the elected members to decide.

Hugh Savage is running on an Oxford Group platform in the Oxford riding, while in Victoria Independents are entered on other provincial platforms. Hon. Joshua Hinchcliffe is Unionist, Rev. Robert Connell is C.C.P. and Rev. Dr. Glen Davis is Independent. All opposed to the party system. This situation is causing worry to the old guard of Mr. Bowser.

The confusion that exists is ably illustrated in the case of Victoria where twenty-nine candidates are seeking four seats. In Vancouver there are fifty-six candidates contesting nine seats, while in Burnaby nine are contesting one seat. Vancouver Quiet Politically

Is peculiar on account of the death of Mr. Bowser.

Leadership of the C.C.F. is undecided. Whether the committee of twenty, which passed upon the qualifications of all C.C.F. candidates before they were announced will determine the leadership, has not yet been made known.

There is evidence of increasing that whoever is elected will have to do some tall hoeing with the election will not be long in coming. minority group will be in the main in office, and that another

Butter Makers of District Hold Banquet at "Y"

James Baker, Responsible For Affair, Made Presentation

The fourth annual dinner and get together of the Bay of Quinte Butter-Makers' Association, took place Thursday evening in the banquet hall of the Y.M.C.A. Jas Baker, creamery instructor for this district, was the man responsible for the arrangements of the affair and as he retorted to in emergency unprepared for the event, staged an interesting, enlightening and enjoyable entertainment for some 80 buttermakers of the district, who gathered to enjoy the night's creamery industry of this section of the province.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. catered to the affair and served a hot chicken dinner in admirable talk, which more than lived up to the reputation of the district.

Mr. Stanley Joss of this city, representative of the United Dairymen's Company, acted as chairman for the occasion, and agreeable music was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Barrett. Mr. Barrett sang in his usual excellent and pleasing style "Lighterman Tom" and "The Sunshine of Your Smile", he also led in the community singing. Mrs. Barrett acting as accompanist.

Mr. J. H. Scott, of Toronto, Chief Creamery Instructor of Ontario, was the speaker of the evening and was introduced by the chairman, though this was a perfunctory act, as Mr. Scott is known to every buttermaker in the province, or anyone in Ontario connected with the creamery industry.

Mr. Scott recently celebrated the 30th anniversary of his connection with the dairy industry of the province, and his remarks were based on the growth and development of the industry and the many improvements in machinery connected with it since he became associated with it 44 years ago. He spoke of the ever widening scope of the dairy business and its expanding markets.

To the speaker's knowledge, he had assisted in back records, Mr. Mark Sprague of this city, was the first creamy instructor appointed in Ontario.

Mr. Scott's reminiscent talk was thoroughly enjoyed throughout.

Illustrated Address

Mr. Baker introduced Mr. F. T. Grafton of the Belleville Collegiate Institute educational staff, who delighted his hearers with an illuminating illustrated talk on "Bird Life in Ontario." Mr. Grafton is a traveller of many years experience in bird lore, and knows the greater portion of the globe, he has found in Northern Ontario, a veritable paradise for lovers of interesting as in any other part of the province. His remarks, thoroughly illustrated were followed with the closest attention and the hearty thanks of the audience were recorded him demonstrated the interest he had aroused in all who heard him.

Presentation Made.

Mr. Roy Joss of this city, president of the Association made a brief presentation to Mr. Baker, and of the evening was a presentation of a standard lamp to Mr. Baker since the last annual gathering Jim had taken unto himself a wife and he botched had taken Jim as a husband.- Anyway there was an appreciation and suitable reply, and so the evening, with the good-will the buttermakers of this district have for the recent bridegroom, they marked their fourth annual dinner with the appreciation of his work and the interest he has ever shown in the interested people connected with the dairy industry.

A very pleasant evening and happily carried through the event marked another milestone in the history of the Bay of Quinte district.

IT'S LIVER THAT MAKES YOU FEEL SO WRETCHED

Wake up your Liver Bile

—No Calomel necessary

For you to feel healthy and happy, your liver must pour 1 to 2 pints of liquid bile into your bowels, every day. Without that bile, digestion is poor. Food decays. Sour gases bloat stomach. Constipation poisons the entire system. Your head aches. You feel sour, sunk, sleepy and tired. Merely relieve constipation with just a few cents worth of Carter's Little Liver Pills. Purely vegetable. Gentle. Safe. Sold by druggists everywhere. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c, at all druggists.

Gall Stones

The principal function of the liver is to make bile. During the process of digestion the bile flows directly into the intestine but when digestion is complete the bile is stored in a little sac placed under the right lobe of the liver, called the gall bladder. In case stones should be chronic inflammation of the gall bladder the mineral element in the bile will crystalize and this condition is known as gall stones.

Chiropractors by removing the pressure from the nerves that supply the liver relieve the inflammation and the bile becomes normal. The crystallization of gall stones being bathed in normal secreted bile will dissolve.

MUSSOLINI PRAISED

Hamilton, Oct. 27—Hon. Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the University of Toronto, paid tribute to Mussolini in an address to the Canadian Club last night. The Italian statesman, Dr. Cody said, was a very effective man who had a plan and the necessary faith in it to carry it out. Security vouchsafed the people of Italy under Mussolini's program and state control had proved a success. Mussolini also was preparing for the future by training the youth of the country along progressive lines, Dr. Cody stated.

AT THE BELLE

What Carrie Nation, that ardent prohibitionist of the gay nineties, called a "den of iniquity" is the scene of much of the excitement that takes place in "The Bowery," which is one of the most refreshingly amusing comedy dramas to be presented in a long time, at the Belle tonight and tomorrow (Saturday). Each star is provided with an equal opportunity by a story that deals with real characters who made the Bowery the "street mile on the face of the globe" in its heyday.

That day was the period of the swinging door saloon, the honky tonk, white slavers, volunteer fire brigade and other such institutions as "ta-ra-ra Boom De-ay."

And it was the day of bustles bangs and ruffled bathing suits for women.

It's all there in "The Bowery," a story of the rivalry between Chuck Connors, saloon owner and leader of the famous street on New York's Bad Side, and Steve Brodie, who never took a dare. He even dared so he claimed, to jump off Brooklyn Bridge knowing that, should he succeed, his fame would eclipse Connors'. In the latter Connors' bar, his saloon that Brodie can't do it.

Steve's love for girl Connors rescued from white slavers and otherwise befriended, makes comedy dramatic their enmity— an enmity that winds up in friendship through the efforts of Mike, a typical newsboy of the period, played by Jackie Cooper.

Wallace Beery as Chuck Connors and George Raft as Brodie give character portrayals that will be remembered with chuckles. Neither has ever done anything better.

Raoul Walsh's direction of "The Bowery" is colorful and virile and extracts every bit of comedy that Howard Estabrook and Joseph Gilson have written into the adaptation of Michael L. Simmons' and B.

Wallace Beery, George Raft and Jackie Cooper are starred in this 20th Century picture—that is, by the way, and an achievement to be proud of, it comes to the Belle tomorrow (Saturday) and Monday. MARMORA CHURCH HOLDS SUPPER

J. O. Herity Guest Speaker—Excellent Program Given

Marmora, Oct. 27—The anniversary supper of St. Andrew's Church on Monday evening drew a large attendance and merited unstinted praise.

Following a period for social intercourse, an excellent programme was given in the church by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth presiding. In his usual hearty manner the chairman in his remarks introduced the guest of honor who occupied the place of honor in the gift of the board to see the many friends gathered together once more. Miss Beatrice Sandwith, Belleville's noted tenor, gave an ideal start to the program, and his solo number "Song of Songs." Miss Beatrice Conboy of Stirling, well established her reputation as a soprano in her solo of "Ave Maria." Both responded to an encore. Mr. Walter Prentice of Foxboro with some pleasing guitar selections. R. E. Fowler, Belleville's name next, with two rollicking songs "I'm a Jolly Old Rover" and "Captain Mac." For his second group, "Jean James Sandler, Once Upon O Sun" and "Gaelic O'Neil" Mr. Joss which always feature an ovation.

Mr. J. O. Herity of Belleville as guest speaker entertained the members with a talk in which humour, philosophy and poetry were intermingled. In his discourse he led up to the importance of the dairy and poultry industry. In the past ten years, he said, the production in poultry in Canada, has exceeded by 100 per cent. He emphasized the common hen as one of the best illustrations of the value of educating the young. Proceeding from the education of the boys and youth within the penetentary walls today and children of the reformatories. The present system of education he felt did not lend encouragement to think for themselves and to use their own judgment. In instance the case of Edison and other notable men who had acted similarly, but had not known either school and phonograph records, as it were. He concluded his much appreciated

FIRST NIGHT IN FILMLAND

Clever Marionettes is Outstanding Feature of Stage Presentation

Last night the Capitol was filled to capacity when the first presentation of the current stage and screen attractions were made.

The 15-bill of the stage show was undoubtedly Simpson's Marionettes, in "Puppets on Parade." This clever puppetonics was a tremendous treat to both the adults and the juveniles, presenting in the assorted audience. Clever changes by the twist of a string turned an ostrich egg into a snake—a skeleton became a mass of flying limbs disemembering from trunk,—the large frogs romp around the miniature stage and Hey, Presto! three fashionable ladies take their places!

This marionette show is well worth the price of admission alone and should not be missed.

Ott and Morgan in "Old Times and New" was drolllly personified and their jokes about Congress and Roosevelt were topical and well received.

The final act, "The Four Red Caps," contained two excellent dancers, Claude Turner, a sheery little darkie whose feet were faster than his magician's hands and a charming little lady who contorted her lithe form figure into amazing twists.

The Capitolians did splendid work and the number featured at their interlude was "Whistling Under the Moon," the theme hit of "Heads We Go," a new Fanchon film due at the Capitol soon. Ab Adams and his fellow musicians certainly enhance the stage presentation.

Tarzan

Two things stand out in the film adventures of "Tarzan, the Fearless" and they are the physique of Buster Crabbe, who takes the title role, and the wild background of the North American continent.

Readers of Edgar Rice Burrough's famous stories will recognize the story of this film. It recounts the adventures of a small band of whites who penetrated into the fastnesses of the African jungles, the home of Tarzan. In this party are: Doctor Brooks, middle-aged archeologist; his daughter, Mary; Bob Hall, who joined the party principally because he was in love with Mary; Jeff Herbert, scientist and new do well, and Nick Moran, ex-convict.

In this trackless waste they are beset with perils, seen and unseen, that would daunt the hardiest spirit. Beasts of the jungle stalk them, primitive people of Zar attack them at every turn, daring exploits and thrilling rescue succeed one another with maximum rapidity; and Tarzan is the centre of the whirlwind of action.

Buster Crabbe as Tarzan performs incredible deeds of agility and valor in a sensational manner. Jacqueline Wells in the feminine lead is a charming actress and is richly endowed with pulchritude. Bob Hall is splendid in a fearless role.

The supporting program is very good, particularly the battle for life between the snake and the tarantella.

TWO TWEED TENNIS PLAYERS MAKE FINE SHOWING AT QUEENS

Tweed, Oct. 27.—Two of Tweed's tennis players Miss W. J. Kindred and Mr. R. Bonney, both of Queen's University, maintained their reputations at tennis players in the intercollegiate tennis tournament at Kingston, when they advanced very close to the finals before being eliminated. Bonney defeated Miller of Ottawa, Wright of Ottawa, Baker of Hamilton, Sabbath of Kingston without the loss of a single game. He was defeated by Lefebvre of Montreal, Miss Kindred by the narrow margin of 6-4, 6-4, 8-6 on Thursday. Miss Kindred defeated all excellent lady players before succumbing. The presentation of the trophies was held in Dr. Mather's cottage on Wednesday in aid of the public library. Mrs. A. Locke and Mrs. J. J. McTague had charge of arrangements. The winner was Mrs. M. J. Quinn who was awarded a prize donated by Mr. Burge's Tweed Store. Following the bridge, dinner was served to a large number of those interested in the library. The proceeds announced to a considerable sum.

An interesting and enjoyable evening was spent by Tweed branch of the A.N.V.C. on Friday in their club rooms. A good membership was present. The president, P. One of Pauline Johnston's poems, "Beyond the Blue" was recited, in very excellent style by Miss Lois Hutcheon.

DANGERS OF INFLATION

Ottawa, Oct. 27.—The dangers of currency inflation, from the aspect of international credit, were outlined by Prime Minister Bennett in an address today before the Ottawa Woman's Club.

"Inflation means that without any real restriction a nation continues to issue promises to pay which, having sold, coerces to back up the promise," said Mr. Bennett. "The danger lies not in what we do at home, because any medium might be used or domestic purposes but when you consider the position of Canada as a country borrowing in the markets of the world, a debtor to the extent of hundreds of millions, then you can see the maintenance of international credit depends upon the nation placing behind its paper promise something that implies good faith in its power to redeem it to the letter of the contract."

WORKERS ON RELIEF SCHEME GIVING THEIR BEST EFFORT

Work Undertaken Will Be Benefit to City

Eminently pleased with the results so far of the system now in use, City Foreman John Henderson today stated that work under the existing relief scheme "is proceeding without a hitch."

"Out of the whole gang of one hundred and fifty or more men there are very few who have shown any inclination since they started to hang back on the job. Every one of the men is glad to get back to work and are entering into the spirit of it better than they would if the work plan had been worked in any other way."

Mayor George O. Tice, who has also followed the work closely stated today that he was greatly pleased with the spirit and genuine effort shown by the men. "I haven't noticed any of them that weren't doing their fair share of the work" he said.

At present between one hundred and forty-and one hundred and fifty men are being given steady employment on the various projects. The largest gang of men are at work in the bed of the Moira River, just below the junction of the old Dam's and new channels formed to keep the current of the river in circulation. Boulders, stones and material are being shovelled into wheel barrows and conveyed to other points along the river banks where fill is needed. One example of the direct benefit being obtained by this work is the elimination of the old swamp and marsh in the lowland just west of Memorial park where a huge mental condition being placed to raise the water off, and being filled over.

On South Front Street, with the greater part of the work of constructing storm sewer finished, a smaller force of workers is engaged in laying the concrete tile at the south end and constructing catch basins and manholes.

West Moira Street crews never work has had a good start and plow laying has also been completed up to a certain point. The street is expected to provide work for some time.

Church and Turnbull streets storm sewers provide work for still another gang of men. This week after drilling for some time blasting at the south end of the street has started, while other workers with pick and shovel carry on the excavation at the northern end.

EMILY MURPHY PASSES AWAY

Noted Canadian Jurist And Writer Known as "Janey Canuck"

Edmonton, Oct. 27 (CP)—Mrs. Emily Murphy, noted jurist and writer and jurist, and widely known under her pen name "Janey Canuck," died last night.

The noted writer died in her sleep and was found this morning by members of her family. Her contributions to Canadian affairs were not confined to literary fields.

As a leader in the feminist movement she was widely recognized. She was one of that determined little group of women who for the long fight for the ballot which resulted in the Privy Council decision that women were not "qualified persons" within the meaning of the British North America Act and consequently eligible for appointment to the Senate.

Recently, before the child welfare and social improvement her appointment as police magistrate of the Edmonton Juvenile Court was recognized as a fitting one. She was the first woman in the British Empire appointed to the Bench. In 1931, however, she resigned to accentuate to devote more time to her other interests.

Ramblings . . .

A local business man strode along briskly the other morning in the direction or his store to open up for the day's business. As he neared the middle of a man who had been loitering in the shelter of a doorway, giving him the eye, passed out of the hall and sidling up for a chat. "Give us a half dollar will you?" mumbled the knight of the road. The local gentleman looked a bit startled and asked the man why he needed that amount

"Coffee, coffee," was the unashaven one.

"Coffee! A half dollar for coffee?"

"Yeah, I'm a coffee fiend."

Another local gentleman, who says his story is too good to keep, tells just how much fun his wife had not long ago over a few shirts she tried to buy. She was prowling through a department store not long ago when she saw some shirts on sale that she thought her husband would like. Remembering she had a charge account there, she ordered four sent to her home. That afternoon they arrived, marked C.O.D. Fearing that a mixup might result later she returned to pay the deliveryman. The driver refused to accept and took them back. The following day the store called and asked her they hadn't been a mistake. They'd sent her the shirts C.O.D. because her charge account wasn't in very good shape—but when they said, been fixed up for a year or so. Indignant now, the lady reiterated that this certainly was a mistake, and she used her charge account not long ago. Next morning the store called again and apologized, admitting that the account was paid up, but went on to say that since she hadn't used it for so long they'd marked it as closed. The shirts would have to be sent C.O.D. after all. The lady said in that case she didn't want them, and hung up. They had decided to reopen again. They had decided to reopen her account, they said. The shirts would be sent right away. The next day after that the store telephoned again. "About that order for the shirts," they began. "Yes," replied the lady, wearily. "We're sorry," they continued, "but we are out of those particular kind just at the moment."

President Roosevelt's contribution to the ranks of polite conversation, the word 'chicalier,' which he used in a recent radio address to the country, is not the first colorful bit of slang that has been adopted by his countrymen. Other Presidents before him have also given their bit to the country. Woodrow Wilson, for example, furnished "watchful waiting." Harding supplied "Normalcy." Hoover made free use of the words "noble experiment." Mr. Roosevelt, however, has been more abundant. Thus the most of his predecessors, with "forgotten man," "industrial cannon fodder", "new deal," and now "chalier." In the ranks of the politicians new words creep up constantly to bewilder the foreigner who is slowly accustoming himself to the use of English. Al Smith is credited with making "boloney" popular. "I'll tell the world" goes back to the writers' words of William Shakespeare in Henry IV, "whoops" goes back to the Dark Century, England, where herdsmen used it to call sheep; "nobody home" is meaning lack of brains, is found in the writings of Beaumont and Fletcher, and in "Bleak House," Dickens was the first to use "I got your number."

To be "taken for a buggy ride," comes from the underworld and is used by the narcotic addict to describe taking morphine. Leave out the "buggy" and it's a scorching elegan again. "Cafeteria" is from the Spanish and originally meant a place where you could drink coffee. "Punk," the word used to describe smoking, is Scottish and means "to moisten."

CHRISTMAS CANDY LOST

Mixed With Gasoline in Wreck on Rails at Dryden, Ont..

Dryden, Ont., Oct. 27 (CP)—Christmas candy destined to fill the stockings of Western children, mixed with gasoline, and several tons of chandise in the railway yards here today when a string of freight wreck in which 16 box cars were smashed and 20 more derailed.

A broken axle is believed to have caused the pile-up of the west-bound freight. No lives were definitely established. The engine and several cars remained on the track and no one was injured.

Tank cars loaded with gasoline sent their volatile contents gushing out through huge breaks and pending the arrival of a wrecking crew today the fire department stood by to guard against an outbreak. One careening car rammed into the freight shed wall and smashed it down. One car was loaded with candy, all of which was strewn over the tracks.

Several cars are reduced to splinters, and rails on the east-bound tracks were torn up for some distance.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

When Gulnadis opened her eyes she saw the black-maned lion looking intently off toward the north. It gave a low, rumbling growl. Something was coming. There seemed to her ears a rustling of the leaves above and the giant figure of a man dropped lightly to the ground. The lion arose and faced the man, who regarded it fixedly for a brief second. "Jad-bal-ja!" he exclaimed. "Come to heel!"

With amazement Gulnadis saw the lion obey the command. The man stroked it affectionately. Then he came toward her. "You are the Princess Gulnadis? Do not be afraid. I am Tarzan—a friend of Sir James." Then thou art truly mine as well," she cried. "Why did the lion not kill thee?" Tarzan smiled. "I have raised him in my home from cubhood," he explained. "There must be some of my people nearby, else Jad-bal-ja would not be here."

Tarzan brought the girl food and drink. For the HOME of EVE

by Lucy Wallis

CHAPTER IX

Dick was firm in his arguments for announcing their marriage. He repeated to Eve all the objections against secret marriages, including the embarrassment she would feel if her business friends should learn of it by a roundabout way and question her. Dick was honest and straightforward to a degree that Eve at times regarded as shortness, but he had a certain dignity that nothing could shake and which Eve could not help but respect. And it gave her a deep sense of satisfaction to know that he commanded the respect of others.

Eve wanted each of their events of her life to stand out—to be remembered by her friends as different from the usual. Marriage customs, Dick assured her, had "become" about by chance. Their purpose was to emphasize the importance of the marriage tie. To strengthen it, and give it dignity.

After repeated discussions and arguments, Eve and Dick compromised. It was agreed that their relatives should be informed of their marriage but that, for the present, Eve need not announce it to her business associates.

She took into her confidence a friend who was a promising young artist and asked her to design a combination Christmas card and wedding announcement. These were brought home by a very excited Eve one snowy Saturday early in December. She and Dick spent their spare time addressing, sealing and stamping the envelopes and then put them away to be mailed Christmas week. That settled, Dick was frankly relieved.

"Of course, as soon as our friends know of our marriage we will entertain," Eve began.

"That all right," Dick answered, "so long as we know they're coming. I'll leave them for a definite time. Don't want a lot of people hooting in on our privacy when we have something else to do."

Eve was silent for a while. Then she ventured hesitatingly "Dick, do you think— well you see this place is quite shabby looking. Oh, I know it has atmosphere and all that, but, well, I'd hate to have any of the people I know find me living here."

Eve willed a little before the question in Dick's clear, steady eyes. "What do you propose do, Eve?" he asked.

"Oh find another place." This is trifle definite.

Dick was silent. He was fond of picturesque old houses under ancient lore. Eve called his attention to the brown step, the dismal bathroom, the unattractive kitchen.

"I'll fix them up for your aesthetic friends," he suggested.

He was as good as his word. Dethroned the old ogre, Mrs. Hogan, purchased paint and linoleum and Dick commandeered the services of a painter. Table and chairs he enameled in bewitching hues, apple-green satiny over-drapes at the large, old-fashioned windows and gay flame curtains were of cream net. They found an old screen in the attic, which Eve covered effectively and used to conceal the stove and sink.

An old mahogany bookcase was moved in to be used as a cupboard. Eve brought home a chintz lamp-shade with a gay linings. This cast a rosy glow over the room.

"I love it," she exclaimed when the transformation was complete. "It looks like a charming breakfast room instead of a kitchen."

The gloomy bathroom was changed into gaie and span pink-and-whiteness above the baseboard. The baseboard itself was enameled black to top the black and white block pattern of the linoleum floor. Eve used a flowered chintz curtain at the window.

These were changes that would affect the reliability of the apartment and Dick seemed to enjoy making the improvement. "There!" he declared when he had finished the painting. "This is far more comfortable than a box-like place up three flights of stairs for the same price. We have room to turn around here."

Eve had worked out a program which she followed with military precision. Dick co-operated with her to the best of his ability. There were times when his work made it impossible for him to reach home punctually and he had not time to do the marketing, start the dinner and change into fresh clothes. At such times Eve sat unwilling through the meal and answered his questions briefly. Dick was evenly tempered through it all. The truth was that he worried over Eve. She seemed restless and often looked tired. True, they had been married only a few weeks—crowded, anxious weeks in spite of their happiness. He decided Eve must be working too hard at the office and told her so.

"It's not that at all!" she assured him. "But after working in an office with well-groomed business men all day do you expect me to look pleased and cheerful when I come home and find my husband wearing a blue flannel shirt—and tonight even— boots? High boots! MY HUSBAND, of all people, not caring how he looks—!" Eve grew hysterical and rushed into the living room to throw herself on the davenport where she sobbed until quiet.

Dick, his face white, his lips set in a straight line, remained in the kitchen, staring straight ahead. Presently he arose, cleared the table and stacked and washed the dishes. He did not go near Eve.

After a while she knew, went into the bathroom and bathed her eyes. Then she filled a bowl with suds and washed out some stockings and lingerie too dainty and fragile to trust to any hands but her own. She had intended to do this task in the morning after Dick had left for the day's work. But she was in a perverse mood tonight.

Dick went to bed. He heard Eve turn on the living room lamp and rustle the evening paper. Then he grew into troubled sleep. She wakened him. "Dick," she said in a small voice, "I'm sorry."

"Nothing to be sorry for," he answered. He had to admit to himself things out—to make allowances.

"I was horrid to you."

"You were saying what you thought," he said. "That's all right. I want you always to feel free to speak out. That way I'll know what's in your mind."

"Well, I thought being a superior person meant an office and a polished desk where you did not get given orders. And sometimes when I come home and you are— are not there—!"

"Listen, Eve, I could get awfully mad at you if I didn't realize what makes you talk like that. Now, get this straight! There are still a great many things you have to learn about what makes life work and go around. One of them is that the way things look doesn't alter the truth any. Another is that a man usually knows what his job requires of him. I think I'm not necessarily dirty clothes. There are days on the job when I dress up. I'd look like a damned fool if I wore spats and a walking stick when my men are erecting steel."

"You wouldn't look like a fool to me. I think if you stood far enough off from the mess, you wouldn't look spattered with plaster and things."

Dick gave a snort of anger.

Eve was persistent. "Couldn't you manage that way?" she wheedled.

Dick heaved a sigh and answered with finality. We had a tough time today and if you had seen one half of it, I believe you'd think a pair of boots and an old shirt presentable to wear."

Eve was accustomed to having her own way. Apparently now that she was 'married she was going to be make some concessions she had not heretofore considered possible. The idea was disturbing and crept into bed shivering with cold and anger.

CHAPTER 10

Matters were smoothed over for the time but the sight of Dick in a flannel shirt at the dinner table—though it was less common after Eve's outburst—continued to irritate her and she could not always conceal this irritation. Once she found herself, to her disgust, comparing Dick's appearance with Theron Reece's carefully grooming.

In spite of its shabby setting in the down-at-the heel house, Eve could not help but feel pride in her home. Often she found herself dreaming about improvements that could be made in it—ways to rearrange the furniture, an added touch of color here and there —when going through the store's various departments in search of ideas for her column.

Late in the afternoon she sometimes became nervous and worried and could not do her best work because she was almost certain she would be asked to remain after the store's closing hour to help get out the next day's copy.

Mr. Bixby did not know of this but he was sure. Prompt and efficient himself, he tried to exact prompt and efficiency from his department heads and, through them, from every employee.

But Mr. Bixby interfered very little with Barnes' management of the advertising department. In the first months during which Barnes had worked for him, Mr. Bixby had tried to restrain the younger man's enthusiasms and had required many surrenders. Increasingly the advertising budget to the amount Barnes had requested. Finally, however, as Barnes produced results Mr. Bixby the increased expenditure, he had ceased to proceed without interference.

Nevertheless Mr. Bixby was opposed to overtime work except on rare occasions when it could not be avoided. There were such times, Eve knew. The days and evenings preceding the semi-annual remnant-day sales were examples. Then, Eve knew, the great department store resembled nothing so much as a madhouse. And now that the rush of Christmas selling was on and the volume of advertising increased accordingly, there was seldom an evening that Eve arrived home on time.

She regretted this. She felt that it was not fair to expect Dick to prepare the dinner every evening as had become the usual routine. His job had its delays and vexations, too.

He worked hard. He worked in all kinds of weather. Eve was beginning to understand that sometimes he came home more exhausted than the men whose manual labor he directed. Eve was beginning to understand that Dick would always give more than was required or expected of him to any contract to which he bound himself.

She was thinking of this one December evening after a gray, slushy, day gave way to darkness outside, the office windows and she typed away, turning the little sheet of penciled notes with pardonable pride. She was wishing that this once she could arrive home before Dick and surprise him with a delicious, dinner, piping hot. Of course she could not. Not tonight.

POLICE OFFER REWARD FOR INFORMATION

Pathologist Not Convinced Baby Hillier Undressed Self

MANY QUESTIONED

Father Poor But Authorities Are Arranging Proper Burial

TORONTO, Oct. 27. — (CP)— Despite most through investigation no clues had been found today in the mystery of the death of the 18-months-old Alfreda Hillier, whose frozen body was found on a city dump near her home early yesterday.

Police confessed themselves baffled after many of tracking down clues and tips from all parts of the city. The Police Commission offered a $500 reward last night for information which would lead to apprehension of any person or persons concerned in the child's death.

Alfreda strayed or was taken away from the verandah of her home on Wednesday afternoon. Hundreds of police and citizens searched for her, some in the very spot in which the body was later found. It was bitterly cold, and the child, stripped of her clothing, was covered by the steel door of an automobile.

In an overturned fruit basket nearby, all her clothing had been placed. Through two sleeves of her dress were pinned through and underskirt, a safety pin had been placed. The body was bruised and bore some marks, but death was directly due to exposure. Dr. W. J. Robinson, Pathologist, who performed an autopsy on the body, said there was no evidence of gross injury, suffocation or violence, that would have caused death. But he declared he could not believe the child might have walked into the dump, undressed herself, put her clothes in the basket, found the safety pin through the sleeves, and then fallen asleep.

Half a dozen playmates of the baby were questioned for hours by police. One apparently over-excited, said a big boy had taken Alfreda away. Police questioned him but found nothing.

Seven detectives have now been specially detailed to the case and in addition every member of the police force is working extra time in tracking down every report or detail possible.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed. The parents of the child are in straightened circumstances but authorities are planning to see the baby has a proper funeral.

Alfred Hillier, father of the infant, last night formally identified the body of his daughter and cold officials he had but "35 cents between me and starvation." A shell-veteran, he was thrice mentioned in despatches for bravery during the Great War.

ITALIAN PRIMACY ENVISIONED BY MUSSOLINI

ARAB DISTURBANCES OVER INFLUX OF JEWS SPREAD TO HAIFA

PRIMACY OF ITALIANS IN SKY, ON EARTH

Mussolini Holds up Gigantic Task Before His People

ROME IS CROWDED

Fascist Italy Stirred by Great Day of Ritual

Rome, Oct. 28—Premier Mussolini said today he wished to give the Italian nation a hard but magnificent task, that of obtaining primacy on earth and in the skies.

Amid a din of sirens, church bells and ordinary street noisemakers, a Fascist Italy celebrated the 11th anniversary of the beginning of the black-shirt regime. Thousands of meetings and other public acts throughout the land paraded and general fervor making marked the event.

A message from Il Duce's pen was read to hundreds of thousands of uniformed Fascists gathered in the public piazas of every community in the Italian peninsula this morning.

Phrased in a combination of recognition of the steps so far achieved and a solemn warning that the black spirit throughout the realm would be expected to continue to push forward the prestige of the party, it served as the keynote of a day of ritual devoted to commemoration of the birth of the present regime.

Eleven years ago today Mussolini's black shirts drove into Rome a conquering swarm that overthrew almost the downfall of the old loosely-knit form of government.

Il Duce in Regalia

Today, as on that memorable occasion when he agreed to assume the new office of Premier, Il Duce was perhaps the busiest of all Italians. Decked in full uniform of the supreme Fascist chieftain, the Premier started out early to follow his own precedent of marking the black shirt anniversary with the inauguration of new works projects and with the dedication of finished enterprises.

His official activity included the opening to the public of a new series of scenic avenues surrounding the Capitoline Hill. Il Duce's journey, across a maginthy dwelling places have been demolished to bring the hill into better relief. Before 11 Duce reviewed the 20,000 holders of decorations for valor.

Here is Albert H. Wiggin, former chairman of the Chase National Bank, of New York, who has asked the institution to discontinue payment of his $100,000 annual retirement salary. Wiggin, who disclosed the huge pension while testifying before the senate banking and currency committee took the action because of public criticism. Wiggin's recent income figures are shown above.

INCOME TAX ACT PROTESTS

Minister of Revenue Told Some Firms Escape, Others Pay

Toronto, Oct. 28 (CP)—A complaint against the workings of certain features of Section 27 of the Income Tax Act has been forwarded to Hon. E. D. Ryckman, Minister of National Revenue, by the Canadian Importers' Association. Under this section, the association says, certain firms in Canada will have to pay the tax and others will escape.

"It would appear," the complaint states, "that this section does not cover sales made by mail direct or orders placed by buying offices in foreign countries. Members of this association have already received notice from their principals stating that if the Canadian government persists in their intention to collect this tax, they will be compelled to ship direct to the trade without the intervention of a Canadian representative."

CALL STRIKE IN REPUBLIC

Start on Monday And Will Last For 48 Hours

Havanna, Oct. 28 (CP)—The Confederation of Labor today called a general strike throughout Cuba for midnight Monday as a protest against "clashes between troops and workers."

The strike period was fixed at 48 hours, but provisions were made for extending it "should the circumstances demand it".

Busses did not appear on Havana streets this morning and streetcars ceased as a protest against the arrest of two officials of their union. This was considered preliminary to the general strike.

Meanwhile the newspaper, Diario De La Marina, which has been affected recently by a strike, appeared on the streets and found heavy sales. There were no disorders as the editions soon were exhausted.

Employees of the newspaper slept in the building last night fearing attack.

Employers of the gas and electric light company set noon today as the deadline for compliance with their demands, threatening to strike and leave the city without light and gas thereafter.

Shaking hands all around and behaving like accustomed guests, Litvinoff said, "I know you expect me to say something, but that's impossible at present.

Toronto, Oct. 28 (CP)—Noted for his ready retort on the public platform, Controller Sam McBride was somewhat disconcerted at a disruption which occurred while he addressed a ratepayers' meeting here. ARABS RIOTING AT HAIFA, TWO ARE INJURED

Saturday's Outbreak is Sequel to Fatal Clash at Jaffa

TAXIS SMASHED

Arabs Set Fire to Trucks to Block Roads And Hamper Police

Haifa, Palestine, Oct. 28 (CP)—Serious rioting among Arabs demonstrating against Jewish immigration to Palestine resulted in another serious clash today in which several were wounded, including a British policeman.

Rioting lines were drawn between police and the surging throngs of Arabs in the district around the railway station taking drastic steps to avoid general bloodshed, authorities proclaimed the curfew law to clear the streets.

The Arabs attempted to rush the station for the arrival of prisoners arrested at Jaffa in connection with yesterday's outbreaks in which at least thirteen were slain and many wounded.

The police arrived in time to prevent serious damage as the Arabs attempted to overturn automobiles and taxis. The rioters already had blockaded roads and burned tires in an attempt to hinder authorities in transporting the prisoners who were ordered to be detained at the local station.

Troops then were deployed over the roofs of the railway station and the offices of military headquarters. Others took to the roads to quell the rioting there.

Trouble also threatened at Acre across Acre Bay from Haifa.

Meanwhile the government here placed several trucks at the disposal of the Jewish population and they were manned with troops.

BODY FOUND NEAR GASPE

Maude Asch, Missing Since August 30th, Drowned

Quebec, Oct. 28 (CP)—The body of Maude Asch, 18, who, with her cousin, Marguerite Asch, 17, disappeared from a boat near Belleisle, Que., August 30, has been found floating in the bay at Gaspe, according to reports reaching the Attorney General's office here.

A week ago fishermen found a girl's foot wedged in the rocks on the Gaspe coastline. She was tentatively identified as that of Maude Asch. A few days ago a coat and slicker were also found and identified by members of the family to belong to the girl.

No trace has been discovered of the older girl and a thorough search has been prosecuted since the time girls disappeared two months ago.

Following the receipt of word the body had been found, the Attorney General's department instructed Dr. Rosario Lemieux, provincial medico-legal expert, to go to Gaspe to hold an inquest.

It was Dr. Fontaine who examined the foot and accompanied it that of a teen-age girl.

Like the discovery of the foot and the clothing, Quebec authorities had enlisted the assistance of fishermen in attempting to locate the body. The brief message here did not indicate how the body was discovered, but it was assumed dynamite has been used to bring it to the surface.

The investigation, it is hoped, will establish whether Maude Asch was drowned by accident or whether she was murdered. A theory held by many members of the small community where the girls lived was that they were killed in revenge by rumrunners because activities in connection by the sister's relatives in the Customs Preventive Service.

Miss Nurse Heads Teachers Association at Deaf School

Thirty-Seven Students of O. S. D. Visit at Ottawa

BADMINTON SERIES

Superintendent Petterly is consistently and persistently carrying on his effective activity on behalf or the deaf of the Province, his ambition being that every deaf child shall receive an education. That this propaganda is necessary is evinced by the fact that there are 1,000 deaf children are located, some of them as old as 16 years, who have never attended any school. In the last two years 400 have been admitted for the first time.

Owing to the fact that the public school teachers are likely to know of any deaf children in their respective locations who are not attending school, Mr. Petterly gets in touch with all the teachers' associations as possible at their annual convention. Thus, on October 6 he addressed the East Lanark convention at Almonte and the North Renfrew Association at Pembroke. Then every year one Saturday session is invited to spend a day at the school, those so favored this year being the Ottawa teachers, from whose visit was previously reported the Perth, Carleton and the Ottawa teachers, who spent the whole day of October 14 at the school. Mr. F. C. Johnson, Inspector of the Ottawa schools, thus sums up his impressions gained on his visit to the school and seeing its inner workings as we are told, one could only speak the highest words of commendation for the splendid work that is being done by the very efficient staff of the school under the wise and capable direction of the Superintendent, Mr. Petterly.

On Sunday, October 22nd, thirty-seven of the pupils, accompanied by Mr. Petterly, Miss Pratt, Miss Hurst, Miss Rathbun, Miss Keeler, Miss Beddick and Mr. Gordon and Mr. McGuire, motored to Ottawa where a busy two days were spent. They attended St. James' Church that evening and took part in the program at the social afterwards. On Monday the primary forenoon they gave a demonstration at the Ottawa Normal School which was heartily enthusiastically acclaimed by the staff and pupils. In the afternoon they were the guests of the Rotary Club at the Chateau Laurier, addressing members of the evening luncheon. In addition to the dances, songs and band music by the pupils, fifteen minutes in all, Miss Rathbun and Miss Beddick favored the audience with vocal solos and Miss Rathbun and Mr. Gordon with piano selections. At every demonstration Mr. Petterly gave a brief address in which he outlined the work carried on at the school and explained the educational benefits derived from the rhythm work and such other exercises as the pupils had exemplified.

On their way home on Tuesday a couple of hours were spent at the Kemptville Agricultural School where lunch was served, for which the pupils expressed their appreciation by singing a few dances and other exercises.

The Ladies' Association of Teachers and Instructors has been reorganized for the session, with the following officers: Hon. President, Mr. Petterly, M.A.; George P. WOMAN HELD FOR RED SPY

Woman Known as Mary Martin Arrested at Helsingfors

London, Oct. 28.—A young woman named Mary Martin, possessing a Canadian passport, was among a group under arrest at Helsingfors as alleged members of an international conspiracy to obtain military secrets from Russia.

An American teacher living in Helsingfors was also arrested, but her name was not divulged.

The Finnish police suspect that Miss Martin is the head of the organization, which has agents or spies in many countries whose business it is to obtain military secrets for sale to the Soviet Government.

Lieut. Pentikainen, a photographer on the Finnish General Staff who was the alleged principal local agent in Finland, fled the country under mysterious circumstances on Oct. 1, and it is thought he escaped into Russia with important staff documents in his possession.

Police revealed that the woman's full name was Mary Louise Martin, but they were unable to identify her. There was a possibility that her Canadian passport had been forged. She speaks poor English but good German. Recently she was in Berlin.

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—The Canadian Government has no official information from Finland of Mary Martin's detention. There are said to be a number of Mary Martins carrying Canadian passports and without further particulars such as have not yet come to hand identification by the women concerned in the present case is said to be impossible.

GROUNDLESS WHISKEY TALE

U.S. Magazine Figures Supply in U. S. is Adequate

New York, Oct. 28.—There is no cause for alarm over a shortage of whiskey in the United States when repeal is effected, according to a survey of the liquor situation made by Fortune Magazine in its current issue.

The magazine points out that there are now 50,000,000 gallons of whiskey in this country and a monthly production of 3,500,000 new gallons, with extensive blending, it is believed, that production should provide almost enough whiskey to meet a repeal demand for all hard liquors amounting to 100,000,000 gallons a year.

"One part whiskey," the article says, "to four parts alcohol and water will make a drink that might be called an 'American Scotch' and will be plenty good enough for you. One part whiskey to nine parts alcohol and water will make a pretty good beverage. And two or three gallons of good old whiskey plus a couple of gallons of new whiskey plus 45 gallons of alcohol and water will make a barrel of drinkable liquor. It will not be more than a year or two before the United States has all the potable rye and bourbon it wants."

EGGS ARE OFF MANY MARKETS

Snowfall Causes Further Decline in Egg Production

Ottawa, Oct. 28 (CP)—Fresh eggs are now practically off the market in many Canadian cities, according to a report issued today by the Department of Agriculture. The report attributes to an increased movement of storage eggs while light production is general in the larger centres but to the smaller points as well, and in the west storage eggs are even moving out in country points.

Generally early snowfall over a large portion of the country was responsible for the sharp decline in fresh egg marketings, owing to roads being blocked with snow, deliveries of eggs were difficult, apart from this hens moved the range and production has been exceedingly light.

Prices in large advances took place over a large part of the country, particularly fresh eggs, while storage prices for the most part held firm.

Receipts of poultry have increased a large proportion being for dressed stock. The demand for poultry, however, has been quite limited.

GROWERS FACE HEAVY LOSS

Apples Freeze on Trees During Recent Frosts

Out of a mass of conflicting reports from orchardists of various sections of this district regarding the damage caused apple crops during the recent cold and heavy frosts which followed well defined announcements made by apple growers and others acquainted with the industry in this immediate section estimate that in general acreage was extensive.

Alderman C. Brickman, local fruit and produce man, stated that in this area loss had been severe. "In general the apple crop has been ruined. Many of my customers from the rural districts report that they are facing a heavy loss. It wasn't the storm that caused the damage, it was the heavy frosts which followed.

Patrick Nelson, of Prince Edward County, corroborated the statement that the majority of apples hardened and from right on the trees before the frosts came on and that there is going to stand the loss of a good many barrels of them. Besides the apples that are nipicked, a considerable quantity of the fruit which had been left in the orchards in their exposed crates had also been blighted by the frosts, he said.

Produce men were not so pessimistic. It is generally agreed, however that the majority of them have received their annual contract supply and have already shipped the most of it.

"Unless the weather warms up rapidly, I'll be able to save some of my crop," stated R. Hardinge, of Sidney. "I wasn't as heavy a loser as some of the others. Possibly it's because my orchard is in a more sheltered place along the highway than the others."

McCORMICK SUED FOR HEART BALM

MRS. R. T. DOUBLEDAY

HAROLD F. McCORMICK

A breach of promise suit asking $1,500,000 has been filed in Chicago against Harold F. McCormick, head of the International Harvester Co., by Mrs. Rhoda Tanner Doubleday, 30-year old divorcee wife of Felix Doubleday, son of the publisher.

Mrs. Doubleday, who charges that the 66 year old millionaire proposed to her and then called off the wedding, and McCormick are shown above. He is the former husband of the late Edith Rockefeller and Geneva Walska, the singer.

LATE APPLE CROP RUINED

Trenton-Brighton District Hard Hit by Recent Frosts

Twenty degrees of frost was registered in Trenton on Thursday morning at 2 a.m. That settled the apples—they are frozen to the core. The loss is tremendous not only to the fruit on the trees, but some forty per cent of the local apple crop is at present in barrels in the orchards and it is hoped to save a large part of this loss.

The fine orchards of the country side are a pitiful sight through the action of the storm of Tuesday. Many a well loaded tree has every branch broken down, nothing but the trunk remaining standing. This will mean a loss that will take years to repair.

Mr. W. A. Fraser, M.P., Trenton, made the statement last week that there would take 30,000 more boxes to contain the apples still on the trees, between Trenton and Brighton in his estimation. Today 100 barrels would likely hold all the apples that have escaped the ravages of Mr. Jack Frost.

Many an apple grower is today busy figuring up his loss. The total will run well into the thousands, besides the men the frost has thrown out of employment, barrel makers, apple pickers and sorters, trucks, etc. What will be done with the frozen fruit remains a mystery for the future to solve. Some of the apple were of the late varieties, Northern Spies, etc.—Intelligencer.

Trenton, Oct 28—The severe frosts of the past few nights following the early storm, spelled ruin to the apple growers of the district. The storm caused hundreds of dollars damage to the trees, and fruit has ruined the apples, estimated at nearly 30,000 barrels, principally the choice fall apples. This loss will mean that hundreds will be thrown out of employment, the cooperage mills will shut down, pickers, sorters, and many trucks will cease to operate. This is the first time the crop has been ruined by the frost since 1923, when thousands of barrels were lost in an early October cold spell.

MIXED SLEEPING IN NUDIST CAMPS STOPPED

One Means to Operate Without Annoyance ..... Imperial Rule .....

Chicago, Oct. 28 (AP)—Ways and means of operating nudist camps without antagonizing the general public were under discussion by ten leaders of the movement, and all of them generally agreed that one way to do it would be to abolish mixed sleeping.

The suggestion came from K. E. Kripgens, attorney who represented the International Nudist Conference at the recent trial of Fred S. Ringling who operated a camp near Allegan, Mich.

"Let me suggest that you eliminate mixed sleeping—that is men and women sleeping under the same roof without partitions between the sexes, as is done in some camps," said Attorney Kripgens.

The others agreed that although to them it was harmless, it was a custom that might be eliminated.

MYSTERY OF DEATH SOON TO BE SOLVED

Playmates of Hillier Babe Says She Fell Off Sandpile

Older Boy Denies Touching Clothing—Admits Leaving Her

Toronto, Oct. 28 (CP)—Two little boys—one a sturdy fellow of 4½ years, the other a slighter but taller, nervous youngster of seven, today await the inquest Tuesday into the death of Alfreda Hillier, 18 months old, whose frozen body was found on a city dump Thursday.

Together the little chaps have given police what they believe is a solution to the mystery of Alfreda's death. Jackie Mariand, 4½, declared yesterday he had seen Howard Avery, seven, undress the child on bitter-cold Wednesday night, after the girl had fallen from a sandhead down a steep hillside to the dump.

Admissions, contradictions, retractions followed each other in rapid succession as police questioned the boys before their parents alone and then together. The investigation is continuing although it is believed by officials there is little further to find out.

According to one of Jackie Mariand's versions of the tragedy, the two boys and Alfreda were playing on a sand-pile. The little girl fell down the hill. The boys followed. Alfreda did not move. Howard began to undress her. He placed the rotted door on the snow, rookie over it. Then he went away. The temperature was below the freezing point and the child did not live long—if she was alive at all after the fall.

When word reached the Avery home Wednesday night, that old Frodo was dead, Howard said to his mother, "I'll find her." He went out. It was cold and dark. He returned. "I'll get her tomorrow," he said.

To Coroner Dr. M. M. Crawford, yesterday, the boy is reported to have declared: "She fell and I went down. She wasn't moving, so I went home."

He replied, "No I didn't," when asked if he had touched the child's fant.

Alfreda—better known as "Bunny"—will be buried from her parents' house Monday. Meanwhile a shocking city opened its doors and poured material benefit on the bereaved parents. In humble circumstances, the child's father admitted he had but 40c cents between he and starvation." Hillier, naval veteran and three mentioned in despatches for bravery during the Great War, could say no more, and no more was needed.

Offers of assistance poured in. Undertakers volunteered to provide funeral expenses. A city woman offered a burial plot in a cemetery. Mayor W. J. Stewart himself declared he would use his influence to obtain a job for Hillier. Special funds were opened to provide the bereaved parents with the necessities of life.

All Toronto mourned with the young parents.

IN SHELTERED COVE BELIEF

Search Lake Winnipeg For 26 Missing Fishermen

Selkirk, Man., Oct. 28 (CP)

Hope for the safety of 26 men aboard two missing lake boats rode down the Red River today as the steamer "Buck" nosed out into protected Lake Winnipeg today to continue the search for the two freighters LeBerr and Question Mark, unreported for six days.

The LeBerr, with a crew of six and carrying fifteen fishermen to their winter fishing stations on Eagle Island, left here on October 18. Under normal conditions she would have completed her 280 mile trip to the island and return by Sunday, the Question Mark was due to return on the same day. She carried a crew of four and one passenger.

Accompanied by smaller fishing vessels the 'Buck' began a systematic check of all shelter points along the west coast of the lake. Later in the morning will take off for Eagle Island to check on reports the two vessels may have returned to the fishing stations in the north and become frozen in.

Fear for the safety of the missing men had lessened somewhat today. It was recalled the men in charge of the two vessels are experienced in lake navigation. It is thought they will be found at some sheltered cove, waiting out the storm that swept the lake during the week.

RAID PLANTS WHEN SHIFTS CHANGING

Scores of Windows Smashed and Machines Damaged

Detroit, Oct. 28—Raiding parties that chose the hour when shifts would be changing descended early today on the manufacturing plants where strikes are in progress, breaking scores of windows in one of the factories.

The most serious damage was done at the Federal Engineering Works, where rocks and timbers were thrown through windows, while lumbers tearing out stables as well as glass. Fifteen automobiles were damaged.

Other plants visited were those of the Briggs Manufacturing Company, makers of automobile bodies, and the branch of the Hudson Motor Car Co., nearby.

At the Briggs plant, an automobile was overturned and burned while Harry Harding, a workman, defied threats of violence. He was cut and bruised.

The building parties, apparently separate, numbered fewer than 100 men each, officers said. They moved so swiftly that the scores of police dispatched to the trouble areas were unable to overtake them. Heavy guards were thrown around other plants but the disturbance apparently had died down by that time. Factory managers said they recognized none of the men as former employees.

The disorder broke out only a few hours after leaders among both strikers and employers had issued optimistic statements about progress made in conferences.

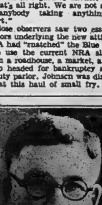
BLUE EAGLE'S BOLTS READY

NRA Takes New Step Forward With Ford Announcement



(By James Cope)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 28.—A storm decision to prosecute conspicuous violators appears to have supplanted NRA's long cherished care to shelter its industrial programme from court attack. From the signing of the Industrial Law until now, Hugh S. Johnson has picked a course calculated to steer around the pitfalls of legal action. Attempts at trial to coax enforcement have been mild. He has stressed the spirit rather than an easy attitude would bring most industries into conformity of operating industry and trade under codes.

Now, however, with the threat of prosecution if and when Henry Ford should be found to be violating the Industrial Law, and with his open readiness to face a constitutional test of the Industrial Law. This determination, coupled with a rigorous cancellation of Ford from government contracts, was backed by President Roosevelt. It was also accompanied by a statement from Johnson in regard to another code: "Nobody is above the law or not afraid of anybody taking anything to court."

Close observers saw two essential factors underlying the new attitude. NRA had "snatched" the Blue Eagle —to use the current NRA slang—from the hands of a slacker. A little shop headed for bankruptcy and a big business almost as disturbed at this haul of small fry.

CONDENSED MILK IS GREAT DELICACY

Montreal, Oct. 28—In British Malaya sweetened condensed milk is looked upon as a great delicacy by the natives and Chinese and they like drinking it from the can. So good times considerable quantities of condensed milk were sold, said the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways. During 1931, Canada supplied 9,100 cases out of a total of 910,717,

RAID PLANTS WHEN SHIFTS CHANGING

Scores of Windows Smashed and Machines Damaged

Detroit, Oct. 28—Raiding parties that chose the hour when shifts would be changing descended early today on the manufacturing plants where strikes are in progress, breaking scores of windows in one of the factories.

The most serious damage was done at the Federal Engineering Works, where rocks and timbers were thrown through windows, while lumbers tearing out stables as well as glass. Fifteen automobiles were damaged.

Other plants visited were those of the Briggs Manufacturing Company, makers of automobile bodies, and the branch of the Hudson Motor Car Co., nearby.

At the Briggs plant, an automobile was overturned and burned while Harry Harding, a workman, defied threats of violence. He was cut and bruised.

The building parties, apparently separate, numbered fewer than 100 men each, officers said. They moved so swiftly that the scores of police dispatched to the trouble areas were unable to overtake them. Heavy guards were thrown around other plants but the disturbance apparently had died down by that time. Factory managers said they recognized none of the men as former employees.

The disorder broke out only a few hours after leaders among both strikers and employers had issued optimistic statements about progress made in conferences.

IN SHELTERED COVE BELIEF

Search Lake Winnipeg For 26 Missing Fishermen

Selkirk, Man., Oct. 28 (CP)

Hope for the safety of 26 men aboard two missing lake boats rode down the Red River today as the steamer "Buck" nosed out into protected Lake Winnipeg today to continue the search for the two freighters LeBerr and Question Mark, unreported for six days.

The LeBerr, with a crew of six and carrying fifteen fishermen to their winter fishing stations on Eagle Island, left here on October 18. Under normal conditions she would have completed her 280 mile trip to the island and return by Sunday, the Question Mark was due to return on the same day. She carried a crew of four and one passenger.

Accompanied by smaller fishing vessels the 'Buck' began a systematic check of all shelter points along the west coast of the lake. Later in the morning will take off for Eagle Island to check on reports the two vessels may have returned to the fishing stations in the north and become frozen in.

Fear for the safety of the missing men had lessened somewhat today. It was recalled the men in charge of the two vessels are experienced in lake navigation. It is thought they will be found at some sheltered cove, waiting out the storm that swept the lake during the week.

QUEBEC MAN IS ACQUITTED ON 3RD TRIAL

Charged With Setting Fire to Home Burning Wife

GIVES EVIDENCE

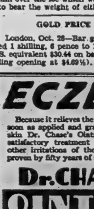
Twice Sentenced to be Hanged For Crime

THREE RIVERS, Que, Oct. 28.—(CP)—Donat Thiffault was a free man again today—the shadow of the gallows which had hung over him for a year and a half forever lifted.

The big, Thecle, Que, contractor yesterday stood before Mr. Justice F. F. Bouffard and listened to the long-awaited verdict of acquittal of the charge of murdering his wife. His smiled faintly, bowed to the jury and then wept hysterically as he walked from the dock. In the same court last December he saw the judge place the black hat on his head and heard the death sentence pronounced.

Three trials Thiffault heard before being able to walk out of court unfettered. The jury disagreed at the first trial. He was found guilty and sentenced to hang on March 10, 1933 at the second. The court of Appeals was the scene of his next fight with the appeal being dismissed and the sentence of death upheld. He trudged the Thiffault carried the case to the Supreme Court of Canada and only a short time before he was to be hanged the court ordered a new trial.

Thiffault fired the murder of his wife, Mrs. Bertha (Gervais) Thiffault who was burned to death when their home was destroyed by fire in March, 1932, started on Tuesday, as in other two trials the verdict hinged to a great extent on the evidence of his son, Florian. The boy testified thick smoke awakened him on the night of the fire and while running downstairs he dislocated his hip. He had been carried to safety by his father, who attempted to rescue his wife, but was driven back by flames and smoke, he declared.



In summing up Mr. Justice Bouffard pointed out that all evidence was circumstantial and Florant being in the house asleep at the time he had not set fire to his home. To find Thiffault guilty the jury had to be sure nobody else was responsible, he said.

Granby, Que., Oct. 26—Certificates of the Royal Canadian Humane Association were presented recently at the luncheon given by the Granby Que., Board of Trade to Zeno Robillard and Henry de Sennevills, Canadian Celanese employees who on February 9th this year rescued from drowning three year old Guy Gilbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jules Gilbert of Granby, who fell into a hole in the ice covering the river near Irwin Bridge. The two rail-waymen rescued the boy by forming a human chain in order to reach him over the ice which was too thin to bear the weight of either man.

F. H. MORTON, Publisher

ONLY DANGEROUS ANIMAL

Harry Moore, publisher of the Trenton Courier-Advocate, than whom there is no one more thoroughly versed in nature lore, has given a word of warning in his newspaper to those who fall into danger of not giving a wide berth to those moose they happen to meet in the northern woods. Referring to the story the Bancroft Times carried several weeks ago as to the chase which a moose gave four young men of the north when they were forced to climb a tree and take to the roof of a hunting lodge for safety, he says:

"The moose is the only dangerous animal we have in the eastern part of the Dominion. He will attack you and there is no mistake about it. In the summer he is not so vicious, but when fall comes and he begins to travel around alone he is looking for trouble. Call him and he will tear through the bush looking for a fight. Two friends of the writer were hunting back of Sprucedale, on the western side of Algonquin Park. They were standing by a pile of tan bark on the shore of a pond. One of them fired a shot at a moose in the water and he came bounding out at them. Dropping their guns they went up the first tree in sight. The moose crashed the tree and it was only by a miracle that they were able to escape. Mane erect, the animal ran in circles and finally fell. Luckily the one bullet had penetrated a vital spot. Unless you are hunting for moose, give them a wide berth, particularly if you come on to a bull without him smelling you."

Mr. Moore speaks from knowledge of the ways of the moose and hunters should hearken to his advice.

BACK-TO-THE-LAND

The question of "back-to-the-land" movement has caused the publisher of the Stirling News Argus to consider the possible revival of what, not a generation ago, to what it once was, but a new expression of rural life as related to the twentieth century. Mr. Dobbie says: "There was appointed in the United States, some time ago, a research committee on social trends. This committee has made a report on rural social trends and is authority for the statement that since early in the depression there has been a real back-to-the-farm movement. But in addition to the farm movement, there has been a movement back-to the village, according to this report. The investigators canvassed no less than 14,000 back-to-the-land people as to their reasons. Sixteen per cent. said they could have more money on the farm; 14 per cent. felt that city work was too confining and too hard; 10 per cent. liked the independence of farm life; 20 per cent. disliked the city; 27 per cent. said the city was not a fit place in which to bring up children and they had returned to the farm for the sake of the health and better all-round living conditions. Among these families, 77 per cent had previously farmed, husband and wife or both of 10 per cent. more of the families had been born on farms and the remaining 13 per cent. of the families had only urban experience. What is true of the United States is equally true of Canada. There is no doubt despite the hard ties on farms there is a movement back to the country. Whether it will mean a revival of the village life is another question."

No one knows just what will be the future, but that agriculture will play its great part in the post-depression era no one has the slightest doubt.

POLICE ENGLISH

Correct use of English even for a New York police is adjudged necessary.

Increases perception, strengthens judgment and refines taste. A course in the study of the language as spoken and written is under way, three hundred inspectors, captains, sergeants, patrolmen, patrolwomen, and detectives attending. They sought the course of their own volition.

Deputy Chief Inspector O'Donnell of the Police College says, "The giving of accurate information in clear-cut grammatical language will be benefit both to the police department and the public in their mutual contacts. This course will help you to know your job better and to take a greater interest in your work."

If it is good for policemen, it must be good for everyone. Indeed some minds are like the English—the hands are crooked with them write, disordered, illogical and untrained. It is admitted, however, that a man may be very astute and yet be unschooled in English, but the average man is without the slightest doubt improved in his work by a good working knowledge of the language. He speaks correctly and he must have thought correctly in order to speak correctly. Even the man who seems able to get along flouting the King's English does not know nor do the people know what is missed through lack of knowledge of good English.

Beauty always thrills, but that which thrills is not, by any just use of words, always or indeed often, synonymous with beauty.—John Galsworthy.

SERENADE

So softly speaks the flute across the night,
So lightly lies the moonbeam on the rose,
The lily-pond's asleep as no misty white,
The south wind, with such fairy fragrance goes,
That, though some whisper of this summer hour
Must, love, to you across your casement creep,
It will not stir your eyelids' closed-up flowers
Nor for one heart-beat mar your tranquil sleep.

But may the music's haunting silver streams,
Softly drifting on the moon-drenched air,
Intrigue your ear and mingle with your dreams
Until its love and longing linger there.
So through your years may all my worship be
Like these clear notes that to your slumber sing,
Unguessed, and yet enhancing melody,
As each lark adds his joy unto the spring.

MINING IN CANADA is a going concern, one company has just reported the purchase of twenty million dollars in four years in exploration, development, wages, machinery, and supplies. From this several distinct companies emerged and are in operation, the parent company being largely exploratory in character. All of which proves that mining is not the haphazard gamble for which many suppose. Twenty million dollars is a sizable sum to invest in faith in Canada.

QUITE THE MADDEST election campaign that has ever been fought in the political history of Canada—so the Montreal Star dubs the contest now drawing to a close in British Columbia. There are twelve distinct groups represented by candidates for the provincial legislature, with forty-seven seats to be filled. There are only four old-time Conservative candidates, and one candidate representing the Oxford Group. There are 227 candidates in the field, including ten women. Hon. T. D. Pattullo, Liberal leader, has a candidate in Patullo, Liberal leader, has a candidate in every riding; the C.C.F. has forty-six candidates; United Front Radicals, twenty candidates, but with their leader in jail; Independent Conservatives, Absolute Independents, Socialists, Laborites, Good Government-League and the Fascists are represented—and if that doesn't make a mix-up nothing does.

POSTING A LETTER in a fire alarm box has always been a subject of jokes and always good for a laugh, but it was no joke to the fire department of Denver, Colorado, as told in a despatch to Oddities News" column of this newspaper Thursday. One Gerald Shawcroft tried to mail his letter in a fire alarm box and brought out seven fire trucks, three fire chiefs, forty firemen, three police emergency cars and six patrolmen. Shawcroft enjoyed the spectacle, but not the convenience of the visiting firemen and policemen. However he now knows the difference between a letter box and a fire alarm box, and the Mayor estimated that the cost to the city of the fire call had only been about seventy-five dollars.

Letters to The Editor

TOO MANY TREES

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir—While walking up John Street last evening the thought unpermitted in my mind was the depression and I counted nine big trees too many on our street, that it made use of would give work to many, also scenery to look at, and the shade those who have to be supplied at the city's expense. On George St. the big trees are even more close together, they should be thinned out anyway. A tree in front of my house whose limbs overhang the roof is rotting the shingles from the constant drip after rain or frost.

Next: Let me appeal to the ladies to throw their left over scraps of food out in the back yard where the dogs can get them, instead of the garbage pail. The hungry dogs come in my house and rubber mats, where I used to get the scarps from the butchers by the bagfull I can now get enough for one dog.

Again: I was painfully aware of the selfishness of many people in not cleaning their sidewalks after the storm recently. The people should each receive a medal from the hoe and shoe and rubber mats, because I notice a large hole in my rubbers that was big enough to get a darted out, the smallest particles of slush had frozen to ice and they cut like a knife.

I took off the slush on over one hundred and fifty feet of walk in about twenty minutes, so it would only be the work of a few minutes for the average householder to again his thirty to forty feet.

I see the western farmers are hard up because the price of wheat is low. Well what a bonanza they had for years putting a few bushels of wheat in the ground then sitting back and watching it grow into two to five and ten thousand dollars, then harvest and thresh it and ship it to California for the winter. Conditions are different now in Canada when three acres and a cow start a young married couple on their way. Three acres of corn and potatoes, vegetables are sold to provide other necessaries, the cow provides cream and milk, chickens, eggs and meat, also feathers, scrappy hair, bald heads, weak eyes and many other good possessions have very little work for the doctors, dentists, oculists, hospitals and beauty parlors which are so numerous with us and such a burden financially to the country by our pockets and we think we are enjoying life. Let us forget altogether all the time and financially embarrassed cars that we have at this time and oftimes the good time is instead a torture.

Yours truly,
D. H. ACKERILL, V.S.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking, and ma said, Benny why did I put this knoist in my hankerchief?

I bet I know, ma, I bet it was to remind you of something, wasn't it?

I wonder if other peoples children are as clever as ours, pop said, and ma said, Benny you did a little rime that went with it to help you remember what the knoist was a reminder of. Now let me think, O yes, I've got it, I think.

Of corse, our men never fail, pop said, and ma said, Well what do you say, I've got it, I mean I'm on the trale. The word I was looking for was of rimes with William? she said.

Mary Mary quite contrary is a good old family rime, pop said, and ma said, And there's Jack and Jill, you're really a grate help, William.

I feel it's mercy my duty, pop said, and ma said, Conirary is the word but what about it? she said, it still leeves the point united. No, now I remember, knoit for a knoist and not needing to say its the contrary of not meening no, she said.

I feel the beginning of a headache coming on, pop said, and ma said, What's the contrary of Not meening no? Why? she said.

The knoist was to remind me to write and except the invitation to serve on the Leap Year committee, in other words to say Yes, well, that's simple enough, she said.

So's this, pop said. And he took out his own handkerchief and put a big knoit in the middle and put it back in his pocket. Say Benny, What's that for, William?

It's to remind me at some later date to put it in the wash, pop said, to make it still simpler it rimes with soak, he said.

And he got behind the sporting page and blew mouse knoit.

Canada's Famous Hangman Who Has Taken 500 Lives Is Human Despite Calling

Arthur Ellis is a Dapper Individual Whose Interests Make Him Children's Benefactor When He Isn't Handling Noose

By GILBERT DRAPER
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

Montreal, Oct. 27—"Look, there's Ellis!"

The speaker, a bank clerk, indicated a slim, dapper man, wearing thick, rimless spectacles who was walking towards the paying tellers' cages in the Canadian Bank of Commerce's office here.

It was a mild autumn day and the man whom most of the staff were watching was wearing a grey soft and grey felt hat. In one hand he carried a cane, in the other a brief-case. Under his free arm was a brightly polished shoe and spats.

After exchanging a word or two with the teller the man went out, apparently oblivious of the interest his visit had caused.

Has Hanged 500

But why should this man's entrance into a bank make the clerks indge one another with: "Look, there's Ellis!"

Because Arthur Ellis in his role of Canada's executioner, has hanged more than 500 murderers and has officiated throughout the Dominion, and because it is human nature that the curiosity the occupation presents itself, a man being paid for taking human life.

Yet the performance of his grim tasks there is no more meticulously conducted than to be found among the crowd of officials and newspapermen who, other than Arthur Ellis, Ottawa morning coat, black vest piped with white, dark grey striped pants, white collar, fashionable four-in-hand tie and black shoes complete the ensemble.

Precise, perfect master of the situation, while nerves about him breaken, look under the terrible strain, he takes charge of the group which includes the governor, the macabre preparations. Then after the last lone man of the scaffold: "Gentlemen, when the procession has reached the prison door you will off. It is only a mark of respect to the dying." Ellis explains.

No Ostentation

The hour arrives. The tense silence is broken by a curt order: "Unbar that door". This returns to the door leading into the courtyard of the jail. The words are spoken with the commander in a manner accustomed to instant obedience.

Yet, withal, there is no undue haste. This slim man, scarcely five feet six inches in height and weighing about 140 pounds, thick-lensed glasses, is anything but ostentatious in the execution of the terrible task. man's wrists are strapped together behind his back before the soldier procession forms outside the death cell. Then the marchers take their places, as indicated by the hangman.

Nothing is left undone to make the dying man's last ordeal as speedy as and painless as possible. Within three or four minutes of his departure from his cell, he who is to die is pronounced dead by an arily court hat mounted the stairs to the scaffold. Then he is permitted to the adjustment of the noose and the white cap and strap around his knees and has crashed out of this world.

Ellis in Demand

Ellis holds no official position, though he conducts an execution take place in Canada at which he does not officiate. He is engaged by the sheriff of the district where a hanging is to take place, for the law requires the sheriff responsible for carrying out of the death sentence, and he, being a servant of the service, he must perform the horrible task himself or risk committing it to an amateur.

Hanging more than 500 men and women without a hitch is Arthur Ellis' unique record. Also he is assured of the satisfaction which he regards as an obligation placed upon him by society.

"Who put me where I am?" he is wont to demand, when the subject of his work is at some informal gathering. "Surely it was you yourself and the other citizens of this country!"

Now for the more human side of Ellis' character.

Imagine Arthur Ellis helping a little ten year old girl to save up to buy a buffalo ranch in the West who subsequently clubs for the youngsters living in his district; who organizes football teams and uniforms but also intercedes with senior clubs on their behalf to the use of playing fields, and so forth.

"Uncle Arthur"

The story about the buffalo ranch is typical of Ellis in his particularly incongruous light. One of his juvenile friends, Peter Bell, Montreal, though only ten years old, she was for a time a very sick little child. Therefore Uncle Arthur—he is Uncle Arthur to most of the children who know him—thought of a way to persuade her not to squander so much money on candy and such things.

"Evelyn" he said to her one day, "for every five cents you save on your bank instead of spending on candy I will give you a buffalo nickel. And by the time you are 21 years old, you will have enough to buy a buffalo ranch in the West. You will own it and I will manage it."

One day a clergyman called at Ellis' home. "Mr. Ellis," he began, after some preamble, "I suppose I understand that you are an Anglican, but we never see you in church. Why is that?"

His Philosophy

"I am a religious man" the executioner replied, "but I am not what you would call a churchman. Now I would like to ask you something. Do the members of your congregation make a practice of providing warm clothes for poor children during the winter? Do they look after their less fortunate members' property to any great extent? Do they visit the sick? I'm afraid, however, that I would not be the best member of your congregation."

The clergyman left, a thoughtful look on his face. Later in the course of an address to the members of a nursing club, he said: "There is a man in this parish whom society does not receive. Even in this chilly weather, he goes to be given his cold shoulder by a lot of you.... The common hangman of Canada. Yet I know him and I am proud to call him 'friend'."

That words supply an instance of how Arthur Ellis in one brief instant forgets for the respect, not to say, admiration of one highly discerning and cultured man.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

OCTOBER 28, 1913

We are advised not to be too much uneasy about the Front street paving. It may come some day. It will be a happy day when it does come.

It is said that Belleville would like to have the bay bridges taken over by the government and the tolls taken off. It would prove a boon to the Prince Edward farmers on market days.

Careless business men on Front street should expect nothing better than a wholesale robbery if they continue to leave the doors of their stores unlocked.

Why do not the city officials receive another inspiration and tear up Front street some more? We haven't seen a soul at work on it for a week — not even to clean up the mud.

It appears that our informant was wrong in regard to the removal of the rock at the harbor entrance. Evidence of its presence was manifest today when a boat slid atop of it and stuck fast for a time. Shall we not do something towards the removal of that rock?

Authority has cost is-selling in Montreal at $6.50 per ton and in Belleville at $6.00 per ton.

Belleville is losing a promising vocalist in the person of Mr. J. F. Pratt who will take with him the good wishes of everybody. Of course, being a bias player, Mr. Pratt goes down the line and will register at Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. James Gibson, Kingston Road, gave a farewell party last evening in honor of Mr. Alex Thatcher who will now travel shortly to reside at Lindsay.

Mr. "Laurie" Lockett of Kingston was a visitor to the city today.

Mr. W. Spencer Jones, a gentleman well and favorably known in this city, has been appointed in his connection as organist with the Wall Street Methodist Church, Brooklyn, N.Y. Monday night. Mr. Jones was presented by various bodies of the congregation with addresses, a purse of gold, a handsome scarf pin and a travelling case.

40 YEARS AGO

The Hon. Billa Flint is in town today.

Mr. Joseph James of Bridgewater is a guest at the Dominion Hotel.

Mr. Charles Lingham is home from British Columbia on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Lingham, Coleman.

Mr. J. F. Tannahill, son of Mr. Jas. Tannahill, Albert street, has left today for New York where he takes the steamer for Rio Janeiro, via Cape Horn. Mr. Tannahill expects to be gone for several months.

Ald. Luscombe has purchased the old bicycle path on Queen street between William and Ann streets and will convert it into a skating rink. The property was bought from Mr. Wm. Daw and Mr. T. Holden. It is 157 feet wide and 206 feet long and is well adapted for its purpose. Mr. Luscombe intends to build a residence on a part of the lot.

There will be a service of song in John Street Presbyterian Church tomorrow evening.

50 YEARS AGO

OCTOBER 28, 1883

The inspection of the 15th Battalion A.D.C. under command of Col. Lester took place Thursday afternoon on the cricket field and was witnessed by a large gathering of spectators, many of whom were ladies. About a quarter past three Col. Villiers, D.A.G., accompanied by Major King, District Paymaster; Captain Farley of Napanee, Kingston, and Adjutant Ponton of the 49th Battalion, who acted as Col. Villiers' aides and Captain Biggar, Paymaster of the 15th Battalion, Tamworth, on the grounds. The inspecting officer was accorded a general salute and the band of the regiment played "God Save the Queen". This turned out was one of the most creditable that the battalion has ever made. While going to the grounds, Col. Villiers was thrown from his horse and dragged a short distance. Fortunately he was only slightly injured. Major Bennet's horse ran away and Adjutant Ponton's horse became unmanageable and was precipitated to the ground, fortunately no serious results followed. The officers were entertained to lunch by the kind ladies of the town at the close of the inspection.

STIRLING HOCKEY CLUB ORGANIZED

Probably Grouped With Tweed Madoc Marmora and Campbellford

Stirling, Oct. 26—The Stirling high school squad of senior pig-skin chasers journeyed to Marmora on Wednesday afternoon to play the return game and although the lads were determining to reverse the previous scores, the Marmora aggregation proved too much for the locals with the result that the latter were blanked by a score of 8 to 0.

The heavy coating of snow on the field was no help to the teams and it took some little time for them to become accustomed to the slushy footing. The game began with both teams playing up to good form and the first quarter saw no count for either team. However, the Marmora lads set about winning the game in dead earnest in the second quarter and scored the first point by kicking to Stirling's dead line. This was closely followed by another touch by Smith, which was nearly the prelude to still another when it was scored when a Marmora lad caught the ball after Stirling had kicked and hurled himself over the line to score the fifth touch of the game, but the point was not converted. The one sided fray wound up with a count of 8-0.

Lineups were as follows:

Marmora—Backfield, Bailey, Smith, Percy Grey, M. Simmons, S. Smith, D. Nash, R. Wallbridge, Hollingsworth and Lee; forwards, Woodhouse, alternates, Hollingsworth and Lee.

Stirling—Joblin, Jackman, Maxwell, Munro, Sager, Wright, Shaw, Bye, Mowbray, Gardiner, Hall, Sprentall, A. Rodgers and Fox.

At a recent meeting of the local hockey fans held in the Agricultural room, Stirling was organized and it was decided that Stirling would be able to enter a team in the Central O.H.A. which would be in all probability be grouped with Campbellford, Madoc, Marmora and Tweed. Enthusiasm for hockey ran high and it is hoped that a team which will be able to make a creditable showing in the league will be entered. The officers elected were as follows:

President—W. J. Whitby.

Vice Pres.—H. W. McKeloben.

Sec.-Treas.—T. W. Solmes.

Asst. Sec.-Treas.—C. McGee.

Executive committee—Messrs. Sprentall, convener, E. Dalnard, F. Joblin, R. Wallace.

Team Management Committee—J. Acker, R. Wallace, Messrs. Frank E. Dalnard.

Trainer Dalnard is counting on most of last year's Legion team and has some eighteen prospects who he will be training immediately.

The weekly meeting of St. John's A.Y.P.A. was held in the vestry and Monday evening with the main feature of the meeting consisting of the reports of the delegates to the A.Y.P.A. convention held during the past week in Toronto. The convention, according to reports, was the singing of hymn 783 and the recitation of prayer led by Rev. McConnell from the pulpit. The meeting Gerald Craven then addressed the gathering on the subject of the convention and after a few preliminary remarks, called on Rev. McConnell who related his trip to Toronto and gave a very interesting account of the first sessions of the conference. Mr. Arthur Bateman was then called upon to give the next session. Afterwards the report was read by Miss Ruth Gould who brought the account up to the Friday afternoon session which was ably dealt with by Miss Marjorie Rodgers. The next session of the President of the local organization took place and the report of the Saturday session which ended with many delegates adjourning to Varsity Stadium to witness the Queen's-Varsity rugby game. Mention should be made of the banquet honour which was conferred upon Rev. A. E. McConnell of Stirling in the afternoon session when he received his certificate of membership, the greatest honour that may be attained by any member of the A.Y.P.A.

The account of the banquet which was held at the Arcadian Court was given by Miss Alice Baker who gave a splendid description of the entire affair relating a goodly part of the address given by the main speaker, Canon Plus. Miss Baker also gave a splendid feature of the convention and the said meeting was brought to a close by the singing of hymn 783.

Rev. J. A. Kofferd and Mr. Wm. Dermody attended the Anglican Synod held in Campbellford on Thursday and Friday last, members of St. John's Church.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Long were week end visitors in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. James Strydale of Perth were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Munro.

Miss Mildred Richardson has returned home after spending the past week in Toronto.

Mrs. James Ralph has returned home after spending a few days in Kingston.

Those from Stirling and district who served on the jury for the Grenne Court sitting which was adjourned to a date in October were yesterday were Messrs. George Ketcheson, Lawrence Munro, George Clarke and Clarence Rollins.

Mrs. Gordon Hall has returned home on Monday after a visit to Toronto.

It is the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gordon.

Of old Mrs. Duncan Montgomery and family of Toronto spent a few days with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Montgomery.

Keep up B.B. Thompson of Chicago certainly mother Mrs. J. Moore as far as he her brother Rev. A. S. Moore. Of the week end there is not report Mrs. Koffend a large Reynolds, on the bread loaf for a speedy second health.

LETTER NO. 7

In Italy—At Genoa

THE morning of Friday, July 14th (1933) found our ship at rest in the dock in the old city of Genoa.

For the first time since leaving New York, a fortnight previous, we were enabled to walk across a gang plank to a pier. Hitherto we were conveyed by ship's boats or tenders to and from the land. In this case the ship's boat was to be allowed here for ship's repair and overhaul in dry-dock.

The history of Genoa takes us back a thousand years into a checquered past. For centuries she was a powerful city and had her own armies and navies. Her mercantile craft rimmed the shores of the Great Sea for ports of trade and wealth. In her city and suburbs did her great Dukes and Princes submerge her independence into a united and national Italy. Wonderfully situated at the north western seacorner of Italy, Genoa was closest to the markets of central and western Europe.

Palazzo To Let.

We visited one of her many places, long since surrendered to the city, as museums or relics since no modern family could sustain and maintain their ancient grandeur and splendor.

The old White Palace was one of these which we honored by a visit. It was built in 1565 and contains a fine collection of the works of some of the old Italian masters. The floors, pillars and steps were of the chocen marble. Its ceilings, high and exquisitely carved; its large French latticed windows peeking down into pretty little court yards.

Ancient Cathedrals.

As we had in our party two well travelled and informed Canadian clergymen whose hobby was old cathedrals and churches, we had a visit to two or three famous cathedrals. One of the most interesting was that of San Lorenzo, founded in 985 A.D. and rebuilt in Gothic style in 1307. Its walls are of alternate black and white marble and within these walls blessings were heaped upon different crusading armies headed for the Holy Land. Within its walls Cardinal St. Mathias Church, with its quaint cloister, was nearby.

The Campo Santo.

One other item of outstanding interest need be mentioned about Genoa and that, its unique and famous cemetery, the Campo Santo. It has no known peer on earth. Here one had its immense galleries of marble statues to the departed dead, in fact often placed and built by these mortals within their own lifetime, were marvels of artistic beauty.

The history, and even the brilliancy indeed pleads with the departed, were visible within or above the mausoleum. Here rested in the tombs of the hillside and their crests were upon many hundred marble statues of wealthy and famous citizens costing hundreds of thousands of dollars. And in the midst, between the enclosed, packed multitude, who had lived in their day formed on for a brief seven years or less.

I say seven years because no row of graves had the simple name slab other than seven years. In fact the seven year term of rest of those of 1926 were even then being ruthlessly disturbed to make room for the newly departed.

Difficulties under which Communists are now working in that section in their efforts to secure the necessary metal from the ground are numerous and varied. The most outstanding one at this problem is to secure titles. At present many of the richest sections are still in the hands of owners or their owners have long since departed, leaving no authority or relatives behind. Other sections have reverted back to the government for taxes. Everything is for sale. And some of these properties you can actually see the gold in the rock face,", stated Mr. Evans.

There have been gentle splenty of various companies, who after staking the shafts for the mines have found nothing but gold ore to pay them for their efforts. After months of toiling, the necessary machinery, their capital is gone, the shafts filled with water, and the costly diamond drills have been left in the holes, deserted.

Many of these have been a rich reward for these companies if they had stuck. But they have leased instead or building thousands of dollars worth of building and more ground if they had spent their capital on really working the mine, they might have found the gold necessary to pay their labor.

Some day, was the prophesy, the government is going to clear up these titles and deeds. Companies who seek to exploit the great wealth treasure hidden in these mining Country will be given every opportunity. Also will be given property for thousands who live here, for the benefit of the whole country. It won't be just a "gold rush." It was carefully explained, but it will be a healthy and constructive development.

Just as present a quietness has gripped the great province of the County. But it is a pregnant quietness. It is the quiet of quietness that comes before a storm.

HITLER'S SILVER HAMMER BREAKS

Adolf Hitler laying the foundation of the new German House of Art at Munich, Germany. It was here that the silver hammer, presented to him as a token of the future greatness of the Nazi cause, broke as he hit the stone with it. The incident annoyed the Nazi chancellor and those suspicious folks in the audience who looked on the incident as an ominous omen.

PLENTY GOLD IN HASTINGS

Difficulties of Mining Will Have To Be Overcome

Close upon the heels of a mercantile crisis we see the rise of machinery and mills and some of the largest gold mining companies on the continent rumbling into action and exploiting the ceaseless job of supplying from this one section alone half the gold for the world's daily needs without making an appreciable dent or impression on the undreamed potential wealth that lies below. Throughout the rolling and rocky hills of this section the mecca for adventurous gold hunters the world over, following hot on the trail of the first prospectors and rich that the old township of Madoc has ever had in all its long and the growing population.

Not only is there gold, it but perhaps no better place in Canada could the secrets of that dull metal be learned than in this section of Hastings County, in the opinion of Mr. J. Walter Evans of this city, well known mining engineer whose knowledge of the geology of the country is second to none.

"Gold!" he repeats when questioned. "There's plenty of it in Hastings County. It can literally be picked-up" Of course what it needs is some one to go after it." Difficulties under which communes are now working in that section in their efforts to secure the necessary metal from the ground are numerous and varied. The most outstanding one at this problem is to secure titles. THE AUTOMOTIVE WORLD

Modern Lochinvar.

Compared with ranged Lochinvar, who had only one horse when he rode to claim his bride, young W. H. Harrell of Oakland, California, was rather well-equipped. Harrell had sixty-five horses—under the hood of his Chevrolet roadster — when he hastened to Vancouver, B.C., for his wedding to Miss Betty Booth. Like Mr. Lochinvar of the poem, however, Harrell "stayed not for rock nor stopped not for stone;" as Stone-henge had caught his attention and discovered when they checked his mileage of 1118 miles covered in less than 28 hours. "Shucks", said the bridegroom, when told he had beaten the record for Oakland-Vancouver travel, "I'd have made it faster if I knows we were breaking records! We even spent half an hour in Seattle eating breakfast." Harrell's car: Elapsed time, 27 hours and 45 minutes; average speed, 40 miles; 1,115 7/10 miles; gasoline consumption, 96 U. S. gallons; miles per U. S. gallon, 19.9; miles per Imperial gallon, 23.9.

Quebec's Strong Finish.

Winter lingered long in the lap of the north land and failed to say good-by to a slow start this year in Eastern Canada. By midsummer new car registrations were warming up, but were still way ahead as for the same period in 1932. Then the public really started in to buy the 1933 models and the fall figures look for more satisfactory complexion. The Province of Quebec, in the month of September, surpassed September, 1932, in passenger car sales by about 10 per cent. As an indication that Quebec had caught up with the parade, this percentage of increase was about the same as that registered by the Province of Ontario for the same month.

Fooling the First Frost.

Just as periodic medical examinations are the best insurance against you to vogue to eliminate or at least to minimize the "down" time, so are periodic examinations of motor cars considered a wise investment, according to Cadillac service engineers. With the approach of Fall, they recommend that motorists find out from the local weather bureau on what date the first frost is expected, and during the last five years and then have the cooling system drained and inspected to avoid all probability of damage by freezing. Besides, the cooling system and parts checked is suggested: Adjust carburetor for cold weather; clean fuel gasoline lines, blow-out with air, clean gasoline strainer; adjust valve tappets; adjust tighten water pump packing nut to prevent leakage; tighten spring shackle nuts and tighten all clamps for water hose connections; tighten hose connections; flush cooling system thoroughly, using improved reverse flow method (anti-freeze is not addition); adjust generator charging rate; inspect battery and terminals; clean spark plugs and set electrodes to proper gap, clean and synchronize distributor contact points; re-lubricate ignition to prevent rust; add windshield wiper and adjust blade; drain lubricant from rear axle, transmission and steering gear, clean and re-fill with suitable lubricant for cold weather; check operations of coil filter; and inspect the head lights and line-up and focus headlights.

Now that Mrs. Brigham is able to get out again, she is seeing all her friends once more.

The Market is Better.

"How is the market for motor cars?" is another way of asking about the condition of business generally. In this connection, a recent bulletin from "Manufacturing and Industrial Engineering" is interesting: "The market is definitely improved on the upgrade", says the publication. "Business in general, and supplies, the western shippers had at. Manufacturing has been active and colorfully painted, on each side, informing the universe that this shipment was from British Columbia. They were handled carefully at choice cargoes.

LOCAL SHIPMENTS LOOK DINGY ALONGSIDE WESTERN

Produce Men Should Pack For Overseas Trade More Neatly

"If produce men of this district would advertise as well, and put their overseas shipments as neatly and as colorfully as their fellow shippers in the West, who are also fighting strong competition, then this section would lead all Canada, in world markets".

That's the opinion of a well known local manufacturer who has just returned to the city from a brief visit to the east in the interests of his local factory.

He tells of wandering down to the great docks in Montreal to observe the shipping carried on in that harbor this week, and of his trip through the great warehouses of the Cunard Line, the C.P.R. storage sheds and the wide expanse of the Frankford cannery.

But, chiefly, the local manufacturer, in this section were interested in the packages. Almost invariably every family in black print, the names of shippers from Belleville, Picton and Brighton. One had the job carefully to make out the name. Nothing stood out. Cases of canned goods, in the majority of the cases, almost undecipherable. On the boxes, be shipped from Halifax or Montreal, the same dingy, unattractive condition was apparent. The local shipments looked dingy.

As if to show the contrast, in another corner of the shed, thousands of cases of British Columbia apples reposed in tiers. From the open doors at the sides of the cars, the pearsd bits of tissue paper. Closer inspection of the boxes showed that the apples were given their own paper covering. Not content, however, with this neat arrangement for protecting the apples, the western shippers had attached, affixing them to the boxes, and colorfully painted, on each package, informing the universe that this shipment was from British Columbia. They were handled carefully

BRIDGE ST. W.M.S. MEET

Interesting Papers Read And Program is Enjoyed

The annual thank offering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of John Street United Church was held on Wednesday evening, October 25th, at 8 p.m. The meeting was opened by singing Hymn 31. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. Robert Hall who led in prayer. After a beautiful ceremony called "Lighting the Campfire" by Enid Denike and a group of G.O.L.T. girls Miss Florence Carr, the C.O.L.T. delegate, who had been sent by the W.M.S. to summer camp at Bear Rivage, gave a most interesting report of the two weeks which she had spent at the camp.

Bear Rivage is a small well-wooded island among the Thousand Islands and is an ideal situation for a girls' camp. Miss Carr described very clearly the busy day from early morning "reveille" of everybody at morning worship to the "lights out" at night and she made it sound very attractive to the girls.

A quartette, "Hear Us, O Father" was sung by four ladies, Miss Bessie Riggs, Mrs. L. B. Riggs, Mrs. H. Hill and Mrs. Evelyn Reddick.

Mrs. Ferguson read a fine paper on temperance. She lamented the unconcern of the people who sit back and say, "O well, it doesn't touch me. Not in my family" are drinkers of liquor, so why should I worry?" She compared the drink traffic to the slave traffic.

Temperance is experiencing a setback in Canada, all because of the attitude of "let George do it." "Liquor is bringing in revenue which the government needs, so why should we try to do away with it. We want to help pay our national debt." Thus, it is a case of "evil be thou my good."

The address, "Human Resources", was given by Mrs. Charles Bishop and was most inspiring. She made a brief resume of the work done by the W.M.S. of the United Church of Canada. There are 2094 auxiliaries with a membership of 76,491, who contributed this year the sum of $778,634.50. This supports 283 missionaries, 181 fundus and 108 bonus. This is quite inadequate to carry on the work if we are to keep our foreign fields. What can make it possible?

When the disciples told Jesus that they were about to go away to their loaves and two small fishes to feed five thousand people, He said "Bring ye it to Me." They, full of faith, did so, and He blessed it and there was enough and to spare. So Jesus will bless each missionary and give him the power to do a more far-reaching work than we can imagine possible.

What the people in heathen lands want is a God in their own land and this is what Dr. Stanley Jones emphasizes when he speaks and uses "The Christ of the Indian Road".

We might imagine ourselves kneeling in the manger and reading a woman from each country bearing a message to the Christ Child, King of the world.

This is China speaking. "We have confucius. He can show us an ethical and political code, but He did not "respect the gods but have as little as possible to do with them. Live the golden rule in a negative way. The foundation of all good is the virtue of filial piety which is true but is not enough for us. We want a God of the heart we can follow. We want a God of the Chinese heart."

"Japan, Honey."

An Expected Miracle

To which the small girl replied, "Do they tell me when I got in the first grade I would, and I can't, not even with grandfathers help."

They had built up an expected miracle. She had entered the first grade, and there she should remain indefinitely read. What they had forgotten was that she was glad she had entered the great moment in her life when she could begin to learn how to read! There is a vast difference, I think that had Dwight Moody been alive he could have done all through the school years.

Parents could aid their children so much if they could differentiate between learning and the process of learning. The schools should aid and assist but specialize in the latter.

Don't avoid your child for children's arithmetic. Help him visually by letting him halve or quarter apples for sauce, etc.

Don't ask your child if he likes geography. Find out whether he is interested in the far corners of the world.

In short, forget your child's report cards and concentrate on whether he child is getting the one life that son a school can give him, and that is "the process of learning".

Acquaint Child with Process of Learning

(By Constance Cameron)

The five-year-old had had her first day in kindergarten and upon her second day in the first grade rushed home, and hastily extracted a huge volume from the family library. Then she gazed a long while and turned it eagerly, then her happy anticipation lagged. Thump went the book on the floor. Her little hands ransacked for grandfather's glasses. She put them on and again her interest in the book was eagerly reflamed. Suddenly, after gazing soberly at the pages, she again dropped the book and kicked it across the floor with the science and proficiency of a desperate football player.

"What's wrong, Honey."

"Oh, I can't, not even with grandfathers glasses."

They had built up an expected miracle. She had entered the first grade, and there she should remain indefinitely read. FAIRY TALE COMES TRUE FINDS GIRL WHO CLIMBS FROM USHER TO ACTRESS

By Central Press Canadian

Wichita, Kan., Oct. 28—Henrietta Schubert, whom you may soon know as Nancy Shubert, believes in fairy stories now!

Not long ago Henrietta, who is 18, petite and pretty, was an usher in a Wichita movie palace. Like most girls, she dreamed of being a movie star. And because she watched the stars on the screen every day while at work she could think of nothing else.

When she looked at the cold and bitter face, of course, she knew she didn't have much chance. But she went right along dreaming until her Prince Charming came into her life.

Her prince was Jyle Talbot, well-known Hollywood actor. Talbot, making a personal appearance in Wichita saw Henrietta and said:

"I believe you'd go well on the screen. Have you ever had any screen talent in the movies. I'm going to see if we can't arrange a screen test for you and if it's ok. I'll help you get started in the movies."

Henrietta had dreamed of listening to such a speech as she ushered the fans to their seats. Now she really had heard it she saw her air castles taking form as solid structures.

Needless to say, Henrietta passed the screen tests and immediately went to Hollywood to go picture work. Her debut was small, a part in "Chance at Heaven" in which she changed her name from Nancy Shubert for box-office purposes. She next was cast in more important roles in "So Red the Rose" and soon other offers rolled in.

Her story might end with that, but there's more to it. Hollywood gossips are hinting at a romance with Talbot, her Prince Charming of Wichita. Could blame Henrietta for believing in fairy tales?

To Whiten A Tawny Skin

If Summer's Tan is Persistent, Try This Mild Bleach

(By Helen Follett)

If you have decided that you simply positively must have a bleach with an ammonia lamp treatment, to keep tawny and freckles from showing, and you've got to bear up under a normal complexion have it appear at the very end of a two-week period of simple tincture of benzoin.

Benzoin stimulates that natural shedding of the skin that goes on all the time, but is not noticeable except in bleach.

After washing the face and rinsing in warm water, rinse in cold to which a few drops of tincture of benzoin have been added. Should you prefer a lotion, combine four ounces of rubbing alcohol, two ounces of rosewater, fifteen drops of ample tincture of benzoin. Don't let the bottle give you the compound tincture. That don't do.

Best foot forward, girls, and may both be fleet indeed! This is our favorite topic, the care and housing of our pedal extremities.

Whenever you can, wear bath sandals. Rubber soles are like petroleum set free. At any rate, they're free from the fermenting pressure of shoes. There is a chance for toes to spread themselves, get out of the habit of being cramped. And when you intended to be, it is that clustering of toes sends the big toe inward to suffer an ingrown nail; the little pig toe takes on a curve. Any vacation period week of the year should be foot-care week. Dust the little dogs well with soothing powder, rub them smart, massage with cold cream. Two or three times are not the days are comfortably shod, trotting does not hurt them, are not of the highest. Life will be rosier.

Never hamper with a mole. If it is necessary to save soul's happiness to get rid of it, go to a medical man who will use one of several safe methods for extermination. It happens, now and then, that when a mole is irritated there is serious trouble. Nearly all of them are harmless.

Ross and Lena replied in a few well chosen words thanking the assembled crowd for the costly gifts. All joined in singing, "For they are jolly good fellows," after which a delicious lunch was served.

Deploring the fact that "there are few successful commanders on whom fame has shone so unwillingly as upon John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough" Winston Churchill has presented the claim for a just and more general judgment from his fellow countrymen in his book "Marlborough, His Life and Times". Thackeray, Macaulay and a long succession of famous writers have in their different styles expressed opinion upon Marlborough's name, and it is therefore with a deep sense of responsibility that Mr. Churchill has undertaken his task. The author in his preface to the volume states "I hope to show that he was not only the foremost of English soldiers, but the first rank among the statesmen of our history; not that he was a Titan, for that is not disputed, but that he was emin-ently authors are beyond a doubt the time they spent in the U.S.S.R. was far too short for comprehensive study but have given their opinions of questions which were impossible to answer without personal observation. MOTHER... they're too little!

Don't give them an adult's laxative

If your child is fretful, listless . . . isn't hungry . . . is bored with his toys . . . Mother, you can be certain there's a physical reason for such a change in disposition. Often the physical reason is constipation, and you should not delay in giving him a good laxative.

But—careful, Mother—laxatives made for adult use are often too harsh for a child's sensitive system. Even in reduced doses they may do more harm than good.

When your child needs a laxative, give him Castoria, the laxative made especially for children. It is safe, sure and gentle. It contains no harmful drugs—no narcotics.

Castoria is not nauseating. It does not gripe. Children actually like to take it. Get a family size bottle today.

DITCH DIGGER IS HONORED IN DEATH

MARYVILLE, Mo, Oct. 28—(AP)—Jeff Monroe, a digger of ditches who used his meagre earnings to make himself the boss of others died poorer than himself was buried amid the pomp and ceremony that befitted a potentate.

Maryville turned out en masse yesterday for the rites. Leading the mourners was Mayor Frank Roby who ordered the court house closed for the afternoon as a mark of a pall-bearer.

The First Christian Church was packed and the expensive coffin in which Jeff was laid was surrounded by a mound of flowers.

Two pastors paid tribute to the life that is ended.

"I think of nothing better than that this evening, as I think of the unfortunate. He short-changed himself times without number to help those who were lazy," said Warren Lobley.

Monroe spent most of his 41 years laboring in ditches and his last official act was to contribute his last day's pay to the Welfare Board. It was his Christmas night—work for 10 years to dress up at St. Michael's and distribute toys.

The cortege ran about two miles long and included 17 carloads of Omahans who had motored here to honor Jeff.

ALEX MORRISON says:

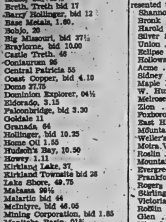
Golf is a game wherein the main object is to properly apply whatever force is used—and when a small amount of force is properly applied by means of making the correct swing, the ball is made to travel great distances.

It takes little strength of a child to send a ball over 200 yards.

Of course, a weak person must have a better swing than a strong one, but few seem to realize this.

I do not know one person who doesn't have strength enough to keep up with the strong players.

Certainly women could drive just as far as men if they would learn to make the proper swing. And there is nothing about the correct swing that women can't perform.

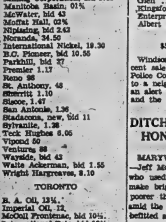


VALUES FROM FOOTBALL AT THIS SEASON

Football Stimulating as Well as Relaxing at Same Time

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Hygiene.

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)



Again another football season is with us and again thousands upon thousands will witness the games and each week end will follow the scores with enthusiasm.

Football is of course, a distinctly American game that is, football as it is played on the shores of the ocean. Although it is not quite so "open", as Rugby, it is not quite so "close" as soccer. Football is a combination of the two.

Football is of course, a distinctly American game that is, football as it is played on the shores of the ocean. Although it is not quite so "open", as Rugby, it is not quite so "close" as soccer. Football is a combination of the two.

Deep down, too, we like our college boys to be physically fit for future leaders of the nation, we admire their gentlemanly attributes. We wonder how we as American types.

And last, of course, everybody is interested in youth, especially when it is in the form of our youngsters once and seeing youth, flushed with health as well as determination they will be.

Psychologically considered, football possesses other features even more fundamental ones than those already mentioned. These values are to be found when one studies the football game.

A football crowd is decidedly stimulating as well as relaxing at one and the same time, paradoxical though this may seem. It is stimulating because it is characterized by enthusiasm and abandon. It shouts sings, yells and acts as well as it can approval. College supporters of the teams, as well as high school youngsters and one "old grad," come to watch their boys play as well as their own side win. In fact, they often feel that the prowess of their team is harder than the players themselves.

Now why does one actually feel so thrilled at a football game? It is a riotous, and often maniacal festival mob? Primarily the stress of crowd-minded and therefore happy when a part of a crowd.

One instinctively feels at ease when surrounded by a large group of people and, in addition, such a large group engenders a feeling of security. Besides, the spirit of the crowd you are in may be composed of all kinds and conditions of people, young and old, of all kinds and conditions of temperament and nevertheless presents itself to you as a homogeneous group, welded together for a single purpose.

In such a group also, you need your sense of individuality and your consciousness of "aloneness," as it may be called by the term in such atmosphere you are conscious of being merged in a group and you concerned with being different or with fulfilling your own individual life. Attendance upon a football game makes for this proper sociality, as such, and you stop wondering how you look, what impression you are making upon others, or what people think.

Lastly, you must consider the value that is gained by giving vent to your emotions in the car I have mentioned. As the team you are rooting for, makes its plays, and goes down gory your emotional barometer which makes for a splendid exercise for the heart, lungs and circulatory system.

Then, later, in shouting yourself hoarse, you get rid of a lot of pent-up feeling that accumulates. If you have been eager to expel for ever-so-long, the effect of this is worth the price or admission to any gridiron encounter.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Salt, or sodium chloride, Starch is often called salt since it is from absorbing moisture. Sometimes a very small amount of potassium iodide is also added. Most people eat too much salt. Salt is bad for health. Salt, is, however, a necessary food, and only animals will travel miles and risk all sorts of dangers in order to obtain some. Never should food be salted at the table before it is tasted.

B. C. I. Juniors Earn Tie in Group Defeating Trenton 5-0

Game Well Played Despite Slippery Field

Playing inspired football the B.C.I. Juniors defeated the Trenton Collegiate kids by the score of 5 to 0, creating a tie for first place in the junior section of the Bay of Quinte group of C.O.S.S.A. football at the Pats' Grounds on Friday night. A field that was covered with water and during a steady downpour of rain.

Headed by their captain, Eddie Schrider, who called the plays at quarter and played sterling defensive ball throughout the Laughlin-coached tri-color from the local seat of knowledge out...played and out-generalled their Trenton rivals, keeping the play well in the Trenton territory, except for the final three minutes of play when the visitors showed their wares and were triumphantly marching down the field when the final whistle was blown that gave Belleville the verdict and the right to meet Trenton in a special play-off series to be completed later.

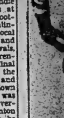
Due to the wet and cold weather that prevailed, many fumbles were in evidence, with the locals receiving their share of same from Lady Luck during such miscues. The local line played heads-up football and looked superior to their rivals as they ripped and tore through for substantial gains and held the hefty Trenton squad at bay when they threatened. Eddie Schrider led the locals offensively with Earl Hay's Broken field running proving a great factor towards the tri-color win. The Laughlin-coached line of scrimmage never looked better, while the back field teamed like a well oiled machine. Hay did the punting for the locals and gained yards on each exchange of kicks.

For the visitors Dadswell, Gray, Horwitz, Davis and Willeman proved the best. Willeman's line plunging and Dadswell's end runs proved threatening when Trenton had possession of the ball. With but three minutes to play and Belleville starting them in the face, the Trenton backfielders staged a belated rally that took them to within ten yards of a local goal line, but the final whistle sounded all too soon for their cause. The B.C.I. juvenile boys also played for the locals, while their line starred.

Trenton kicked off in a downpour of rain and Schrider made yards to bring the ball to mid-field. Many fumbles were committed by both teams but the local line of scrimmage was far too superior and no scoring was registered until the second quarter, when Schrider ran around left end for a 30 yard gain and on the next down he tossed a perfect forward pass into the wall...ing arms of McCreary for the only touchdown. McCreary was camped on the Trenton goal line and caught the perfectly timed pass, but was not converted. Although the locals looked the better squad in the third stanza they failed twice to score when on Trenton's five yard line, through fumbles, owing to the wetness of the ball. Trenton were literally marching up the field at the final whistle sounded giving Belleville a tie for first place in the group and the right to play-off with Trenton.

The line-ups:

Trenton—Flying wing, Mitchell; halves, Dadswell, Gray, Derry; quarter, Horwitz; snap, Shonter; inside, White, Roberts; middle, Sutton, Hamilton; outside, Davis, Miller; subs, Lilligan, Campbell and Vanderveer.



B.C.I.—Flying wing, Carr; halves, Bill and Eddie Schrider, Hay; inquarter, Schrider; snap, Hughes; inside, Jeffery, Gold; middle, Staples, McKinney; outside, McCreary, Reynolds; subs, Kokesh, Laughlin, Reynolds, Thompson and Allen.

Officials—Referee, Gabb, Albert College; Umpire, Faulkner, Belleville; Head linesman Lamore, Trenton.

VERNON AYRES

BILL McKENZIE

Here are two stalwarts with the Montreal Maroons' 1933-34 hopefuls to the Stanley Cup. Both have been going great guns in the training games and much is expected of McKenzie, who has just come up from the amateur ranks via Rosemont. Vernon Ayres is reported even bigger than ever which is something, as he is one of the most powerfully built defence men in the N.H.L.

PICTON BALL TEAM HONORED

Trophies Presented And Praises of Team Sung

Picton and Prince Edward County baseball fans augmented by friends of the team made during the past season gathered in the Parish Hall in Picton last night to pay their compliments to a grand little team, that missed by one game to win the Intermediate B championship of the Province. The banquet was a decided success, the praises of the team was sung by every speaker, while the presentation of the three trophies won during the season was duly presented. Judge Wade H. McLean presided in his usual efficient manner, while Dr. Roblin, student of baseball for the past 40 years gave the principal address.

A most delightful banquet was spread for the guests, who numbered 200, the women of Mary Magdalene Church being the caterers. During the banquet, the Prince Edward County Regimental Band dispensed lively tunes heard many times during the baseball season, and community singing was enjoyed by the assembly. A quartette provided the guests with several delightful numbers, Judge McLean, one of the best after dinner speakers in the Province held high compliment to the team telling his listeners that life is not in holding a good hand but playing a poor hand well and that is applied to the Picton team. He told the team the county, the league and the eastern part of the Province was proud of their endeavor. Charles M. Gould, president of the Bay of Quinte League presented the Stone Cup to manager Jake Vanover and stated it was a pleasure to act as president of such a fine organization. Ernie Gibbard, Eastern Ontario representative of the C.S.B.A., presented the trophy to George Welsh, president of the Picton Club. Mr. Gibbard described baseball during his address and admitted that likely Picton and other intermediate teams in this section would be placed in classification during the next season. He complimented the Picton executive and the manager and team for the co-operation given him. E. P. Cox, Mayor of Picton, Lieutenant Roland Rorke, captain of the team the Guelph team.

Dr. Roblin in a witty address told of his connection with baseball in Boston for forty years and then intimated he was a charter member of the Picton team and the enjoyment he received from playing with them perhaps Dr. Gibbard presented some moving pictures of the Picton club of the final games and they proved most interesting and finally brought back memories of a pleasant season. The press spoke on the value for the town to baseball. The banquet was a decided success.

Undefeated Manitoba Juniors Strong Contenders for Title

Red Deer Lod ge Team Seen as Likely Dominion Finalists

By MAURICE SMITH
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

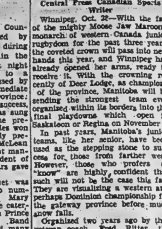
Winnipeg, Oct. 28—With the fall of the mighty Moose Jaw Maroons, monarch of western Canada junior rugbydom for the past three years, the coveted crown will pass into new hands this year, and Winnipeg has already opened her arms, ready to receive it. With the crowning recently of Deer Lodge, as champions of the province, Manitoba will be home of the strongest team ever organized within its borders into the final playdowns which open in Saskatoon or Regina on November 4.

In past years, Manitoba's junior teams, like her senior, have been used as the stepping stone to success for, those from farther west. However, those who prefers to "know" are highly confident that such will not be the case this fall. They are visualizing a western and perhaps Dominion championship for the gateway province before much snow falls.

Organized two years ago by that veteran coach, Fred Ritter, the Lodgers, as they are more commonly known are without a doubt the greatest junior rugby machine to ever perform on a Winnipeg gridiron. Their first year of campaigning saw them reach the provincial final, only to lose out in the playoff to Manitoba Varsity, but not before extra time was necessary to reach a decision. It could be easily seen, then, they had the making of a great team.

Have Red Lost a Game

This season they have swept all before them. They do not even know what it feels like to have a touchdown scored against them. In six league games they amassed the amazing total of 89 points, while allowing their opposition only four. Two of their six victories were shut outs, a truly remarkable record.



The team is not composed of individual stars. Each player has a task to do out on the field and that is what he does. Fred Ritter has trained his charges so that they work like a well-oiled machine. Averaging about 170 pounds per man there is plenty of power and drive in the line while the backfield works in brilliant fashion.

In his own words, Ritter stated that "in all his years of experience, he considers the Lodgers have more rugby ability and brains than any other club he has ever been connected with and that it is the greatest team he has ever coached."

That is saying a lot, for Fred Ritter was himself a great football star in his youth. A member of the team that, previously in 1904, he was chosen by Walter Camp for halfback position on his all-American team of that year.

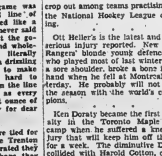
Prior to his coaching rugby teams in the west for many years, He gave the famous, Regina Rough Riders their first, western Canada title in 1912, taking the laurels away from Winnipeg. He then came up residence in the Manitoba capital and, strange enough, brought the crown back to this city in 1924 with his Victorias. Since then, however, the mighty men of Ritchie have reigned supreme on the prairies.

This season the fiery Ritter has again come up with a team of championship calibre. His fondest hopes of seeing his charges win the western title, a feat a Winnipeg team has accomplished only once in history. If they do, the east had better watch out.

Here is the Deer Lodge Junior rugby team, undefeated champions of Manitoba. The Lodgers are considered the greatest junior team ever organized in Winnipeg and are strong bets to win the Western Canada title. Reading from left to right, they are (sitting)—Stan Coghan, John Laurie, Bill Nairn, Harold Bailey, Jim Barnes, Bart Johnson, Frank Brown, Harry Radper and Ar. McKenzie; kneeling—Baldy Falconer, Burr Bennett, Victor Taylor, Denny Kuneluk, Bob Dodds, Carl Schultz, Dave Morris, Johnny Hamilton, Bob Richardson, Bob Cochrane; standing—Bob Rutherford, Bob Moody, Jamo Allen, Jack Brunsding, Fred Ritter (coach), Ed Bisbush, Jim Passey, Bill Hicks, George Brindling, Jeff Nicklin and Art Rice-Jones.

SOVIET ATHLETES MAY SOON COME TO THIS CONTINENT

If and when the United States recognizes Russia it is expected that Russian athletes will come to this continent to compete in various athletic events. Here is shown a group of Russian marathon runners lined up ready for the race. Note the bearded lad in centre, He's 70 years of age.



From the Hockey Training Camps

Dissatisfied and injured hockey players, invariably accompaniments of advanced training, have begun to crop out among teams practising for the National Hockey League opening.

Ott Heller's is the latest and most serious injury reported. New York Rangers' blonde young defenceman who played most of last winter with a sore shoulder, broke a bone in his hand when he fell at Montreal yesterday. He probably will not start the season with the world's champions.

Ken Doraty became the first casualty in the Toronto Maple Leaf camp when he suffered a knee injury that will keep him off the ice for a week. The diminutive winger collided with Harold Cotton, crashed into the boards and wound up in a heap.

Ottawa claimed—but not proudly—two players who were injured in series clash when their employers' Allan Shields. Senators' hooky defenceman, and Cooney Weiland, their star centre, both have decided

ALEX MORRISON says:

No doubt you've noticed what clumsy people there are in golf clothes by moving up recovery shots.

You either chopped down into the grass or sank to that the ball didn't get anywhere or hit the ball cleanly so that it went twice as far as you intended.

You stand erect as you can your anxiety to get the ball out of the bad lie you put your whole body into the swing. It takes a powerful swing to play out of a bad lie but hanging at the ball with your body doesn't produce a powerful swing. You should stand erect as you can, think above swinging the club head and you can do a good recovering your head in the right position by means of pointing your chin properly.

Ottawa Senators Liable to be Tough Picking in N.H.L.

Many New Faces to be Seen Under the New Coach, Boucher

Ottawa, Oct. 28 (CP)—"Hockey players," said George Boucher, "are developed by playing hockey." In those seven words, the new coach of Ottawa Senators explained today why he has had a squad of twenty-two men playing hockey two hours a day for nearly two weeks, preparing for the opening of the National Hockey League season on Nov. 11. Twice a day the squad spends an hour on skates, not skating around the ice but playing strenuous hockey.

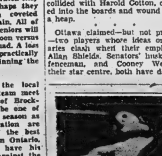
Determined to lift the Senators from the cellar position in the league Frank Ahearn, club president, ordered a new deal early this fall. The first move was to secure Boucher as coach. In his playing days, "Buck"—he is a member of the famous Ottawa family that has contributed four brothers to major league hockey—was one of the greatest defence players in the game. He came here from Boston after piloting the Cubs to a title in the Can-American loop. In his long hockey career he played for Ottawa, Montreal Maroons and Chicago Blackhawks.

New Players Secured.

The second move was to secure some new players. After the close of last season, Hec Kilrea, one of the team in hockey, was traded to the Toronto Maple Leafs for Bob Gracie and a bundle of cash. Boucher looked Gracie to Boston, securing Perk Galbraith, getting along in years now but still a great defensive left winger, Bud Cook, younger brother of Bun and Bill of New York Rangers and Ted Saunders, a right winger. The latter played second third and fourth in Can-American scoring figures last year, playing with Boston Cubs. Just when Ottawa was disappearing last year, Nick Wasnie, who was on loan to Joe Simpson's New York Americans, was bought outright from Canadiens.

Two of the best amateur prospects in Ontario, Scotty Bowman, a defence player, and Jerry Shannon, a left winger, were added to the squad. Both played with Ottawa Pals senior last winter Shannon leading the O.H.A. in scoring. The latest deal brought Albert "Battleship" Leduc here from Canadiens to plug a hole in the defence that lost the Senators many games last season.

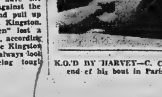
Lorne Chabot will play Bill Beveridge, rated high among National League goalies and a reserve will have the veteran, Alex Connell, who will not don the pads unless some emergency arises.



Allan Shields coach Bert McInenly both with Ottawa last year, and Leduc seem assured of steady jobs on defence. Bowman must get the call for the fourth place but Boucher has two older candidates for the job. "Pip" Foster, who turned pro with Boston Cubs and Harvey Rockburn, the short, stocky, blocking defenceman who finished last winter with Ottawa.

To patrol left boards on his first starting forward line, the place vacated by Hec Kilrea, Boucher has moved up Bill Touhey, who has been travelling fast in workouts. Conner Weiland, one of the finest centres in hockey and Frank Finnigan, who has been showing better form as the season progressed last day lone last winter, will round out the first line. Weiland at present is finding out having refused a $500 salary cut.

Coach Satisfied.



Boucher has been working Bud Cook with Shannon and Saunders as his old line and he is satisfied they will make the grade. As a third line, Boucher has Syd Howe at centre, flanked by Galbraith and Wasnie, the type of combine may be depended upon when the going is tough. Another line Boucher has still another line, Danny Cox at centre and the Rooke brothers, Dean and Hank, on the outside signal are Gus Forslund, a fight-ing winger from Duluth last year and Eddie Finnigan, Frank's young brother, who played with Boston Cubs, to take the jump to pro ranks this year.

Pruning of the squad will be conducted until next week. Boucher, never free with words, as given no indication who will be left or traded. An offer was made some days ago for Paul Runge of Philadelphia Arrows, leading scorer of the Can-American loop last winter and is understood still to be pehding. Senator officials would not say whether they would let Runge go but said they offered two seasoned forward.

INDIAN SWIMS FOR 72 HOURS

P. K. Ghose, of the Calcutta, India, Central Swimming Club, is shown doing his record-breaking endurance swim in the Cornwallis square tank in Calcutta recently. Ghose swam for 72 hours and 18 minutes, eclipsing by 18 minutes the former world's record which had been held recently by Miss Lottie Moore of America and Marei woman. So powerful was Ghose's inclination for sleep, during the swim, a miniature cannon had to be set off at half-hour intervals to keep him awake.

For the LOVE of EVE

by Lucy Wallace

Arlene had had to stay overtime too, and was transcribing pages of notes that Barnes had dictated that afternoon. Arlene did not seem to mind particularly. Indeed, Eve suspected that Arlene welcomed the extra work, although she required no remuneration for it.

Eve wondered if Arlene were interested in some man in the store. "It's strange," she thought, "how most men overlook a girl of Arlene's straightforwardness and then let themselves become enamored by some one like Mona Allen."

Today, busy as the advertising office had been, Mona had come in late after lunch, her blond hair elaborately waved, and that afternoon, on pretense of securing notes for advertising copy, she had taken time to select a new frock which it was quite evident was to be worn for the first time that evening to classic song admirer.

Just a few moments before the closing gong sounded, Barnes asked Mona if she could stay a little later and help that evening. Mona smiled sweetly and replied:

"I'm so sorry, Mr. Barnes, but I have a dinner engagement. There's no way I could alter any friend now at this late hour, so of course I will have to keep it. At any other time I'd be only too glad to stay and help you."

And she left with a triumphant flounce over her shoulder at the other two girls.

We're avowed under with work and she gets away with that!" commented Arlene to Eve when Mona had gone and Barnes returned to his office.

It was eight o'clock before Eve and Arlene finished the copy, attached the necessary sketches and put cards and placed them in their separate envelopes, addressed to the Lake City newspapers. As a last straw to the burden of a weary day, Barnes asked them if they'd mind taking the copy to the newspaper offices on their way to the car. Usually he did this himself when the copy was late.

A light snow was falling when they left the store. Crowds were swarming about the brilliantly lighted streets. Under the glare of the arc lights the snow looked like a myriad of tiny diamonds. Eve paused a moment to watch the beauty of the scene. Then she turned to Arlene and said:

"Let's go to the Coffee Shop for a bite to eat before we go home. I'm simply famished."

Arlene agreed and they walked down the street to the Coffee Shop. Eve ordered a light lunch, but Arlene, who had had no dinner, ordered a substantial meal.

"What do you propo pose doing?" Dick asked.

ed theatres. Undecided as to what to see, they trudged from theatre to theatre, finally finding room," Mrs. Brooks explained: "We'd like to have you join us. There are just three of us—Miss McElhinney, Miss Landis and myself."

Eve had seen the two school-teachers who had rooms on the floor above—Lucky little Beverly McElhinney who felt a trail of spicy perfume behind her in the hall and Miss Landis, pretty and intellectual looking, who seemed always laden with books and papers.

It would serve Dick right, Eve told herself, to be found her alone when he returned. And though she was tired, she thought the evening with Dick would be delightful and might prove entertaining and make up for many lonely hours she had stayed in her own apartment.

"Just give me 10 minutes," she smiled, "and I'll be with you."

The effect of the light frock Eve donned and the carefully applied make-up tended to lift her spirits somewhat and she felt less tired as she made her way up the long flight of stairs to the Brooks' apartment door.

The three women sat about a marble topped table with cards spread out before them. Mrs. Brooks greeted Eve cordially.

"Sit down," urged Miss McElhinney, "we were just playing a crazy bridge' while we waited for you. I'm so glad you came up. We thought you might prefer a little game with us to spending the evening alone."

Eve graciously took her place. But she was disturbed. What did Miss McElhinney mean? Was there malice there? How did that girl know Dick was to be absent all evening? Had he told her? This rekindled her resentment against Dick and her attention wandered from the game.

"Your turn, Mrs. Rader," snapped the young teacher after one has permitted her eyes to wander over the room. Only this a few minutes to 9 o'clock. Sorry I couldn't wait and eat with you. Decided to go to meeting again. Don't wait up for me. I may be late. Love,

Dick."

Eve wanted to cry. How could he go away and leave her to spend this dreadful evening alone? Reason reminded her that he had had to spend the early part of the evening alone. But she couldn't help that. She had wanted to be together early. Dispiritedly she warmed over the food Dick had prepared for her—a chop and some stewed corn. There was a plain cabbage salad that had grown wilted and discolored with waiting. There was a dish of canned peaches for dessert. They had had canned peaches for dinner the night before. And because she had forgotten to order fruit, fruit they had had canned peaches for breakfast, too.

As Eve sat alone, heaven resentful, magician Dick's going out that evening had not been a sudden decision. The dinner had been a planned meal proved that. This was Tuesday and it was on Tuesday evening that he had been away last week. He had said very little to her about that absence. In fact, he had avoided the subject when she had questioned him concerning the following day. Laughingly, it is true, pressing her off with the excuse that fraternal stalkers were secret and not to be discussed outside the lodge even with one's lovely and charming new wife.

Eve had just finished clearing the table and stacking the dishes at the sink when there was a knock at the door. She was startled for a moment. She tried to convince her self that she should not be nervous, yet she stood very still, half fearing to go to the door.

CHAPTER 11

The knock on the door was repeated. "Who's there?" Eve called firmly, her voice concealing her nervousness.

"Mrs. Brooks," a cheery voice responded.

Eve opened the door to allow her to enter. "We are having a little bridge party in Miss McElhinney's room. Only this a few minutes to 9 o'clock. Sorry I couldn't wait and eat with you. Decided to go to meeting again. Don't wait up for me. I may be late. Love,

Dick."

TARZAN. LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

"We are the Waziri of Tarzan," said the leader, "searching for our chief and master." Blaks could have seen for joy. Meanwhile the ape-man, with the golden lion, had intercepted The Jad and terrified the Arabs into turning back with the stolen treasure. Thus it was that the attacking Waziri met Tarzan with The Jad's bedraggled party, took over the prisoners, and the custody of the jewels and gold from the valley of the sepulcher.

Great was the rejoicing between the reunited friends. Zeyd held his beloved Ateja in his arms once more. Deprived of their loot, Ibn Jad and his men were made guard of the Waziri. Tarzan had decided for Ateja's sake, not to punish her father but to send the band home to their desert. But happiest of all was Gulnara. Blaks told him that the Princess Gulnadia was safe in her father's castle.

A dozen times was the ape-man forced to repeat to Blaks the parting message of the Princess before the young American could believe it. "An' thou finds a thousand times." "Good-bye" demanded Tarzan, then tell him the gates of Nimmr be open to him and Gulnadia awaits his coming." The following morning the Waziri started to take up their march through the south toward the country of Tarzan. Blake, dressed again in his fine raiment, bestrode his charger at the column started down the trail, Tarzan and the golden lion stood beside him.

Blaky reached down and extended his hand to the ape-man. "Good-bye, sir," he said, "and thank you a thousand times." "Good-bye!" demanded Tarzan, "I am sure you coming names with us!" Blake shook his head, "No," he answered, "I'm going back into the jungle to get some more." Tarzan and Jad-bal-ja stood in the trail watching Sir James as he rode out toward the City of Nimmr, the lion and silver tip of his pennant fluttering bravely from the iron tip on his great lance.

THIS YOUNG WINTER certainly caught a lot of people napping—so many things to do about the house, but plenty of time to do it, certainly did not work out this time. You never can tell in Canada what the weather will be as October draws to a close. There are double windows to be put on, and storm doors, fuel to be purchased after the furnaces or stoves have been cleaned and overhauled — taking Time by the forelock, as it were.

The advent of snow and colder weather also reminds us forcibly that summer clothing will have to be changed and fall and winter duds procured—this goes for both sexes.

Have the radio tuned up for entertainment when nights are long and programs better.

See about your fall bulbs and see that plants are properly protected to winter well.

Have the automobile overhauled and put in trim for winter driving.

Have the household shoes all repaired against the rough weather, see that rubbers are waterproof.

These are just a few reminders of what the season calls for—others will suggest themselves.

The best reminder is to consult the announcements of business men on this page, and throughout the paper, and ascertain WHERE TO GET WHAT YOU WANT WHEN YOU WANT IT.

COPPER TOED BOOTS—were worn by boys and girls many years ago and if their new boots did not have them they were greatly disappointed. Undoubtedly these copper caps saved the toes of the boots from being scuffed, but they were not beautiful to look at except to the young boys and girls and to them they were beautiful only while new and shiny. Then there were the cowhide working boots with pegged soles for men which sold at 75 cents and 85 cents a pair—these when sold were put upon a float by the store keeper and the pegs scraped out. Of course there were better working boots, but most of them had pegged soles. Long legged boots were worn extensively also years ago — some of them had quite high heels and many of them were finished off at the tops with red leather and tassels. Now everyone old and young wears much better made and more comfortable fitting footwear and the styles are manly and ever changing. Styles are said to come back as it may happen that copper toed shoes may become fashionable for boys and girls again sometime — but try and get them to wear them. However, shoes of all styles and grades become worn and the wet snow storm of this week found weak spots in many shoes. During the fine weather the wearers put off having them repaired, but now B. W. Brown's two shoe repairing shops have many of them to put in first class shape to stand the fall and winter weather. Brown's shoe repairing shops are located at 10 Campbell Street and 4 Bridge Street. If desired shoes will be called for and delivered without extra charge.

"STEP ON THE GAS" and STEP ON IT"—These and 'step on it' have come to stay. People naturally like quick service and if you drive a car and desire service that satisfies by "SERVICE THAT SATISFIES" when having your car supplied with gas, or oil, turn into Quigley's Service Station at the northwest corner of Dundas and Pinnacle Streets—it will not be necessary to tell them "to step on it" — they do it without being asked and if you want your car washed or greased the work will be done promptly and thoroughly. Atlas tires and batteries are sold also at this service station and a large business is done in them as they are fully guaranteed for a considerable time. Mr. Quigley and his assistants certainly give excellent and courteous service. You will acknowledge this to be the case after you have paid a visit to this popular service station.

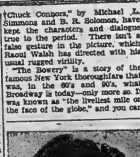
Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE



The wicked Eighties and the gay Nineties may have been just that, but Time is a great healer and in that year 1933 A.D., the days of Chuck Connors, Steve Brodie, John L. Sullivan and Lottie Gilson are their honky tonks, their spectacular bright lamps, their bare-knuckled fights and their saloon wrecking are richly, deliciously and frequently riotously funny.

Audiences at the Belle Theatre today will find "The Bowery," the first of the new 20th Century Pictures, good for deep-hearted laughter from the moment Chuck Connors enters the scene and gets mad because his rival Steve Brodie, has thrown rotten "mush melons" all over the front of his saloon, to the final fade-out when Chuck and Steve, friends at last through the efforts of Swipes, a typical newsboy of the period.

Wallace Beery and George Raft play Connors and Brodie respectively, and Jackie Cooper, completing the star triumvirate, is Swipes, a newsie who lives with Chuck until Chuck brings home a girl he rescued from some while slavers. Swipes doesn't hold with women and with being neat and tidy and when Chuck gives a dance sound warning on the spot intended for spankings, Swipes leaves home covered with chagrin. He switches his allegiance to Brodie, but in his heart he can't forget Chuck. In the end it is Swipes who affects a reconciliation between the two who, despite the bitter rivalry that was the sensation of the Bowery, really admire each other.

Howard Estabrook and James Gleason, in adapting the novel, Chuck Connors," by Michael J. Simmons and H. B. Solomon, have kept the characters and dialogue true to the period. There isn't a false gesture in the picture, which Raoul Walsh has directed with his usual rugged virility.

"The Bowery" is a story of the famous New York thoroughfare that was, in the 80's and 90's, what Broadway is today—only more so. It was known as "the liveliest mile on the face of the globe," and you can

In these days fires were fought by volunteer firemen, but the rivalry for supremacy between the different companies was so great that the fighting was done largely with fists and the building was left to burn down. Such a skirmish is a swell laugh in "The Bowery."

The plot is motivated by Steve Brodie's jealousy over the supremacy of Chuck Connors, saloon owner. Brodie, a gambler thinks he would be more popular if he had a saloon, and when some barrows promise to set him up in business he opens on Bowery famous. He decides to "take a chance" and jump off Brooklyn Bridge to win glory.

Fay Wray introduces romance as the featured player, who is loved by both men. Pert Kelton has a part role and sings "Yo-ra-ra" and "Oh-Oo-Oo" that is the best of entertainment.

Warner Baxter Tuesday

Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy are the featured players in "Penthouse" which opens at the Belle Tuesday. It is a cosmopolitan production and based upon the novel from the pen of Arthur Somers Roche, published serially in Cosmopolitan magazine. Warner Baxter is called to give one of the finest performances of his long motion picture career.

AT THE CAPITOL

Described as a glittering panorama of New York life from Battery Park to Harlem "Made on Broadway" comes to the Capitol Theatre Monday with Robert Montgomery and Sally Eilers, two of the screen's most popular younger players, co-starred for the first time.

Montgomery is said to have another high-speed comedy role as Jeff Hildreth, super-flyer, "wise guy" and debonair gambler who hoodwinks society and reaps a harvest on Broadway. Miss Eilers plays opposite an interesting character development of the hoydenish, bedraggled waitress who is rescued from a watery grave by Montgomery and who subsequently become one of Manhattan's most pampered playgirls. "The unusually strong cast also features Madge Evans as the ex-wife who tries to help Montgomery decide a course of action during his mad career as high-pressure public relations expert and the supporting players include the comic Eugene Pallette, C. Henry Gordon, Jean Parker, Ivan Lebedeff, David Newell, Vince Barnett and Joseph Cawthorn.

"Made on Broadway" is based on the story, "Public Relations," written by Courtney Terrett, one of New Yorker's favorite newspapermen who witnessed many "inside" scenes during his years of metropolitan reporting in one of the city's most colorful administrations. Reports in the actual incidents from his own experience were worked into the picture's framework and places only thinly disguised under fictitious names.

The picture was directed by Harry Beaumont whose work on such modern-day pictures as "Pathless," "Unashamed", "Dance, Fools Dance" and "Our Blushing Brides," has given him the reputation of being Hollywood's master in sophisticated comedy themes. The current production is said to be replete with humorously typical extravagance in the matter of luxurious settings and among the New York smart set.

The program includes a selected comedy, a nature study and News. Monday and Tuesday are Dinnerware Gift days.

Stage and Screen Tonight

Tonight the stage presentation bill headed by Canada's Marionettes and including acts of singing, talking, dancing and comedy is offered twice at 7.45 and 9.45 before it leaves for Boston.

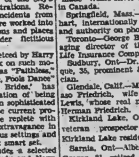
MAY REDUCE WAGE SLASH



Five Percent Cut May Be Basis of Settlement

MONTREAL, Oct. 28.—Unofficial but apparently well-founded reports today stated that the wage dispute between the running trades employees and the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways had been settled by a compromise. The compromise, it was stated, was that the companies had restricted their demand for an additional 10 per cent. reduction to one of 5 per cent. but before the agreement can be drafted there is a few details to be completed.

The 10 per cent cut was put into effect last May. The question of whether or not the proposed 5 per cent. cut would be made retroactive has to be settled it was believed, as well as the time of termination of the 5 per cent. reduction.

It was also believed the railways were pressing for withdrawal by the men of court actions entered in the Maritime Provinces in which a return of the 10 per cent reduction was demanded.

Observers generally were confident that no threat of a national railway strike now existed. The union locals recently authorized the Vice-Presidents of the engineers, firemen, trainmen, telegraphers and conductors, representative of 24,000 through the country, to call a strike rather than accept the 10 per cent. cut which followed a similar reduction early in 1932.

U. S. Dollar Tumbles in Early Trading Over Roosevelt Buying Plan

Early Surge of Stocks Dies Down at New York And Prices Ease

RETALIATION SEEN

Paris, London, Amsterdam View Unfavorably Prospect

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor

New York, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Share and staple markets received but momentary stimulation today from the announcement that the nation would extend its gold buying to foreign centres, as a major step in the administration's determined campaign to control the value of the United States dollar.

Leading details as to the manner in which the new plan will be administered, financial quarters were hesitant, for it was felt that any aggressive depreciation of the dollar, or a large drain upon the gold supplies in London and Paris, might lead to disturbing retaliatory steps abroad.

The stock market bulged up about $1 to $2 a share in leading issues in the first few minutes of trading, then slid back, with virtually all of the advance having been lost by midday save in the mining issues. The market turned very dull.

The chain belt to sterling jumped up as much as 2 cents a pound, then set roughly half its gain, while other grains save rye, topped a little more than their original price. Cotton futures at New York registered an advance of around 75 points, but later likewise approximately halved its advance.

The dollar dropped rather sharply against foreign currencies in the early dealings here, then held about unchanged, with sterling around $4.80, up a little more than 1 cent. After rising .13 1-2 of a cent to .67 cents, the French franc slid back a trifle, but held fairly firm.

Tuesday, Oct. 31.—Security markets were plainly undecided today regarding the immediate future of currency trends with sterling flattened out after an early showing of additional strength. Gains of a couple of dollars in scene of-the gold shares were reduced before noon and leading industrial shares dropped part of their early gains.

EVIDENCE OF BO YS AID IN SOLVING BA BY DEATH MYSTERY

Evidence give nto police by four and a half year old Jackie Maitland (LEFT) and seven year old Howard Avery (RIGHT), though somewhat conflicting, has led to what may be the solution to the sensational mystery concerning the death of Baby "Bunty" Hillier, who was iced for 18 hours, before her naked and lifeless body was found in a Toronto dump, her clothes in a basket nearby. According to the evidence taken by the police, the baby fell from the top of a cliff into the dump. It is alleged from statements made by little Jackie Maitland, that Howard Avery then removed the clothes from the unconscious child, and placed an old car door over her. Every, however, denies this, stating that when he saw the child lying there he went home. Both children will testify at the inquest which will be held Oct. 31.

Webster Profits For 1932 Are Shown To Aggregate $367,933

Concerns' Gains Given as 26.5 p. c. of Capital Used—Figures Come From Records—Turnover of Dollars Works Out at 4.7 Times Per Annum

According to the report made to the registrar under the Combines' Investigation Act by Arthur A. Crawley chartered accountant, charged with auditing the books of Webster Canada companies, the companies controlled, by Senator Lorne C. Webster made a total profit in 1932 or $367,933.85 after provision for Federal and Provincial income taxes, but not including the final close of the trial of the six Montreal coal companies charged with operating a combine to keep up prices, says a despatch from Quebec to the Montreal Star on Saturday.

Mr. Crawley was the last witness heard before the court adjourned until next Thursday for argument of counsel. He identified a copy of his report to the registrar and also the schedules attached to it, in which was contained the information regarding the Webster companies' profits. The profit, he said, represented 26.5 per cent. on the capital employed.

The report showed a turnover of dollars which worked out at 4.7 times. Explaining this item, the witness said that meant that the companies were able to use every dollar 4.7 times every year.

Statements from Records

"Am I correct in my understanding that these statements were made up by taking what appeared from the books to have been paid out for the total quantity handled in the season, and taking from the books what appeared to have been received or be receivable for the sales made during the season?" asked Louis St. Laurent, K.C., Crown Prosecutor.

They are made up from the records showing the operating accounts applicable to the several companies."

"And where correctly represent what appears on the company's records?"

"They do."

"Now, were you given full facilities for making your investigation?"

"We were."

"And were you satisfied that the figures you obtaining were the correct figures?"

"I was."

"There was another point at issue at the time as to whether at addition bf 1932 of nitrogenee per ton or of a shilling per ton should be made to the invoice prices."

"Yes, on about 250,000 tons imported in 1932."

"My understanding is in making up your calculations, instead of allowing a shilling you allowed ninepence?"

"Right."

"If it had to be a shilling, your report says that that would, on the total tonnage on which the calculations bear, make a difference of four cents and a fraction?"

"Yes, and in the aggregate something over $12,000. If my memory serves me right.

Mr. Geoffrion—$22,045.

Extra Freight Paid

"And there was one other point that had to do with the sum of $35,949.56 which I understand was added to freight paid during winter of 1932 and 1933 for coal brought in during the close season from Portland?"

"Yes."

"You did not allow that as part of the 1932 costs?"

"No, it would be in the same period as the 1933 coal imported in 1933. In our opinion it belongs with other costs for those purchases applicable to the year which got credit for the sales.

"We handled it in the same way as the companies had previously handled it on another occasion. In 1930 the same condition prevailed. They sold their coal and for their requirements for the closed season months they had to import through Portland."

"But if it belongs in 1933 it will affect the profit per ton in that year?"

"Yes."

Mr. Geoffrion—"In other words it is now worth talking about?"

Mr. St. Laurent—"In one year or the other. The one year will be worse if the other is better the average comes to the same thing?"

"Yes."

Eight Officials' Salaries

"Now, the effect of the report shows the salaries for each of the years 1929 to 1932 of the eight most highly paid officials of the several companies?"

"Right."

"And it shows what portion of those salaries was charged to Welsh anthracite operations and what portion was charged in the operating accounts to each one of the four companies?"

"On our statement, right."

"I understand from your report you are not to comment on these salaries by the registrar?"

"I was."

BURIED WITH DOLL IN ARMS

Thousands File Past Bier of Child Found Dead

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—Alfreda (Bunty) Hillier, whose mysterious disappearance and death last week caused a 48-hour sensation here, was buried today with the golden-hair-ed doll her mother placed in her arms. Thousands watched the funeral procession, but the service at the Hillier home was private.

It just had to give her a doll. She would have wanted it so," Bunty's 24-year-old mother explained. Only a few close friends of the family were present at the service conducted by Rev. J. A. Rodgers son of St. Philips' Anglican church.

For an hour before the service the Hillier home was thrown open to visitors and hundreds of persons walked past the flower-banked coffin.

Yesterday it was estimated close to 12,000 viewed the body of 18-months-old Bunty.

Inquest into the strange death of the child will be opened tomorrow. Thirty-five witnesses are to be questioned, it was stated today. Bunty disappeared from her home last Wednesday afternoon and her body was found, partially covered by an abandoned automobile door and rancid, in a dump not for from where she lived.

RUM RUNNER RAMMED, ONE OF CREW SHOT

Speedboat Throws Out Acid Smoke Screen After Warning

SAMPLES TAKEN

Crew Had Protection in Armored-Plated Cockpit

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 30 — One man was wounded critically by machine-gun fire and the 84-foot speedboat Frances was sunk in an encounter early today with Coast Guard patrol boats near Black Point in Long Island Sound.

Charles Foster of Greenport, N.Y., was wounded, and three companions were taken off the Frances, said a Coast Guard officials to be registered out of Newport, R.I., and owned by James Fay just before it sank.

The Coast Guard reported one of the patrol boats was rammed and its bow badly damaged by the Frances during a lively skirmish at 3 a.m. today.

Firing was resorted to, officials said, after the Frances responded to three warning shots across the bow by sending out a dense and acrid smoke screen.

For twenty minutes the speedboat and two Coast Guard boats with armed patrol boats in pursuit before it crashed full speed against one of the service craft.

Foster was brought to New London and admitted to a hospital. His companions, taken prisoners, said they were Edward Kluge, of Atlantic City, N.J.; Frank Lorney of Greenport, N.Y., and J. E. Bolvoin, of Atlantic City, N.J.

The Coast Guard said the crew of the Frances threw the machine gun over during the skirmish. The four men found in the cabin and cockpit behind the pilot house. Officials reported further protection was afforded the quartette by sacks of liquor piled eight deep and three high.

The number of service craft involved in the encounter was not reported.

The Frances, powered by four motors, was running without lights through a choppy sea when the first warning shot fired by the coast guard was fired across its bow.

The Frances struck the second craft hailed by the Coast Guard as a rum runner during the chase. Yesterday the Lucua, a two masted auxiliary fishing schooner, was seized and eight men arrested nine miles off the Southwest Ledge lightship. Coast Guard officers said the schooner carried between 800 to 1,000 cases of assorted liquor.

2,500 STORM TOOL WORKS

Men Hurl Missiles Thru Windows, Shots Fired

Detroit, Oct. 30 (CP)—All available police were ordered this morning to the plant at the Rosslin Tool and Die Corporation, where officials reported a mob of 2,500 men had stormed the plant, overturned automobiles parked nearby and hurled missiles through windows.

Police reserves were called after the mob violated the plant of the Rosslin Tool and Die Corporation, smashing 134 windows, but the men had aped on to the plant of Frederick A. Colman and Sons, where they circled the factory, then drove wedge as the patrolmen rushed to the plant.

Officials reported the men seized blueprints and drawings, took them into the streets and burned them.

Two men were arrested as they serve officers arrived, but they regrouped in a huge mass of men and drove rapidly away. Orders went out at once for the police to use their nightsticks in the case of another clash.

Ditch Digger of Hollywood May Become Another Musical Find

Hollywood, Oct. 30 (CP) — musical 21-year-old ditch digger, Albert George, who long ago developed the habit of singing while he worked, has found it was more than a pleasurable diversion.

For nearly a year George has been in the studio as a film extra. His lyric tenor voice has floated over many directors' shouts, few had stopped to listen until recently.

A member of the studio music department, Lou Gordon, chanced to hear George singing as he was digging a ditch in a corner of the lot.

Gordon concluded George had an excellent. If an undeveloped tenor voice.

So convinced is Gordon that he has a musical "find" that he will direct George free of charge for a year. Meantime the youth has been given a singing part in a film now in production.

Consecration of Nuptiality to Encourage Large Population

Rome, Oct. 30 (AP)—Seven hundred young couples from Rome and others from central provinces were married simultaneously this morning in celebration of a new Fascist rite, "the consecration of nuptiality", created by Premier Mussolini to encourage a large population.

The Rome couples first attended private ceremonies in their own parishes and then gathered at the Church of St. Mary of the Angels, where the Archbishop of Palica celebrated a special Mass and imparted a blessing.

The newlyweds, preceded by bands playing wedding marches, then marched, under a brilliant sun through streets crowded with women throwing confetti, to the Fascist' syndicalist organization headquarters.

The Fascist secretary, Achille Starace, presented each couple with a 500-lire (about $40) bank note as a gift of Il Duce. Many elderly mothers-in-law immediately appropriated the gift for safekeeping in a bank.

The couples were then served a buffet wedding breakfast.

Remembrance Day Will be Observed on Sunday at Church and Cenotaph

Two Minute Silence on Saturday Will Be Observed

ALL INVITED

Ceremony at Memorial to Follow That Used in London

Fifteen years ago, November 11, next, an Armistice was agreed upon that closed hostilities among the warring nations of the world, which eventually brought, with the signing of the Treaty of Versailles the following year, the termination of the Great War. The anniversary of that day is now known as Remembrance Day, in observance by British Commonwealth of Nations. Since it was declared a statutory public holiday by act of parliament, confusion and lack of uniformity in the observance of Remembrance Day has existed.

The problem is somewhat aggravated this year by reason of the fact that Remembrance Day falls on a Saturday. During those days and evenings of festivity and decreased turnover in business, particularly in retail business, merchants, not only in this city, but in all communities throughout the province, have come to regard that Saturday trade as the big thing of each week. They depend a great deal on that Saturday business to keep their stores running. In normal times this Saturday business, though of much consequence, would not be so an important factor as it is today. But with conditions as they are at present, retail merchants must take advantage of every possible hour of disposing of their goods.

War veterans and those who might wish to insist on the full day's holiday in observance of Remembrance Day, should do, or will understand and appreciate that merchants and business men do desire to honor the Day and all it represents, but they cannot afford to close up for the whole day. The most important day in their calendar. That the two minutes' silence will be observed throughout the business places of the city on Remembrance Day is assured and it is certain, hence of observance will be in that it is strictly enforced.

Belleville's Observance

Although delayed 36 hours in receiving the difficulties confronting the business men of this city in the present time, Belleville will suitable observe Remembrance Day on Saturday, November 11, with plans for that observance have been made. The attendance of the citizens in general is all that is required to make the 11th. Remembrance Day the equal of the great Armistice, memorable to the people of this city and surrounding or the community and district.

To Lieut.-Col. A. T. Ponton, V.D., officer commanding the Argyll Light Infantry, has fallen the duty and honor of commanding the parade of the event, and though only a preliminary meeting has been held given out, still the survey shows that Remembrance Day will be a success of a high order. Col. Geen has calling for a church parade of his battalion, and Major T. V. Wills, commanding the 34th Battery, though that unit is not undergoing active training, at present, and it will necessitate the opening of drives and issuing of numerous items, intends joining the Argyll Light Infantry in the church parade. Belleville will be alert to that a detachment from the R.C.A.F. will also be present. The unit returned men's organizations of the city, the Canadian Legion and the Army and Navy Veterans have been invited to co-operate and have given an assurance that their members will be out in force. The presidents of the 2nd, Battalion and the 34th Battalion Clubs of the city, with a combined membership of 150, have also assured the commanding officer of the Argylls of their loyal support in every possible way for the proper observance of the day. To the returned men in general in the city on Sunday, November 12th, offers an opportunity of joining with comrades as they have been unable to do for several years to pay due respect and honor to the memory of those of their comrades "Gone West". The parade will start at the Armouries and attend divine worship with the militia, but those not inclined to do so can join the later parade to the Belleville War Memorial. Col. Geen has invited Mayor Tice and the city council and civic officials to take part in the program of the day. The Sea Cadets and the Girl Guides will also be invited to participate in the day's celebration.

Following service at St. Thomas Church, a parade of all units with the veterans will move by the most set route to the Belleville War Memorial in Memorial Park, where the ceremony will be later and follow the same impressive form as that of Remembrance Day ceremonies at the Nation's Cenotaph in London, England. Lieut.-Col. Geen has delegated the chaplain of the local battalion, Major, the Rev. A. Beauchamp, Payne to take charge and arrange this service. It will permit of the placing of wreaths at the base of the monument not only by organizations, but by individual citizens who so desire to thus recognize the memory of the loved and honored ones who gave their all for freedom, right and justice. This part, of the ceremony will probably occupy more time than any other portion of it.

With the close of the ceremony in Memorial Park, the parade will move by way of Station, Front and Bridge Streets to the Armouries, where Col. W. N. Ponton, V.D., honorary lieutenant colonel of the regiment, if his health permits, will take the salute.

Asked to Co-operate

The clergymen of the city are asked to shorten or arrange their Sunday morning services, and civil members of their congregations to join in the observance at Memorial Park. Out of respect to the memory of many whose names at one time appeared on the membership rolls of churches of this city and who now rest immortal, by Belleville and respecting the "Rolls of Honor" hanging in each of Belleville's churches, the ministers of the city will, it is felt assured, do all they can to make the observance of Remembrance Day memorable.

It is understood that Friday afternoon preceding Remembrance Day will be marked by suitable exercises in the city schools. The principals and teachers in these institutions will point out to their scholars the significance of the day and what it stands for in the history of Canada, of the Empire, and the world in general.

With a worthy turnout of veterans of Belleville, and all co-operating, the 15th anniversary of Armistice Day will be observed fittingly and whole-hearted as it is safe to say it has not been for a number of years.

To returned men living in communities in the district where no celebration is to take place on that day, November 12th, an invitation is extended to join their fellow comrades in a body or individually in the fine observance of the anniversary of the signing of the Armistice on November 11th, 1918.

POLICE COURT

Activities proved rather quiet and uninteresting in and about local police circles over the week-end. Nothing resulting in news value sufficiently important to have appeared in Monday's police court charged with drunkenness but one pleaded guilty and the cases were enlarged twenty-four hours.

John E. Dale, Hilton, Ont., R.R. No. 6, reported to the police that he had sold a bag of potatoes to a local citizen, which proved to be local market trading. The purchaser gave their address as 242 Dundas W. of Mr. Dale, when delivering his disposed farm products, could locate no address on the premises. After reporting the mater to the police Mr. Dale, considers the matter he would be on next Saturday's market with the potatoes in the case of his potatoes would put in an appearance and claim their "spuds."

Nick Piccion, Station St., laid a complaint to the police regarding a neighbour assaulting his eight year old son. The complainant stated he his neighbour had thrown a stone and struck his son. The case will be heard in Tuesday morning's police court.

No motor accidents were reported to have happened in this vicinity over the week-end.

NEW JUDGE IS SWORN IN

J. A. McGibbon, K.C., M.C. Former Member of 21st Batt.

The county court room at Lindsay was filled to capacity with a distinguished gathering of Bench and Bar, church and citizenry, from all parts of the province, as His Honor Judge John Arthur McGibbon, K.C., M.C., late of Oshawa, took the oath of office as Judge of Victoria and Haliburton counties, Thursday afternoon last. The large number of distinguished visitors assembled showed the high esteem in which Judge McGibbon is held by all his associates and friends.

His Honor Judge Ruddy of Whitby, a personal friend of the new Judge, presided, and assisted by His Honor Judge L. V. O'Connor of Cobourg, as the proclamation of office was read by County Attorney J. E. Anderson, K.C. Judge McGibbon was then sworn in by Judge's partner and taking his stand before the dias read and took the solemn oath of office. Deeply affected, he assumed the position of Deputy Judge of the Court, sitting between Judges Ruddy and O'Connor.

The retirement of J. A. McGibbon, K.C., M.C., is of particular interest throughout the city of this city as successor to the late Judge R. D. Preston, and in the elevation of a counsellor it is of particular interest to former members of the 21st Battalion (C.E.F.) as Mr. McGibbon served in France with that unit as sub-altern during the latter years when he was known as a most efficient officer. Prior to with the 21st he was awarded a Military Cross for outstanding devotion to duty while attached to that unit from that infantry battalion on June 8, 1918, to the 2nd Canadian Tank Battalion, and later Battalion, and finished his war experiences in command of that composite unit.

The late Judge Ponton was a member of the 2nd Battalion (C.E.F.) and his successor to the battalion command of the 39th Battalion (C.E.F.). Both these Eastern Ontario battalions had a distinguished record (the sixth) in England, and officers and men from this city and district fighting forces probably transferred more than those of any other two Canadian units on the Western Front.

It seems peculiarly fitting that on the demise of a judge who served with the 39th Battalion, Belleville should have a member of the Second Canadian Division to fill the vacant his place and one from a comradely battalion so closely associated with Belleville.

To His Honor Judge John Arthur McGibbon, K.C., M.C., of Victoria and Haliburton counties, is extended the hearty well wishes of his fellow comrades-in-arms of Belleville and district, all of whom are sincerely trusted by them that he will live long to grace the high place to which the administration of justice to which he was elevated Friday last.

LADY BOWLERS ENTERTAINED

In closing their club house for the season members of the Belleville Lady Bowling Club were regaled in it. Tuesday evening of last week when the male portion of the membership entertained the ladies of the club at a Hallowe'en party. Terms of a jolly pre-Hallowe'en party and a committee, headed by Mrs. Harry Bowen, W. Rulman and the rooms resplendent with autumnal tints and appropriate Hallowe'en characters.

Members arriving through their costumes were delighted to find the club house so comfortably heated by the intermittent on and off of the electric lights caused by the failure of the hydro to keep interfered with the jollity and enjoyment of the night.

Mr. Joe Delaney, who lives in the vicinity of the bowling greens provided electric heater which he was found the clubhouse equipment was insufficient to warm the immediate verandah, and also furnished the candles to restore the necessary illumination. The lighting of his fellow club members go to Mr. Delaney for his thoughtfulness and prompt action.

Bridge and euchre were the conveyances of entertainment and the games were enjoyed with keen interest. Mrs. Harry Bowen and Mr. C. F. Lent won at bridge, and Mrs. Dave Bowen and Mr. L. B. Scott captured the euchre awards.

A delightful supper served at the close of the games by several of the younger male members of the club arranged as a surprise, and an hour of merriment ensued as the new waiters served the delicacies which took after the wants of the older members of their sympathetic ministrations.

The affair was thoroughly enjoyable and the lady bowlers acknowledge in this manner the men start to entertain, they entertain most successfully.

TABERNACLE UNITED CHURCH OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY

I. B. Naylor, Pastor, Delivers Two Inspiring Messages

Sunday, the Tabernacle United Church celebrated the anniversary of the founding of its congregation which goes back to the early days before this city was incorporated as a village. The Rev. I. B. Naylor, who came as pastor of the church late in the summer from the west as successor to the Rev. A. E. McCutcheon, preached both morning and evening to large congregations. The spiritual significance of the administrations of the Tabernacle Church to succeeding generations of residents of this city since its establishment was alluded to in Mr. Naylor's morning remarks. Faithfully and well the Tabernacle church has lent its aid through the social advancement and religious welfare of this community. Particularly will its service be remembered by the former scholars of old Albert College who Sunday after Sunday for many years attended divine worship there during their term of study since its original institution of learning which still stands on College Hill was a blessing for the ministry in the Methodist church found inspiration and assistative in the Sunday admonitions and exhortations of the preachers who eloquently set forth the gospel message and explained God's teachings and Christ's example from the pulpit of the old Tabernacle Church.

Special music for the day was arranged by Mrs. Morley Daff, organist, and Mr. Harry Mooney, choir leader. Two anthems finely rendered during the morning service, "Spotless Innocence" from Verdi's "Aida," and "Oh How Amiable" by Faning, in the evening Macfarlane's "Open Our Eyes" was magnificently sung by the choir; Mrs. I. Horton Brown sang the solo, "I Will Praise Thee O God" at the time of the offertory, and a solo cet composed of Messrs. A. Sullman, A. Evans, G. Daff, A. Sawyer, T. Coldclough, H. Colclough, F. Burks and H. Moorman, perform in the evening hymn, rendered most harmoniously "True-Hearted, Whole-Hearted" by Stebbins.

Services Inspirational.

The services throughout the day were inspirational and of a true anniversary character. Mr. Naylor found his new congregation true to the old traditions of the church and seemed in his remarks to sense their loyalty to him as congregations in the past had shown their loyalty to his predecessors.

Briefly Mr. Naylor's remarks follow:

Morning Theme.

Text—Exodus, 33:4, "And look that thou make them after their pattern which was showed thee in the Mount."

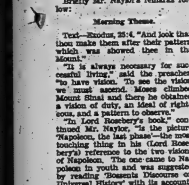
"It is always necessary for successful living," said the preacher "to have vision. To see the vision we must ascend. Moses climbed Mount Sinai and there he obtained a vision of duty, an ideal of righteous, and a pattern to observe."

"In Lord Bryce's book" continued Mr. Naylor, "is the picture "Napoleon, the last phase—the most touching thing in his (Lord Macberry's) reference to the two visions of Napoleon. The one came to Napoleon in youth and was suggested by reading Bossuets Discourse on Universal History' with its accounts of Alexander and Caesar, their victories and empires. When Napoleon read he saw his vision, a vision of earthly glory. "I too will become a conqueror," he said, "and perhaps an emperor." His becoming both. The vision of world empire was realized. There came another vision later.

"Napoleon at Malmaison, a prisoner, was being taken to his future home, on H.M.S. "Bellerophon", the man on watch were startled to see the Emperor on deck. Looking about he said, "is that really the earth? They told him it was and he realized he was getting his last view of France. He sat down and watched the receding coast. From seven o'clock till noon he did not move and no one dared disturb him. He was watching the dissipation of his boyhood vision. All his glories lay behind that retreating coast and when at last he arose and descended into the cabin, his face was hard and white and set, as a man whose heart was dead within him. So all the glories of the world will pass away and man must enter into eternity naked and alone. But the visions of God and of love abide."

At Evening Worship.

Mr. Naylor found the theme of his evening discourse in the 21st chapter of Isaiah, verses 11 and 12, "Watchman what of the night"—and divided his subject under three headings, as the watchman on the battlements and ramparts of the city replying to the anxious inquiries of those besieged. And those inquiries were replied to as the preacher planned the watchman as a oracle. First, "in the dead of night", the nation in a perilous condition, everyone anxious for the morrow. The assurance that day has come and last forever. There was a continuous revival in the world in spiritual and material things. Christ set out Mr. Naylor and the incoming tide of God's redemptive purposes were progressively going forward even in the dark hours of adversity.



Secondly, "the night is not passed". No shadowed optimism attended the strivings of those seeking for the ultimate good of mankind—their fellow beings. Men were not right in politics, in society, in religion but mostly in ourselves as the present day. The judge on the bench, the preacher in his office, the preacher in his pulpit, know intimately of this. The world today was full of problems but the greatest problem was within ourselves, and rectifying our lives with God's guidance was the basis for the spiritual and material hope of what the preacher pictured in the third phase of his theme, the message of the oracle, "the dawn is coming."

"To hang on with the assured confidence that the night will not last forever" was the culmination of hope brought before his congregation by Mr. Naylor Sunday night. Religion had even been a message of unconquerable hope by humanity. The present general dissatisfaction with conditions as they are, the deep unrest, the searching of the ways and means to rectify untoward conditions was not a spiritual instinct but a hopeful sign. There was a longing for the passing of the night and endeavor, true and steadfast to understand and work out problems that would eventuate in the passing of the night and the coming of the great dawn for humanity.

CORNER STONE DULY LAID

W. J. Hume, President of Distillery Present at Peoria, Ill.

A week ago Sunday afternoon last, with due ceremony the corner stone of the new Hiram-Walker & Sons Distillery at Peoria, Ill., was laid. Representative John J. O'Connor of New York City performed the ceremony and made the principal address of the afternoon. In attendance on the occasion were W. J. Hume, President, of the distillery and Mrs. Hume, H. C. Hatch, Chairman of the distillery board, Mrs. Hatch and Miss Hatch.

Though the afternoon was one of rain and storm the "Peoria Journal Transcript" managed to obtain some excellent photos of the event and published seven of these in their Sunday edition next day. Featured prominently in these is the smiling countenance of a man of whom this city is no stranger, W. J. Hume and with him is seen Harry Hatch and W. J. Hatch Jr. The carillon is being made by the 16th district of Illinois and associated with Mr. Hume and Mr. Hatch in the new Peoria enterprise.

Saturday evening also marked another step forward in the history of the Illinois city, when the reconditioned Jefferson Hotel of Peoria was officially opened with a banquet at which 450 guests were present. Host to one of the owners of this house, and the two evenings following, October 21st, were arranged to coincide.

It is most gratifying to Mr. and Mrs. Hume's friends here to learn that the Peoria project is making such rapid strides toward realization, and it is hopefully trusted W. J. Hume's hopes in this new city will be a success and his sagacity and boldness foresight vindicated.

ZION W. M. S.

The October meeting and dinner of the Zion W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. H. Casey.

A very nice dinner had been supplied and a splendid crowd sat down and did full justice to the good things.

After dinner was over and a social chat, the president, Mrs. Casey, called the ladies together and a short program was given, opening with the Hymn 190, "My Hope is Built on Nothing Less" and prayer by Mrs. Demyes and Mrs. Ketcheson. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. J. Sheffield, taken from Rod. John. The minutes were read and agreed. An invitation was extended to the W.M.S. from Fuller to attend their open meeting, and it was moved and seconded that same be accepted. The treasurer reported. Mrs. Demyes then favored with an instrumental solo which was much enjoyed. Remarks from the Peace Secretary followed, and the Study Book was taken by Miss Olive Sherlock. Mrs. Yurtz in her able manner gave a full report of the study held at Mount Pisgah, bringing home to each one the very best thoughts along missionary lines. Following Hymn 343, Mrs. Wilson of Hallaway and Mrs. Brough, Sr., of Fuller, each contributed a reading how glad they were to visit the W.M.S. The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Casey.

RAILWAY WAGE DISPUTE ENDS

Running Trades, Roads Compromise with 5 Per Cent Cut

Montreal, Oct. 30.—(CP)—Splitting their differences on a 10 per cent. cut, but when it was extended beyond the beginning of 1933 and when on May 1 and additional 10 per cent. reduction was made, they protested vigorously.

Heads of the five running trade unions were called into hurried conference and after canvassing the feeling among the men it was decided to take a strike vote.

A September announcement was made the members of the running trades, said in number between 30, 000 and 32,000 men, had placed in the hands of their leaders power to call a strike.

With the possibility of 35,000 miles of railway tracks being tied up, Premer R. B. Bennett interested, after meeting both sides of the case, he recommended further discussion between his disputants. Behind closed doors representatives of the railroads and the men sought to mediate their differences, but it was only after further conference with the Prime Minister that an agreement was reached.

The agreement affects the engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen and telegraphers. In the meantime parallel disputes between the railways and their clerks and freight handlers are being dealt with by conciliation boards.

J. D. Ward, general union chairman, explained the agreement ends all matters of difference with the running trades and none of the amounts deducted from pay checques up to November 1, will be returned to the men.

Great Artists are knocking at your door! Does your radio let them in?

To families who own a radio:

You say, "Of course my radio brings me the music of the great artists."

But does it? You may be getting what seem to you very fair results and yet measured by present-day standards, they may be exceedingly poor.

You will realize the difference instantly. Once you actually tune a modern radio you will thrill to the click, click, click of one station after another, barely a hair's breadth apart on the dial, yet each as sharp, clear and distinct as if cut with a knife!

Does your radio get such results? Has it automatic volume control to minimize "fading" of stations, tone control to give you exactly the shade of music desired? Is its appearance such that you can honestly say you are proud to have it in your home?

Your radio dealer would like to demonstrate an up-to-date set to you. He believes that after reading these challenging claims you will want to be shown. He invites you to find out for yourself, without obligation, what you are missing by not having a modern radio.

To families without a radio:

Maybe you have been putting off the purchase of that radio for no good reason at all.

Here's a very good reason for deciding to get a modern set for your home at once:

Canada's "Radio Celebration" will take place November 4-11. Fine broadcasting will be at its peak in commemoration of ten years of radio progress. You will want to share in the festival of brilliant entertainment on the air!

Every radio merchant is dedicating his facilities during Canada's "Radio Celebration" to spread the news of Radio's great achievements. Every one of them is ready for the thousands of new buyers, with displays of very latest models.

Call your nearest dealer and arrange for a demonstration. There is no obligation and if you have never given serious consideration to the matter of a radio for your home, you will marvel at the perfection of the latest models. You will wonder how you ever did without one. Remember this—no other medium of home entertainment in the world's history has ever offered so much in the way of entertainment, culture, education and broadening influence as a modern radio. Act today!

Ask your dealer for pamphlets with wonderful radio programs for November 4 to 11 and watch newspapers for last minute radio program news.

If your radio is 6 years old—
it lacks a Dynamic Speaker

If your radio is 5 years old—
it lacks "Screen-Grid"

If your radio is 4 years old—
it lacks Automatic Volume Control

If your radio is 3 years old—
it lacks Tone Control

If your radio is 2 years old—
it is not a modern Superheterodyne

HEN PHEASANT BREAKS NECK HITTING WINDOW

Became Lost After Flying Into City

Saturday morning last a hen pheasant paid a visit to this city on market day, with fatal results to its own career. The bird flew into the frame of a downstairs window at the residence of Mr. George Stewart, 77 Highland Ave., and broke its neck. Bob Aman, who lives with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, heard the crash and commotion, and on investigation found the recently departed pheasant about eight feet from where it had struck a much harder substance than itself.

SLIGHT DAMAGE IN HOUSE FIRE

Fire broke out in the residence of Phillip Clover, 2nd concession of Sidney about 11 o'clock Saturday morning. The prompt work of Roy Thrasher with a fire extinguisher quickly put out the blaze. The damage done was slight.

HALLOWE'EN

On Tuesday night Hallowe'en, childhood and youth will be most romantic. The observance is one that in spite of the destruction caused by science and knowledge of traditions and myths is always honored because it is the time of the imagination. There is no time of the year when this result is so marked as it is at this time.

Beginning long before and before the festival of All Hallows' or All Saints' Day the occasion gathered to itself a vast folklore and tradition and became the Hallowe'en of generations ago. Though at present Hallowe'en is not adding to itself for, this is an age of debunking, and though even children do not accept as truth all the things that are told of the magic propensications of these hours, it fills a long felt need for exhilaration of the imagination and fancy of childhood and youth and so it clings.

That it will continue for ages looks reasonable unless there should be some social cataclysm which like the Soviet Revolution would try to wipe out religion, folklore, tradition, imagination, and fancy —a most unlikely development.

The spell of fancy that centuries of boys and girls and young men and women gave themselves to belief in the strange powers of this brief time of the night of All Saints' Day. Poets are the epitome of ages and of traditions as well as of the whole range of human emotions of life, childhood, youth, manhood and womanhood and age and who study the mental and psychological, have revelled in the folklore, for they have been able to create unsurpriseable poetry while centring about this vigil, among them Burns and Keats, the former in his "Hallowe'en" and the latter in "Eve of St. Agnes."

Burns says of the celebrations in Scotland:

"Wi' merry sangs, and friendly cracks,
I wat they didna weary;
And unco tales, and funny jokes,
Their sports were cheap and cheery;
Till butter'd sow'ns, wi' fragrant lunt,
Set a' their gabs a steerin';
Syne, wi' a social glass o' strunt,
They parted aff careerin'
Fu' blythe that night."

This poem is a treasury in brief of traditions of old Scotland developed about that night.

INDIAN SUMMER

With winter's rude hand thrust in upon the peaceful autumn and with chilly weather succeeding the downfall interment has been avoided as autumn's last sign, Indian Summer. Almost every person believes that there is in every autumn an occurrence which has come to be called by this name. England and Europe have St. Martin's summer, about the eleventh of November, and there is also St. Luke's "little summer" about the eighteenth of October. Poets mention "Allhallown summer" and on the continent of Europe there are traditions of a dozen or more autumnal summers.

So far there has rarely failed to be an Indian Summer, though sometimes there has been a difference in during just when it is. It may be very brief or it may last for a period. Since says there is nothing peculiar in this great the explanation is that the temperature curve is never smooth, varying up and down. It has tried to crush the idea that Indian summer is a definitely recurrent event, proving the contention by statistics.

That may well be. But to look for Indian summer and then unravel in the delightful hazy days of this warm spell when there seems almost a revival of the life of the earlier year, a pale reflex of the true summer, of course, but in the changed autumnal mood of the people, really meaning a great deal, is very human and enjoyable.

So today people are looking for the annual coming of Indian Summer. Science says man may be deceived as it does not necessarily come but he keeps waiting and looking for it and if fine days come he calls them Indian Summer and so far as humanity is concerned it is Indian Summer. It is interesting that man has had a whole summer but he wants a last look of what looks like a returned summer. How delightfully human is this belief though science denies its place as a certainty.

A CITY TOUCHED

A little child's untimely death in a dump in Toronto attracted fifteen thousand persons, who passed the casket on Saturday and Sunday before the burial of "Bunty" Hilliker. The story of the probe of the yet unexplained associations in connection with the death has aroused the keenest interest in view of the fact that the investigators have had to deal with children to obtain a clear story from whom is one of their greatest problems for it is known that children's stories are not always to be believed for they live in a world of imagination and fancy as well as in the real world or to put this another way they have not quite settled down into a humdrum existence as to believe life mainly materialistic as so many adults do.

While curiosity could not fail to be aroused, in this cause there is the deepest sympathy—a sure proof that the chief interest in life is human life. Mankind's natural sympathy is for the young and helpless—that is why men and women enjoying the fullest health and strength will in a moment give up their lives, limbs, or health to aid or save a defenceless child.

For every one of the thousands who passed the casket, there are many who also feel the deepest sympathy. The incident touches every family in a city like Toronto for every family is a home and in most of them are children. No wonder it is that the city is shocked and bowed in sorrow.

CALLERS

"Callers?" she questioned with a stare,
Sniffing with scorn our country air.

"But, yes, indeed," responded we,
"This very day there have been three."

Callers, forsooth, and someone smiled
To think what magic had beguiled

That most astonished portly toad
Who left his greenly dank abode

To leap a dozen steps and more
And land exhausted at our door.

Again, more venturous, a wren
Fluttered across the room, and then

A mouse ran up the window sill
For scattered crumbs, and ate her fill.

"No callers," did the lady say,
And all the three had called this day.

RADIO PROGRAMS from morning 'til night, and far into the night at times, seems a bit too much for the good of radio. Too much radio may be worse than not enough, and already some folks are complaining of being radio fed up. Seems as if a couple of hours in the afternoon and the same at night would fill all ordinary needs of radio broadcasting, with extensions when required for something extra special.

ANTICIPATORY SHIVERS are rippling along the backbone of folks who take an interest in weather forecasting. Local weather prophets thus far heard from, seem to think that the weather this winter will be mild, but a blast comes from Ottawa that the weather office of this has place predicting a long, cold winter—B-R-R-R. Here's the Guide's contribution to the prognostication volume—wait it and weep, unless you are a cold sleber.

"Get out your snow shovels and fill the bins with coal, for this is going to be a great old-fashioned winter. Early winter, according to old settlers around here, who have been watching the animals and find that the groundhogs are carrying apples to their dugouts and also laying in a supply of vegetables. Raccoons are also busy putting in a good supply of winter eats. Corn parties are also being visited by animals and the corn put away for the cold, blustery days of winter. To clinch the matter the old settlers say that the squirrels are developing their winter fur coats early a sure sign of an early and long winter."

INSANE FROM HAZING is the charge in a suit for $200,000 damages made the University of Alberta, laid by the father of a lad who is alleged to have lost his reason by reason of treatment meted out to him as a freshman by sophomores of the college. It is alleged that the boy was not a willing victim to the college initiation rites and was used rather roughly in consequence.

LINDBERGH MAY BE MISSING, but he is seldom if ever lost, and folks who felt nervous when the press despatches stated that the flying Lindbergh had not been heard from in twelve hours since taking off in Scotland, were later relieved with the news that the Lindberghs had landed in France. Having landed in France once before Lindbergh knew something of the emotional energy of the French people and did not feel like undergoing another such reception, kindly though it might be—and so he flew from Scotland and landed in France without any advance notices of his coming.

Mrs. Goldman had engaged a new maid. She was a good girl, truthful, but she lacked tact. One evening when her mistress was going to the theatre, the maid noticed that a favorite rope of pearls was missing.

"Oh, madam," she cried "where are your lovely pearls tonight?"

"I'm not wearing them tonight," was the reply.

"What a pity, madam," exclaimed the maid. "An' they make you look so like a real lady."

GOLD RUSHES RESULT OF PRICE RISE

Reviving the gold fever of '49, men and women escape to running for the precious metal as a new "Eldorado" near Denver.

The recent rise in the price of gold, brought about by action on the part of President Roosevelt as part of the National Recovery Act of the United States, has stirred gold miners, prospectors, and panners to redoubled efforts. Thousands of jobless in both the United States and Canada are feverishly resurrecting old mines in the hope that they will yield at least some small return for their work. The new gold program in the United States is in the hands of E. A. Goldenweiser of the U.S. treasury department, a foremost authority on gold, and Jesse H. H. M. Robbins Sentenced Later For Being Drunk in Charge of Car

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 30 (CP)—Harly M. Robbins, former Deputy Minister of Hospitals for Ontario, pleaded guilty before Magistrate J. R. Blake today of driving a car while intoxicated. Sentence was deferred until all charges against Robbins had been heard.

A criminal negligence charge against Robbins was referred to the Court of Appeal, when C. W. Bell, K.C., counsel for Robbins, entered a plea of autre fois acquit, claiming that as a charge of criminal negligence against the former government official has been dismissed it should not be heard again.

Two of the charges against Robbins arose from an auto accident on Mount Pleasant Road here two months ago. Another, that of being intoxicated in charge of a car, was originally laid at Paris and later transferred to Brantford. Mr. Bell asked that the Paris charge be tried first.

Robbins elected to be tried before Magistrate Blake. He pleaded guilty on the advice of Mr. Bell.

"Tell his Worship that you plead guilty," counsel said to Robbins.

"Mr. Robbins," the magistrate the court under circumstances that perhaps are most unfortunate in the case of one who transgresses the law," said Mr. Bell. "His position is a sad one. He has resigned from the position which he held. His life is a ruin. His future is a very bad one. I am asking that it's dealing with his case the utmost clemency will be extended to him."

STOMACH OF INFANT LIKE A CYLINDER

Stomach Capacity at Birth Only One And Fifth Ounce

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Nutrition

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A child's stomach at birth is neither as large as an adult's nor does it have the same shape.

LOUIS E. BISCH

It is only one and five-tenths of an ounce in capacity, a trifling amount, but only slowly. Not until the child is six weeks old does that amount to another ounce. At twelve weeks the stomach will hold two and a half ounces. At twelve months the capacity has risen to nine ounces.

Milk is, of course, the sole diet of the new-born. After being swallowed the milk remains but a short time in the stomach. Within a slight digestion of the protein elements of the milk. The latter part of this is about all.

The milk coagulates in the stomach due to a ferment found in the stomach. This ferment, rennin, is secreted by tiny glands in the walls of the stomach.

Coagulation of milk is a necessary first step for its later digestion. Cow's milk coagulates in much firmer mass than does mother's milk, and the curds are much more flaky and hence can be acted upon more readily by the intestinal digestive juices.

During the first month a child's stomach is nearly emptied completely within an hour or an hour and a half after feeding. This goes on to eight months of age the stomach is emptied in about three hours if breast milk has been taken, and in two and a half to three hours in the case of cow's milk.

Whereas the grown person's intestinal tract is over twenty feet long, as it normally measures approximately only nine feet. Here the so-called pancreatic juice and upon the three essential elements of the food namely the proteins, the carbohydrates and the fats. The protein digestion, started in the stomach, is completed in the intestines.

Bile is most important in the digestion of babies. This explains why fats are not digested to a relatively of large size.

Absorption of nutritive elements takes place from the stomach as well as from the intestines. From the former, sugar, salts and peptones are absorbed into the blood stream from the latter, these same elements, together with digested fats, go into the lymph.

Bacteria of several varieties are found in the intestines of infants. Some are supposed to aid digestion by neutralizing the putrefactive products of food. Other bacteria, on the other hand, may make the child sick. This is accompanied by Mr. Harry Burdett who is attending the same institution.

Messrs. O. W. Shepherd, J. W. Carter and Lewis Brown of Plainfield have gone to seek their fortunes in Michigan.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfast and ma said to pop. What about supper this evening, Willyum?

I'm in favor of it, pop said, and ma said, I mean what shall we have.

Liver and onions pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum that's so childish it would be absurd to asset it. We've had so much liver the passed 2 weeks I'm ashamed to look the butcher in the face, she said.

I sippose you mean the liver, pop said, and ma said, We'll have nice tiny slakes for a change, with a good sieer. And how about vegetables? she said.

French fry potatoes form a gentlic harmony with slaks, pop said, and ma said, I wouldn't dare ask Norn to fry anything in this hot weather. We had mash potatoes and lastics lately we'll have them mashed. Can you think of any other vegetable? she said.

I can think of corn on the cob, pop said, and ma said, But that's so heating, sarcastic like, and have some nice refreshing peas, she said.

By all means, and now what would you say if we didn't eat home but went to the Bijou and instead and took in the show at the Majestoom afterwards? pop said, and ma said, O Willyum I'd say perfeck.

Then does it say it because we're going to eat rite here and we're going to spend a nice quiet evening at home afterwards, pop said, This is a good game, now its my turn he said.

The result being a compermise of corn on the cob and going around to the Narcisaus after supper.

VICTIM BORN IN P.E. COUNTY

Hunter Lyle W. Bongard Native of Town of Picton

Toronto, Oct. 30—Lost in the woods at Tracyville, near Fredericton, N.B., for three days, Lyle W. Bongard, formerly of Toronto, son of Captain and Mrs. S. A. Bongard, of 115 Beadonnell Avenue, was found dead from exposure a mile and a half from camp. His parents left this morning to attend the funeral.

With two companions, Lyle Bongard went hunting on Tuesday. They only intended to spend a few hours in the woods. The other two turned back after a short time; and Bongard went on alone. That was the last time he was seen alive. When found his shotgun, with one undischarged cartridge, was clutched in his hands.

He was alone in the woods on Tuesday night when one of the season's worst wind and rain storms swept the province, and it is believed that he was overcome in fighting the storm.

The search began in earnest on Wednesday when Bongard failed to show up. A Hundred and twenty-five men, residents of the Sunbury County area and Fredericton, members of Royal Canadian Mounted Police from Fredericton, fellow-members of the Fredericton Gyro Club and an airplane assisted in the search.

The body was discovered by Watson Janser, of South Devon, N.B., and Constable George Thom, of the R.C.M.P. Bongard's feet were resting in a pool from Three-Tree Creek.

Mr. Bongard was born in Picton, and received his early education there. A violinist of note, he received his musical training from the late Luigi von Kunits, famous leader of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. He left Toronto about ten years ago going to Fredericton to secure work. While there he married Miss Elizabeth Macdonald. He is survived by one sister also.

His father, Captain S. A. Bongard, is well known in marine circles. He is the captain of the Canada Steamship Line steamer Toronto, and has been sailing the Great Lakes all his life. He was skipper of the Corona for several years.

Mr. Bongard's wife and a seven-year-old son survive.

FORMER FRENCH PREMIER DIES

Paul Painleve Succumbs Sunday After Heart Attack

Paris, Oct. 30 (AP)—Paul Prudent Painleve, one of France's wartime premiers, and minister of aviation in the Herriot cabinet, died suddenly on Sunday following a heart attack. He will be given a national funeral Nov. 4th, and probably will be buried in the Pantheon, among France's illustrious dead.

A sudden heart attack, a recurrence of the affliction which had troubled him several years and which caused him to abandon political life, caused his death.

Throughout his life Painleve, the son of a baker, was engaged in public affairs. He was Premier of France in 1917, in the final months of the Great War and in 1924 raised by a narrow margin election to the presidency of France, which he again was made premier.

In addition to his noted political work, M. Painleve won distinction as a scientist and a staunch promoter of aviation. He was minister of aviation in the last Herriot cabinet, when his fatal illness made itself felt.

Acted as War Minister

Painleve was minister of war at a most critical stage in the Great War. He was transferred to the War Department when M. Ribot succeeded Aristide Briand as premier in 1917. At that time Russia was crumbling and the people of France were demanding greater activity from their army.

Painleve defied the demands by balking French attacks along the Western front and inaugurating the policy of "waiting for the Americans." He was outspoken in his desire to wait reinforcements before pressing the French attack. Only a few weeks the Ribot cabinet had fallen, he himself had been made premier, and he in turn fell.

In 1925, however, he returned to power as the parent of a coalition government which included him president of the chamber of deputies. The following year he was made premier again.

As a student of aviation, he was Wilbur Wright's first passenger in France in 1908. He studied the plans and hopes of the air pioneer and as an early enthusiast, obtained the first parliamentary credit for building up the French air force.

A doctor of mathematics and winner of institute prizes for works on scientific subjects, M. Painleve was the first French interpreter of Prof. Albert Einstein.

TRENTON LABOR CONDITIONS DEBATED AT MASS MEETING

Over 300 Hear Address By Toronto Speakers

Trenton, Oct. 30 (Special)—At a mass meeting in the Orange Hall, Trenton, about three hundred workers employed and unemployed, many of whom are ratepayers and business men of the town, had the pleasure of listening to what was probably the most successful labor meeting ever held in Trenton.

Rev. Mr. Ross, retired preacher, and one of the most highly respected citizens of the community entertained labor debate with J. P. Mills, Long Branch, and K. G. Humphreys of the Halton-Peel-Dufferin-York Counties and Ontario Workers' Federation regarding systems, barbarianism, feudalism, serfdom down to the present day capitalism and a battle royal with the like of which we are worth going a long way to hear. The reverend gentleman had delved into the hearts of the workers by his humorous remarks straight forwardness as to their day to day conditions and ended his speech by telling the audience how glad he was to see them organize, that in reality we are all workers regardless of creed, you be clergy, lawyer, doctor or labourer, Mr. Humphreys' flow of speech lasted over ninety minutes was one which held the audience spell-bound. His chaste vocabulary coupled with a complete knowledge of philosophy pertaining to the subject made it really a discourse which not only amazed but delighted the workers besides enlightening the discreet but a challenge to the most severe critic.

Friend Hitler

He opened with remarks regarding private profit and reference to the problem of production. Describing the Russian Soviet, how slavery had changed from Roman system to feudal system, he enlightened his hearers on the Cromwell revolution, then French serfdom to Bismarck more lately system which died in 1917 when the Czar was abolished until present system of consumption and production, according to statistics. Mr. Harry Cory of the local town council enlivened the meeting with his debates regarding conclusions. Harry made many friends with his straight-forward remarks and outspoken answers. His courage and calmness under attack certainly won the sympathy of the workers, some of whom, although there were not Harry Cory's in the Trenton town council, but organizers of the workers in Trenton's ill is hoped will improve working conditions and better the present existence of $4.00 per day which relief men are getting. On this amount the highest paid relief workers with families of 10 and 12 who are only allowed three days of $3.75 per week are expected to furnish food, clothes, heat, light, rent, water, etc. This, we believe, is the lowest relief schedule in Ontario.

A gala crowd attended the masquerade ball given by the school on Friday night. The auditorium was fittingly decorated in the Hallowe'en spirit with devils, witches, skeletons, bats, black cats, and numerous other Hallowe'en symbols. The hallway was covered in pale green on which were large spider webs. Many fine costumes were large spider webs.

Many fine costumes were worn by the guests. Mrs. Ed. Riddick and Mrs. H. Weller, Pee the youngsters who didn't dance some participated in the pupils' room run by Jack Richmond, Walter Richmond and Ralph Kilmaster, was well accepted; the room of horrors by Ernest Wright, and a fortune-telling booth conducted by Helen Couch, also had good patronage.

"Yelling" at Child Sets a Poor Example

(By Constance Cameron)

Early this morning I was awakened by the continued and lusty cries and screams of a baby that lives next door. The mere fact of a baby crying is nothing to get excited about, of course, but what certainly did rile me was the fact that its mother was trying to outscream her ten-months-old infant.

"You WILL do as I order—then a couple of times. "You just haven't any sense at all."

What did she expect, at 10 months? And of course, the more the mother screamed and scolded the louder the baby yelled.

Whatever it was that mother wanted her baby to do, she certainly defeated her own purpose by her insanely violent yelling into the sensitive ears of the wee little mite. After a short time the baby very plainly was getting hysterical—emotionally. Frightened and cruelly smited, it became a physical impossibility for the baby to stop screaming. But the mother, herself still in a rage, simply childishly shouted more and more in any way teaching or guiding her little one, but plainly fighting any will in him!

A Futile Procedure

Finally, the baby, having exhausted himself, was asleep; but when he awakened, I'll bet a dollar to a dime he had stepped him into another cry-mother wasn't contented until she had got him.

This one incident wouldn't be worth writing about. One or every day we write about it, but unfortunately I have heard and seen such things before. And, of course, my ire is nothing as outsider can do about it.

My only hope is that perhaps some other mothers, who have tried to control infants under the mistaken impression that a loud voice will have the desired effect, will pause and consider how utterly futile such procedure is sure to be.

Getting "Mad" at the Child

It is useless of declaiming opinions should thunder in at my window—for I sit here writing. So you think that would help me to concentrate on what I am doing? Even if the notes were instigated by people who love children and hope to blame me into speedier or more effective action in writing on their behalf, would the deafening uproar make me think more clearly on child welfare? No, it would focus my attention on just one itself.

To get "mad" at a child, and then send it off in a fit is to refuse a childish lack of emotional control. And the mother who does this, at the moment is no older than the child in her emotions, is certainly in no condition to control, or teach, or guide or discipline the child.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)

Announcing the Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to be married next month and I would like to be certain about the correctness of several details.

1. When addressing an invitation to an elderly woman whose husband has been dead for many years, is she to write: form: Mrs. Elias E. Knight, or Mrs. Ann Knight South"?

2. When addressing an invitation to a family where there are several grown children (but one invitation to be sent), is the use of "and family" absolutely incorrect?

3. I am having a party soon to announce my wedding date. When a formal announcement is given in the papers, must my mother be the one who makes it, or may I be making such an announcement, should the full middle names be used or is their use optional?

4. Where should the groom be seated at the bridal table—at the foot of the table or next to the bride?

T.

1. A widow should be addressed by her same formal name that she used when her husband was living ....unless you are absolutely sure that she prefers another form: Thus is, the envelope is addressed to: Mrs. John Knight.

2. Yes, the use of the phrase "and family" is an incorrect, and incorrect. If you have to use on invitation, address it

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wells
The Misses Wells
The Messrs. Wells
Ten Eyck Place
Haven

3. This announcement of your engagement, in the newspapers, should be made by your mother or father, or by your mother, if your father is dead.

In making an announcement of this kind, it is better form not to use abbreviations. So either use the full middle name, or omit it entirely. It is perfectly correct to omit it if you wish to.

4. At the bridal table the bride and groom sit at the head of the table, side by side, the bride on the right of the groom.

Christmas Presents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a question that may seem a little early in the season, but it is on my mind and I would appreciate it if you will answer me at once. It is in regard to Christmas presents. I am working for a very nice couple and takes care of their little boy. They have been very intimate and they treat me as one of their own. They are constantly giving me presents plus me my wages and are more like my family than my employers. This is my question:

Should I at Christmas time give little boy a present, and if so, what thought of getting a very nice card with a friendly message inscribed in them. Or should I give them each a present? I go home nights and will probably not be back for Christmas Eve. I am positive they will not remember me.

They are young and wealthy and I cannot afford anything expensive. Do you suggestions?

It would be a delightful plan for you to give the boy an appropriate Christmas present and he would love the fact that you thought of him at this time.

Then I suggest that you send a box of flowers to the mother of the home, plus a card so that the flowers will arrive on Christmas morning. Enough said, you can send the flowers to the woman-of-the-home, and send her a card which would have a greeting for both husband and wife.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Advice to the Lovelorn

Everyone Cans But One She Wanted

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Today a birthday not long ago and received flowers, candy and gifts from friends, but one boy friend of all I made me happy and thankful. He is the one I wanted remembered.

Everyone came, except the one I wanted most. He didn't even send me a card or call me up on the telephone to wish me a happy birthday. It wasn't his gift, warmth, or the fact that he's him like me once than get the most expensive present that could be bought. Don't tell me he didn't know it was my birthday. I'm sure he remembered and what I set myself to do, I do it. Shall I make him call me or didn't come to my party? I wonder.

In the language of love, MAKE is not a successful word. A man will make many more often made to do things than they realize, anything which gives pleasure would be left out of your plan. Don't you think so? Don't be better all around if you pretended not to be aware of the fact that he never looked your birthday? That would be what is called a savvy way.

Perhaps he really didn't know the date, and he as charming to him most fine qualities and he had not been among the missing.

Shall She Let Him Play Bridge

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am much in love with a boy two years older than I. He says he loves me, too. Before I went with him he used to play bridge at a certain girl's house twice a week, but stopped to please me.

Now he sends him cards and telephones him to come over, but he says he loves me too well. Should I be able to trust him to go to bridge parties or should I still withhold my permission to his going? HUD.

Undecided

My dear girl, sweethearts and wives who try to hold lovers and husbands on too short a chain feel the pangs of trying to keep them more than ladies who give them free rein. Unless you find the young man are positively engaged you really have no right to hold him accountable as to his comings and goings. And he will think more of you if you do also.

Learn to fish it on the chin, as they say, when he goes to play bridge at this girl's house. For, while he may agree to "obey" you for the time being, such authority will rankle after a while.

MASQUERADE DANCE AT TWEED A SUCCESS

Tweed—An interested audience, heard Rev. Sam Martin of Church-ill, Man., at the United Church on Wednesday evening when he gave a fine illustrated address on "The Hudson Bay Railway and Port Nelson." Mr. Martin is one of the foremost home missionaries of the United Church in Canada. He was introduced by Rev. C. W. Medland who spoke of him as the man who put "Church" in Churchill. Mr. Martin spoke in part about the work of the United Church in the west. He referred to the misfortunes of people in certain areas in Saskatchewan and Manitoba who have had poor crops, in some cases, three of six. For these he had told of the courage which they displayed in adversity. Carloads of necessities sent from the East were instrumental in carrying them through the difficult period. The speaker spoke also of the work of the missionary in the Mackenzie River Highway camps where all nationalities are to be found, as well as the building of Fitz Flon and Sherridan in Manitoba. He said that the building of United Church in Churchill was begun one month after the arrival of the first train.

Many of the interesting slides of Churchill with its early history of Fort Churchill when Samuel Hearne and other explorers first visited it.

Mr. H. E. Crowe's numerous friends regret to learn of his decision to resign from the choir from Mr. Crowe has been teller as the Tweed branch of Canadian Bank and his transfer to the bank at Napanee has been effected in the October 30th. Mr. Crowe was the star centre fielder of Tweed baseball team and also took an interest in tennis. He will be missed in these activities.

The visit of Mr. J. J. McWatters, Government Radio Inspector during the week resulted in improved radio service in this area.

The fancy dress dance held in Tweed Opera House on Thursday night was a success. Proved, as it is many a day since a similar event was held. The costumes of a number of Junior hockey is one which merit the support of all who are interested in the game of the town. A great many beautiful costumes were in evidence as well as amusing ones. Mrs. J. McTague's costume was the appropriate for the night in the best dressed ladies' class, though there were a number of others that were very attractive. Miss Jean Richardson's in particular. Mrs. Roger Rose had the most amusing costume and was awarded the prize in the comic ladies' class. Mr. Archie Turbull won the prize for the best dressed gentleman. Mr. Dan Canty, editor-in-chief of the Tweed News, turned the clock back two or three years and appeared as a "small" boy in bare knees. His large auditory appeal at once caught the eye of the judges and he was unanimously the choice for the comic gentleman's prize. The Commodores furnished the music for the dancing and made more enjoyable evening passed into history with the junior hockey club off to a good start for the winter.

Weddings

SHANNON—WALSH

A very pretty autumn wedding took place in St. Mary's Church, Marysville, on Monday, October 23, at 8.30 o'clock when Mary Carmella, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. P. Walsh became the bride of Mr. Arthur Shannon of Latta.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father J. Shannon, brother of the groom, assisted by Rev. Father C. O'Gorman.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was becomingly gowned in white with hat and shoes to match and carried a bouquet of roses and carnations.

Miss Priscilla Collins, Trenton, presided at the organ.

The happy couple left at once for a motor trip to Niagara Falls, Buffalo and other American points and on their return will reside at Latta, where the groom is a prosperous young farmer.

They many friends wish them "Bon Voyage" through life.

The Beauty Box

In the winter season the complexion has an amiable attitude toward make-up. Doesn't try to hurt it away as it does in the summertime, when sun and wind and sweat glands are busier.

Dark colors, furs, all soft, velvety fabrics, lend themselves kindly to the companionship of vivid lipstick and rich, deep blushes. This information is not offered in an attempt to get girls to put on more war paint, it is just telling 'em.

Skin is fairer now so their must be a brand new cosmetic outfit. Plenty of the little lassies are going to beauty shops, looking over rouge and lipstick displays, being matched up to what is right and proper in the form of synthetic beauty. Reason, professional advice is worth having.

Coiffures were never more pleasant. These ridiculous little pointed hats demand a frivolous hairdress or at least the kind of an arrangement that sports bean catcher here and there, or a soft fluffy bang. Partings are wandering all over the head. Nothing like an eccentric misplaced parting to lay on the hat of distinction. That little scalp pain can travel straight across the head from left front to right back, but there must be tricky waving to create the neat pattern. Curls are moderating.

Never use cold water on the eyes if skies are pretty. Since the blow working, it takes them a long time to fill up the little put see so that it is ready to expel its contents. cold water retards the process.

Dissolve a teaspoon of powdered boric acid in a teacup of boiling water. Let stand until the flesh can stand the heat, apply with a pad of gauze or absorbent cotton. Close the eye a long steaming. Do this four times a day. When the cloth boil is ready to break, the compress will do the lancing. Press out the pus gently with fingers covered with gauze.

Go to bed before you are wretchedly tired. Extreme fatigue brings restless sleep, particularly if the mind has been disturbed or the nervous system jangled. That early to bed rule is a good one to follow, if a girl is to retain youthful appearance.

See that the mattress is even and comfortable. Use just enough bed clothing to provide comfort and warmth, and don't use such a small pillow. Don't let worries mill round in your mind. Do send hanging cares them. They'll be right with you in the morning.

How Many Quarts of Blood Have You?

EVERY FEW outside of the medical profession could give the correct answer to that question. Ask your friends and see how far they are from being right. Here is the correct answer—for the average man and woman in normal health has five quarts of blood, which amount to about one-twentieth of the body's weight.

In this blood are red corpuscles float to the number of 25 million million, each corpuscle so tiny it can only be seen through a microscope.

The purpose of these red corpuscles is to act as red carriers of the life-giving substance, oxygen, throughout the entire blood stream. This haemoglobin is too small to be seen even with the microscope, but millions of cells of the body. It also brings to the body cells nutriment and iron from the food digested in the intestines. Next to oxygen, iron is probably the most important element in the life of a human being.

What Happens When Your Blood Count is Low

Unless you have the normal number of red blood corpuscles and the normal amount of haemoglobin your blood, your body cells are deprived of their normal supplies of oxygen, iron and nutriment and your health suffers. You become weakened and run-down, lacking strength and energy.

Scientists and physicians tell how much haemoglobin there is in your blood and your number of red blood corpuscles by testing a drop or two of it under powerful microscopes and lights. The normal male adult has a count of 5,000,000 red blood corpuscles in a cubic millimeter of blood, the female 4,600,000. The normal haemoglobin is 95% to 100% in the male and 90% to 95% in the female.

Blood tests can also be used to tell the value of any prescription or preparation for run-down, thin-blood, anaemic conditions which require the number of red blood corpuscles to be increased and the haemoglobin in the blood built up.

A Clinical Test of 11 People

Recently a leading physician selected a group of eleven run-down, thin-blooded, anaemic people whose blood tested below normal and gave them, with their consent, a month's treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The formula of this well-known preparation is known to the physicks and he judged it to be an excellent one for the purpose.

In every case where the blood count was below normal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills increased the number of red blood corpuscles. For examples:

One person increased the blood count from 3,700,000 red blood corpuscles to 5,408,000. Another from 2,840,000 to 4,300,000. Another from 4,000,000 to 4,440,000.

Equally impressive were the results in building haemoglobin, some of the patients showing gains as high as 20%, 22% and 24% in the short time of one month. Ten per cent. is considered a good gain in this time.

Energy and Strength of Patients Increased

Naturally the patients also increased their vigor, energy and strength, because of the increased amounts of oxygen, iron and nutriment reaching their body cells due to the increase in red blood corpuscles and haemoglobin. They felt more like working, more like playing, more like doing things and having a good time. The records of these "blood tests" with this group, including the patients' names, are on file.

Run-down People Can Obtain This Preparation and Take It At Home

Most people know Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blood builder without having a blood test made. Poor appetite, tired-out feeling, lack of strength, pale complexion, nervousness, heart palpitation are all symptoms of a run-down, thin-blood, anaemic condition—good reasons for starting on a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills without delay.

In most cases, a 30-day treatment will be all that is necessary. If not, the improvement will be so marked—you will feel so much peppier, stronger, more vigorous—that you will need no urging to continue the treatment until completely restored to normal health.

Mining Shares Given Smart Lift by Decision at Washington—Dome and McIntyre Jump 2 Points —Stock Market Opens Strong But Steam Taken Out in Half Hour, Some Issues Surrendering Gains —Enthusiasm Soon Cooled in New York.

NEW YORK FINANCIAL

New York, Oct. 30 (AP)—The announcement that the United States would enter foreign gold markets as a buyer brought a mild revival of inflationary sentiment today in stocks and staples today, but enthusiasm soon cooled and prices settled down to a rather dull level.

Board rooms seemingly were undecided as to the significance of bullishness or bearishness of the new move for either depreciation and traders, after an inaugural flurry, adjourned to their territory to await further developments.

Prime investment bonds were easy.

Among share gainers of fractions to around a point were American Smelting, McIntyre Porcupine, Alaska Juneau, Dome, U. S. Smelting, Chrysler, Case, and Allied Chemical. U. S. Steel and American Telephone were virtually unchanged and small declines were suffered by N. Y. Central, Illinois Central, New Haven, National Biscuit, Johns-Manville, American Can and others.

Aside from firmness in mining shares, a group prompted by the Canadian Pacific and International Nickel. On the curb, Hiram Walker and Amalgamated Sugar rose around a point higher; Dominion government obligations raised ¼ lower to ¼ higher.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—The Toronto Stock Exchange gave a surprising exhibition of buoyancy today over the effect of Washington's venture into the world market for gold. The market opened strong and higher with trading active but within half an hour the supply of steam was exhausted and the market dragged along till noon with prices tending to surrender some of the early gains.

Nickel still had a gain of 65 points at noon when it stood at 37⅞ and Sudbury at 13⅜ was up 3 points. In the distillery group Walkers moved to 30 to hold a point of a half point. Industrial Alcohol was up ¼ and Canada Malting Co. was unchanged at 28 1-4.

In the golds Consolidated shares Brazilian dropped an early gain, down 6 points, returning to 12 1-2. Porc A at 11 was unchanged, and C.P.R. at 13 was up 1-4.

After over-night orders and some new buying on the prospect of a new deal in gold there was a rush as the market lapsed into a lethargic state in a wait developments or a more informed opinion as to the effect of Washington's decision to enter world gold markets as a buyer.

Distillery Shares were up 3-4 to 1 1-4 in the early transactions, and those of the base metal and ironmetal gilts at mid-afternoon. Metal stocks responded to the inflationary aspects of the U. S. announcement and the possibility of putting 5 points and Nickel about 50 cents net.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Oct. 30—(CP)—Mining shares, particularly the gold producers, were in demand today on the Standard Exchange today by the announcement, that Washington would buy gold bullion in the open mets. The indirect bearing of the action on the profits of the mines as commodity prices was regarded by Wagge "any fair increase in the base Metals and silver and nickel and other shares of the group raised circuits.

Dome made the top advance of $2.50 for a net $20.50. Mcintyre was at $46 was up $2. Lake Shore gained $1.50 to $200. Hollinger was off. Teck Hughes 40 cents, Wright Hargreaves 40 cents and Pioneer 25 cents at $3.50.

Noranda moved up sharply to $6.50 for a net of $6.50 at noon. Beaver House holder lost 2 to 34.25 for a net gain of 80 cents. International Nickel gained 65 cents to 19.75.

The market for mining shares, particularly golds, looked for a good promising at the opening and prices in some cases jumped as much as $2 but the buying volume soon flattened out and prices made high but still half the morning gains had been surrendered. The set-back was followed by a rally but the hesitation as to the probable effect of Washington's new deal in the gold and Brazilian dropped an early gain, down 6 points, returning to 12 1-2. Porc A at 11 was unchanged, and C.P.R. at 13 was up 1-4.

After over-night orders and some new buying on the prospect of a new deal in gold there was a rush as the market lapsed into a lethargic state in a wait developments or a more informed opinion as to the effect of Washington's decision to enter world gold markets as a buyer.

Collegiate Gridders Back in Race by Brilliant 20-1 Win at Expense of Peterboro C. I.

Locals Far Superior in Every Department of Game

MANY INJURED

Petes Used Forward Pass But Good Defence Developed

Playing an inspired brand of football, the B.C.I. senior team of gridders downed the last Peterboro C. I. squad and advanced to second place in the Lake Shore group of the O.S.S.A., tramping over their opponents by the score of 20 to 1. The score, however, is no indication of the play during the gruelling contest played at the Park Grounds on Saturday, as the Petes were always a threat and only the excellent defensive play set up by the tri-color was responsible for the visitors' low score.

The game was marked by the absence of individual stars as every Belleville player, down to the last lineman, played the brand of football that gave them the group championship last season. Captain Jimmie Pafield, who usually does the punting for the locals booted two points and then was forced to retire owing to an injured ankle. Joe Reynolds took up the kicking duties of the day and more than held fills own with the great Wesleyan and Archibald, booting for Red Legion's team. Wally Hilton played his usual steady game and let his team down for many substantial gains of yards. George Catmon, who calls the signals, at quarter, never worked to better advantage and gave the team judgment in employing the plays. The line of scrimmage was good, with every player working like a Trojan, with Morgan and Rigby throwing their all into the game and sustaining injuries that necessitated their being replaced when victory was assured. Ted Holden Johnson, who replaced Captain Folwell for the better part of the game went many words of praise as the youth went into a difficult position and came out with flying colors. Especially worthy of note were efforts of the substitutes who gained undying fame by the fine manner in which they conducted themselves and called upon to play. They were excellent.

Petes' Line Light

The Peterboro line was much too light for the local front line and they depending much on their speed. Their forward passes and end runs continually proved a threat. Jogging at centre half, proved the best player of the day with Marsh, Archibald, Kingston and Reid playing good football throughout. One of the feature plays of the day was completed by a forward pass from Marsh to Kingston for a gain of 40 yards.

The Play

B.C.I. kicked off and the Petes returned on the second down. Folwell raced around left end for 15 yards and on an attempted placement Reynolds dawdled and the ball the goal line for a rouge. Making the score 1-0. Morgan and Hilton made yards and Folwell punted to the deadline for another point. Play ranged in mid-field until Rigby secured and ploughed thru for 25 yards and on the next down Hilton carried over for a touchdown on a nice extension and run by Catmon to Hilton. Folwell converted and on the next play was carried off the field with an injury. The score at end of first quarter was 8 to 0 for B.C.I.

Starting the second quarter Peterboro opened up the play, Marsh and Jopling making gains, but lost the ball on the B.C.I.'s ten yard line due to an incompleted forward pass. Rigby again tore through the Peterboro line for a long gain, and Reynolds raced through and gathered in his kick from 25 yards out, to score a touchdown. The play was most unexpected and Reynolds was given a great hand. It was not content Peterboro completed a nice forward and Archibald pulled over for goal line with Dunkley downing Catmon for a rouge and their only point. Half time ended 13 to 1.

The second half opened with Peterboro throwing some daring forward passes which for the most part were knocked down or cut off. A change of kicking Reynolds outbooted Archibald and the ball laid on the opponents goal line. Hilton's nice kicking and Hilton ran around the right end for a nice gain and Rigby plunged through centre on the next play for a nice try and added five more points. Reynolds converting and the score was 19 to 1 when the third quarter ended. Peterboro tried a wide open game but it was too late and Reynolds kicked another point when Temple downed Jopling for a rouge.

On the day's play the local squad proved far superior. Both squads were accorded a big local collegiate following the game.

The line-up:

Peterboro—Wing wing, McKone; halves, Archibald, Young, Jopling; quarter, Kingston; snap, Kelly; inside, Parnell, Morrow; middles, Marsh, Sedgewick; outside, Mc-Glover; subs, Beatty, Ascott, McIntyre, Wesley and Dunkley.

Belleville— Flying wing, Cook; halves, Folwell, Reynolds, Hilton; quarter, Catmon; snap, Cole; insides, Ketcheson, Morgan; middles, Rigby, Hall; outside, Pafield, Johnson; subs, Saunders, Bradford, Anderson, Johnson, and Wood.

Referee, Townsend, Belleville; umpire, Richardson, Peterboro; head linesman, Laughlin, Belleville.

WORK OUT NEW SYSTEM

Montreal, Oct. 30 (CP) — Lester Patrick thinks a good hockey player should be able to play any position. The New York Rangers' coach has been putting his theories to the test as the Stanley Cup champions train here for the coming National Hockey League season.

Wings have been shifted to centre, right wings have tried sniping from the left wing and players usually handling the left lane had ranged over the blue line. Whether this permanent change in the general alignment of the team, the grizzled master strategist of hockey is convinced it is good practice for his men.

The Rangers took to the ice immediately they reported here for conditioning. Patrick believes the ice is the place for hockey players so he takes no chance for a long and gruelling campaign.

The public were given a preview of the 1933 edition of the Rangers when they beat Boston Bruins in an exhibition game at Quebec yesterday.

Andy Aitkenhead was crooching between the Rangers' goal posts putting up a brilliant defence of the New York citadel. Earl Seibert had a new shipmate alongside him on the starting defence with Ching Johnson on the reserve list. Another promising professional wrestler and star of the Vancouver Lions of the west coast, was made his debut with the Rangers. He gave a fine account of himself on the defence and rambled down to score an unassisted goal. Ching Johnson, dependable as ever, and Doug Brennan, provide a husky reserve defence corps. Lorne Chabot will give way to Ching as a starting defenseman and share relief duties with Aitkenhead. Ott Heller, utility man often seen in a defence role, is out of the thick of things for a week or so with a broken bone in his hand, souvenir of a practice session.

Smooth Front Line.

Frank Boucher, at centre, Bun Cook at left wing and Bill Cook at right wing formed the Ranger attack which probably the smoothest working front line in the game, and have shown their old-time power and precision in the workouts.

Babe Siebert, hard-shooting left winger, has been giving Coach Patrick and the Rangers management but should be not come to terms Lester will have smart right winger from Buffalo Bisons, will probably step into centre position. Ken National League, Carr played a fine game at defence. Alex Shibicky, Detroit Falcon has been working Cecil Dillon, a left hander who played centre with the Black Hawks and Cecil has been making good.

BRINGING UP FATHER

OCT 30 - MR. AND MRS. - IT HAPPENS IN EVERY HOUSEHOLD

For the 2.0. LOWE of EVE

by Lucy Walling

Eve ignored this threat. Arlene emerging from Barnes' office a few minutes later, handed Eve some proofs to correct. Paused to them with a paper clip was a hastily penciled note from Arlene. "Get to them out as quickly as possible." It read. His highness is wild about something.

Later Eve and Arlene speculated on the cause of Barnes' display of temper—a thing most unusual for him.

"I think Mr. Bixby's been taking a hand in running office again," said Arlene confided. "I know he thinks expenses in our department are higher than they need to be and higher than the volume of this years' Christmas selling warrants. Wonder what the outcome will be? Barnes was on the point of resigning last year and he only agreed to stay on conditions that Bixby prevented a hands-off policy toward the advertising office. Sometimes I think Mr. Bixby wouldn't care much if Barnes did resign. He might get a new manager who would work for less and wouldn't object to his suggestions."

All this was food for thought for Eve and she renewed her efforts to make good in a conspicuous way. If Earle Barnes resigned or if he were forced to quit, perhaps Mr. Bixby would put her in charge of the department. While she had from the first, hoped that eventually she would receive this promotion, she had not expected that it might come about so soon. But why not, she argued with herself. Aside from that he was even more considerate than usual, suggesting that they should meet down town, after work that evening, have dinner and perhaps go somewhere to dance or see a movie. And on this occasion he was so devoted, so like the Dick he had been after their marriage, that Eve was ashamed of her suspicions.

Next evening he called up shortly before the store closed to tell Eve he would not be home for dinner and that she should not wait up for him as he might be rather late. Immediately Eve's suspicions were aroused anew. His explanation—and in this absence was that all the executives in charge of this distinction job on which he was engaged were having dinner together to be followed by a conference concerning their work.

She went home, locked the door and after making herself a cup of tea, and a sandwich, turned off the lights in the living room, shut herself up in the bedroom and tried to read herself to sleep.

It was nearly one o'clock before Dick came home. Eve, who was wide awake, closed her eyes and pretended that she was asleep, though she scorned herself for pretense and was furious as Dick for making the pretense seem necessary. What was their marriage coming to, she asked herself over and over again.

CHAPTER 13

It was Thursday, two weeks be-

Several of the specialty shops in Lake City had women advertising managers.

Eve did not tell Dick about this possibility. She suspected that he would not like it. Oh, he would be proud of her ability, of course; but he would not approve of her going into anything which was certain to take so many of her time and interest. Nevertheless she resolved that after the holidays, whether Dick approved the step or not, she would begin to attend night school again and review the course she had taken in advertising. She wondered, too, what salary Mr. Bixby would be likely to pay her. Not so much—not nearly so much as she was getting—but considerably more than she now received. And, characteristically, she began to plan what she would do with this added money.

She hurried home from work five minutes that day, determined to get home on time. She hoped for Dick's arms around her. Longed for this odd, almost boyish humor that had come between them to be cleared away.

But Dick was not to be surprised or wheedled into an explanation of his absence the night before. When she mentioned that she had been invited to Miss McElhinney's room for a game of bridge he asked absently if she had enjoyed it. Later when she asked, making her voice as casual as possible, if he had had a nice time at the office, he merely replied briefly, "Oh, good enough," and immediately changed the subject.

"Oh, I'd love it!" she said. "But how could I get away so early? I want to remind you that no job is worth as much as your health. I don't care about the sick Barnes is; I've worries on my own job. But I'm not going to stand by without protesting while my wife becomes a nervous wreck."

"Well, anyway I shouldn't have left when I did this morning." Eve went on. Suppose Mr. Bixby found fog me again during the day and Barnes has to tell him I've gone to spend the week-end in the country? "Hell, I'm working for your reputation," Dick replied cheerfully.

They rode in silence out Broadway and then turned south, Eve shouldered as they passed the gray stone villa of the state hospital. Many an inmate there, she knew, might have been saved if he had stopped the nervous strain in time. Than she—and her she did not relax enough.

She thought of Dick's handsome profile. He looked strong, purposeful, and yet so calm.

"Dick, you never worry about your work, do you?" she began.

"Wouldn't say that," he answered. "Every job has its disagreeable spots."

"But I never hear you rave and rant when you get home nights. My father used to relieve working day at the dinner table! If anyone upset a cog of the machinery that day we'd have to listen all through the meal until he finished telling his side of it and what he'd like to do to certain people! Sometimes he used rather violent language, too," Eve said.

"People do that and then wonder why they have nervous indigestion," Dick smiled.

"You can't make things any better by harping on them 24 hours of a day. Makes them worse instead!"

"Well," Eve went on, "when I was still at home I decided that if I ever had a family of my own we'd talk about what's going on in the world at meal time. A child alone isn't apt to take much interest in world news but if there is a round table discussion with both mother and father giving their opinions and interpretations of important things that are happening the whole family is bound to get more out of life."

"Yes, mod," Dick said curtly enough. Dick agreed as they rode through an outlying factory district. "It's a cinch that if you give them a little help it'll stimulate them to get their bearings when they get out in the world."

"When I was a boy down on the farm," he continued, "we didn't have much money for diversions. After chores were done we always had time for play but there was never any money spent on that play. Money was too scarce! In spite of that there was never was a year when my father didn't have the price to subscribe to two daily newspapers. And, hard as he worked, Dad was never too tired to talk over the main part of the day's news with the family. When I came into the city I got plenty of raining for being a 'green country boy' but I wasn't really as green as they thought."

"Your father was awfully strict with you, wasn't he?" Eve asked.

Dick so rarely talked about himself that she was interested.

"Well, Dad was a smart man," laughed Dick, "and he never took orders from anyone under the age of 10."

Eve settled down and pulled the lapboke more firmly about her.

"Warm enough, sweetheart?" Dick asked.

She assured him that she was. They had left the city far behind and were riding over flat farm country—hard, brown and barren looking in the December cold. There was little life to be seen around the houses.

"I pity the people who have to live in this neighborhood," Eve said. "They miss so much!"

"Well, don't pity them," Dick said tartly. "Pity the children who grow up without knowing the woods or a country swimming hole or owning a flock of pets ranging from a baby calf down to a litter of live Easter bunnies. There are actually kids who never have seen a whole peck of apples on a tree in a book. There are lots of them who never have the chance to roam over hills and along creeks exploring. They are the ones to be sorry for!"

JAPAN ON PEACE PARLEY.

Tokyo, Oct. 30 (AP)—Minister of War Sadao Araki, now in western Japan for the annual army maneuvers, was quoted in Japanese newspapers today as advocating a parley on peace. In an interview, Araki was said to have announced he would propose to the cabinet an international conference in Tokyo for all powers interested in the far east.

TARZAN OF THE EARTH'S CORE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Tarzan of the Apes paused to listen and to sniff the air. From a great distance faint sounds came to his ears—sounds that no other human ears could have heard. Something strange had come into his African Jungle. Silently, the Ape-man swung into the trees and moved swiftly in the direction of the sounds. For when strangers came, the Lord of the Jungle always investigated. Because man, alone of all creatures, brought strife and trouble into the jungle's peace.

Buto the rhinoceros, Tantor the elephant, and Numa the lion came and went through the forest. To them, today, Tarzan paid little attention as each minute narrowed the distance between the Ape-man and those whom he sought. Now, his keen ears caught the sound of padding, naked feet. To his sensitive nostrils came the spoor of black men mixed with the faint scent which Tarzan knew meant the presence of a white man. Above the wide, well marked game trail, the Lord of the Jungle crouched and waited.

Like a shadow, Tarzan sped through the trees until he was some little distance ahead of the marching column. Then he dropped down into the trail and halted, jabbering excitedly. For these were men recruited in another district and did not know Tarzan as Lord of the Apes by sight. "I am Tarzan," announced the Ape-Man. "What do you want in Tarzan's country?"

Canada May Benefit by Roosevelt Policy to Buy Gold in Open Markets

Policy of Raising Prices by Buying U.S. Gold, Failure

NEW POLICY

Canada Willing to Sell Her Gold to Highest Bidder

Canada intrNE F.&ba-d ULD.. (Dam Reporter)

(Canadian Press Writer)

Washington, Oct. 30.—(CP)—President Roosevelt prepared today to carry his higher gold prices into world markets as a means of fortifying his economicly price-raising drive against foreign influences, intentional or unintentional as these influences might be.

It was the obvious objective of the United States President to increase through this step—even to control—the world price of the precious metal. Apparently he was convinced a continued rise in the world gold prices would stimulate a similar upward movement in commodities.

His week-old move to bring about higher commodity prices through purchases of U.S. gold alone proved a failure.

The newest step in the President's monetary policy carried the possibility of having a tremendous effect on Canada with her wealthy gold mines; on the United Kingdom with its Sterling stabilization machinery and, in fact, on every other country, both on and off the gold standard.

It was announced last night after the President had conferred at Washington with his economic advisers and America's high priests of finance. After a three-hour parley the momentous decision was announced in these few simple words:

"The subject under discussion was the immediate setting up of machinery under which the government, through the reconstruction Finance Corporation, will be enabled to buy gold in the Foreign markets."

Canada to Profit

Canada appeared in a direct line to profit from the American move. Official Ottawa was mute until the full portent of the Roosevelt decision became known. But sai Fort William Hon. Charles McCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines, said Canada's gold would go to the highest bidder and that impetus would be given gold production. He added: "Gold has been the means of lifting the world out of many previous depressions. I am convinced it will do the same in leading it out of the present one."

But there was no escaping the serious repercussions that might follow if the Washington decision were built on an insular foundation.

Many in official Washington readily admitted that embarkation by the United States upon a broad policy of gold purchases in London, without an agreement with the Bank of England, could carry with it the threat of monetary and trade reprisals by the London Government.

However, a predominant strain in dispatches from the metropolitan press from Washington commentators, as well as opinions expressed by Wall Street Financiers, was that Roosevelt would finally risk such dangers.

The New York Times Washington correspondent wrote:

"If purchases of gold to be made by this government are undertaken only after consultation with the British Government, as strongly intimated by at least one official after the Monday night's White House conference, it may halt that House conference, at least between the United States and Great Britain would be out of the picture."

Another part of the Times dispatch, echoed in others from Washington, read:

Agassiz, B.C., Oct. 30—Dauntless Derreen laid an egg early today, and gave her backers almost positive assurance she will tie the world's record of 357 eggs in 365 days. She has now laid 355 eggs in 363 days. Derreen couldn't make the extra egg that would have put her on a pinnacle by herself, and let Saturday go by without a cackle. But at 7 o'clock this morning, while W. H. Hicks, Superintendent, and the entire staff of the Dominion Experimental Farm tiptoed about in anxiety, the good hen announced to the world the race was on again. The early day laying showed she was back to the cycle which should normally produce one a day for the next two days at least.

Egg No. 355

ington, read:

"In one quarter, the opinion was expressed that if the United States entered upon a policy, which was not agreed to by Britain, the succeeding weeks might well see established new barriers and other retaliatory steps by Britain and a consequent move to decrease the gold value of the Pound Sterling.

London May Act

"That London is not indifferent to the possibilities involved was indicated only last week by Sir Robert Horne, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, when he said in an address before the Hood club here, that Britain would not stand idly by if America's new monetary policy threatened to disrupt seriously the relations between Sterling and the United States Dollar.

"He expressed the opinion the purchase of newly-mined domestic gold, such as carried out last week with unsatisfactory results upon commodity levels, would do little to disturb the international money market. But he warned that if the policy were carried to "its ultimate conclusion" exchanges would necessarily be responsive action by Britain.

New significance had been given today to these additional words of Sir Robert:

"If it (the gold-buying monetary policy) went far, it would be necessary for us, from the trading point of view, if we are to carry on external business, to do something also. Believe me, I would not be done in any respect in the shape of retaliation. You must not think that. . . . The only link between Sterling and the dollar . . . must not be permitted to get out of due proportion."

S. A. Chaplains Here on Nov. 11

Chaplain - Captains Thompson Walker and C. H. Carroll, two of the most popular Salvation Army Chaplains with Canadian Overseas Forces since Great War, will visit the city over the Armistice week-end and campaign at the local citadel. An interesting illustrated lecture by Captain Carroll on the subject "Through Flanders Fields and Miles Over the Battlefield," will be anticipated with much interest.

In event of community interest in the visit this evening in the Prince of Wales Women's Legion, who are attending the local Citadel to present an attractive programme under the leadership of Miss Pearl Sergeant, Capt. W. Hawkes will be present as chairman of the occasion.

MONTREAL DAIRY PRODUCE PRICES

The butter market was stronger last week, advancing 2-4c per lb. becoming 19 1-2c per lb. for cartons or l.c.l. lots fo No. 1. Receipts for the week were 2,873 boxes; week ago, 4,360; a year ago, 7,013.

The cheese market was 1-4c to 1-4c lower last week, ending at 16 1-2c for Ontarios and 16 1-4c for Quebecs. Receipts for the week totalled 22,117 boxes, against 25,507 boxes the preceding week and 22,296 boxes in the corresponding week last year.

Exports of cheese from Montreal last week totalled 28,102 boxes. There were no shipments of butter. Exports of eggs totalled 6,725 cases.

Top grades of fresh eggs advanced 2c to 3c per dozen on the Montreal wholesale market last week. Receipts were very scarce. Total egg receipts at Montreal reported by the Board of Trade for the week as only 3,103 cases, included in which were some storage eggs put in route for export. Gradual shipments of Ontario to Lc.l. lots were being quoted by brokers at the week's close as follows: Extras 38-40c per dozen; firsts, 32-33; pullets 27-28c; Seconds 17-18c. Selects were being quoted into consumption in greater volume, owing to the scarcity and increased prices for the fresh stock. Carlots of such lots of storage eggs were quoted 31c for extras, 19c for firsts, and 16-16 1-2c for seconds.

Seldom does one see so much royalty together in one picture. When the memorial to the late Field-Marshal Lord Methuen, colonel of the Scots Guards, was unveiled in the Guards' Chapel, Wellington Barracks, by the Duke of Connaught, the duke was attended by Prince George, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York. The occasion was historic since it was the first time in the history of the Guards that all five colonels of the brigade were present at any ceremonial. The picture shows, LEFT TO RIGHT: The Duke of York (Scots Guards), Field-Marshall the Earl of Cavan (Irish Guards), the Prince of Wales (Welsh Guards), the Duke of Connaught (Grenadier Guards) and Lt.-Gen. Alfred Codrington (Coldstream Guards.

Parkhill Boy Shinnies Hydro Pole and Meets Death

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—Two men and one boy met death through accidents in Ontario over the week-end. Bodies of two other men, missing for some time, were located one floating in the Avon River near Stratford, the other in the Welland Canal, near St. Catharines.

Alvan Volk, 13, of Parkhill, was electrocuted when he touched a high tension wire, while climbing a hydro pole Sunday. The youth, with five other companions was out walking when he shinnied up the pole and met death.

Wounds received while pheasant hunting on Pelee Island, caused the death Saturday of Herbert Elsworth, 23, of Walkerville. Elsworth's knee joint was shattered and he was forced to remain on the island for three hours until a boat made its regular call and took him to the mainland.

The body of Patrick McLaughlin, 40-year-old Stratford man, missing for more than two weeks was found floating if the Avon River yesterday. From the condition of the remains it was evident it had been in the water for some time. No inquest will be held.

A second body, that of Patrick O'Grady, 63, of Fort Dalhousie, was discovered in lock one of the old Welland Canal yesterday. O'Grady had been unreported for the past two weeks. There were no marks of violence and it was decided an inquest was unnecessary.

NOVA SCOTIA SWEPT BY A HEAVY GALE

Shipping Along Coast Bears Brunt of Storm's Fury

VESSELS AGROUND

Extensive Property Damage Reported From Several Sections

Halifax Oct. 30—(CP)—Nova Scotia last night and today of wide-spread damage left in the wake of a howling northeaster that steered a destructive course across the province before sweeping eastward to blow itself out over the Atlantic.

Torrential rain and wind in hurricane strength joined forces in the brief tempest that raged early Sunday, leaving a trail of damaged shipping and extensive property destruction.

From end to end, Nova Scotia's mainland felt the storm. The terrific wind toppled poles and brought communication and power lines to earth; swollen by the downpour, streams overflowed their banks and left highways in many spots submerged.

And off the coast, short-wave wireless crackled as terse messages of distress. Under the storm's violence the little Halifax lightship and her crew from her anchorage off Chebucto Head and was driven ragidly ashore before a gale that sent huge seas crashing over her bridge.

Her engine could drive her only three knots in calm seas; the weather was anything but calm, and it was all Captain Lavalee could do to keep the nose to the wind. The top of the bridge was ripped away and a dory swung from its davits by the wind's force before the government steamer Lady Laurier reached the scene later in the afternoon, after the lightship had been drifting 10 hours.

Towed to Halifax

A whirling rocket brought a line aboard the lightship and the Lady Laurier towed her into Halifax. There, as his ship lay snug at anchor, Capt. Lavalee described the storm as the worst he had seen in 25 years at sea. He told also of two other vessels, all unidentified, seen near bound from Corner Brook, Nfld. to New York and a small fishing boat, which rode out the storm off his coast. Word of their position came to the lightship by wireless as she swept seaward before the gale.

In land, in sheltered Bedford Basin, the wind snatched the Imperial Oil Company's tanker Thalatta from her berth and drove her hard aground. Harvey Parker, master of the 2,381-ton motorvessel loaded in the gale; anchors hastily lowered failed to hold, and the vessel drove into shallow water.

Two tugs failed to refloat her after repeated attempts. Another effort will be made, today. Bottom of the vessel as she lay aground revealed she had sustained little damage.

At Digby, a small fishing vessel was driven into the Bay of Fundy, but like a wisp it back inshore. The sailing yacht Pinious sank in Halifax harbor after being torn from her moorings.

THROWN IN CAB OF ENGINE AFTER CRIME

Top of Head Practically Torn Off

Edmonton, Oct. 30 (CP)— The top of the head practically torn off the body of an unidentified man was found in the cab of a "dead-head" engine, attached to a Canadian National Railways freight train on its arrival here from Walhwright, Alta., during the week end.

When railroaders found the body it was still warm, indicating death had occurred but a short time before.

Police believe the man was murdered, apparently slugged over the head by the engine shaker bar, a heavy iron bar, and it is believed only one blow was struck, but this with terrific force.

The man is believed to have boarded the engine in the Walhwright yards in company with another man.

A three-cornered battle is in prospect. John Penner has been proclaimed by the United Farm Party and it is expected Mayor Webb will run again.

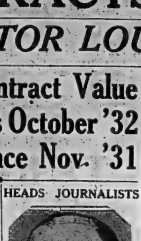
ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Alberton, Ill. Oct. 31 (CP) — John Hayes found the remains of a 1913 automobile, abandoned for years in the woods. He transformed the crank to see if the car would still work and was amazed when the motor came on and a kick and goat lion sprang. The lion's head is badly moth-eaten and dislocated shoulder, John's all right.

Cincinnati, Oct. 31 (CP)—Mrs. Celia Stark thought those tropical fish she bought three weeks ago were very cute. There were two pairs then. She still thought tropical fish were cute when she noticed she had more than four, and began searching for cute rocks to hide. Now she's not so sure. The last fish have summoned the courage to count them, there were 167.



Denver, Oct. 31 (CP)—Miss Marie Carew's face is not only attractive, it's honest. That's what Magistrate Alvin H. Fickes decided yesterday. He gave the girl a day's parole, to observe how it pays, a $7 fine for a traffic violation. Ordinarily, if she was unable to pay a fine is held in jail either until the amount is paid or is "worked out" at the equivalent of $3. a day.

Philadelphia, Oct. 31 (CP) — Birth of a grandson to Magistrate Edward F. Roberts proved a boon to petty law violators in his court. He discharged them all yesterday considering that they "go home to your families and try to do better." Then he explained his kindness: Every time a person had just become the father of a 6½ pound boy.

New Orleans, Oct. 31 (CP)—Names aren't worrying Albert and Cora Simmons and Thomas Burns who are the dazed parents of quadruplets born in a hospital here. The infants, all girls are called "One, Two, Three and Four." The parents now have 13 children.

Cleveland, Oct. 31 (CP)—Fifty dollar fines and 30-day jail sentences were given Malcomb Wright and James Edwards, both 21, on conviction of operating a roadhouse on Sunday.

KIDNAPPED MILLIONAIRE GIVEN WORKS

Louis E. Brooks Forced to Open Safe And Accompany Gang

FOUND ON FARM

Left Beaten And Bruised With Ignition Key of Car Hidden

Marshall, Mich., Oct. 31 (AP) His face bruised and showing evidences of a beating, Louis E. Brooks, millionaire Marshall manufacturer, reported kidnapped earlier today by two men and a woman, was found at his farm home near Battle Creek today. He told officials his captors had released him after dragging him his factory where they looted the safe.

Brooks, officials said, told them he had been forced by the trio to open a safe in his office, then had been compelled to accompany the robbers in his car along a side road toward Battle Creek, 30 miles east of here.

There, he said, his captors stopped, locked him in the back of the automobile, and hid the key under the cushion. Returning to the car, he said, they informed him where he could find the key and fled.

He told sheriff's deputies he found the key after a lengthy search, and, discovering his captors had escaped, drove to his farm home a few miles away.

Officials said that Brooks information then he would make no further statement until he consulted his attorney, James W. MacKay, who drove at once to the Brooks farm.

The attorney said he would prepare a statement today.

Officials said Brooks did not report the amount of money taken from the safe, but said he had been informed that only a small amount was kept there. Brooks, 49 years old, is a member of one of the city's wealthiest and most prominent families.

But the old boy didn't give hard, said Sister Mr. Breese will go to school a pair of crutches to teach his regular classes and to coach his team, which at present is leading the C.O.S.S.A. senior group.

BOUND TO BED WITH CHAINS

Hearing in Cruelty Charge Against St. Jerome Parent

St. Jerome, Que., Oct. 31.—Charges of having lashed her young daughter to a bed with chains and beaten her with a stick were read in court here Monday against Mrs. Eugenie Lavigne Paquette. After evidence, Judge Benoit Arbour remanded the woman for trial before the next session of the criminal assizes.

Her husband, Leon Paquette, of Terrebonne, Que., was acquitted on a charge of complicity, on testimony by the daughter, Rolande, 15, and his two sons, who placed the blame on the mother.

Each her mother staring at her, the daughter, whose cheeks were scarred by ill-treatment, stated:

"I return from the small Terrebonne school each evening at four o'clock to be chained to my cot by my mother.

"She forces me to lie in bed and then struck me across the body with a stick while the rings of the chain cut my body, making it bleed.

"She grasped my arms as I returned from school," the girl continued. "She forced me to go upstairs and then passed a long chain around my waist. She locked both ends of the chain until the rings pressed into my flesh and with a second lock chained me to the little cot. This lock was used on the door so that no one could enter except herself. She then hid all the keys. All night I slept with the chain pressing into my flesh, and in the morning would find blood in the bedclothes and my body badly bruised.

Mrs. Paquette surprised the court by defending herself. Her two sons were "out of their mind," she said, their testimony should not be considered. She said it was all her husband's fault. She only wanted to keep him and the daughter apart.

Deer Seen in Two Places North of City

A dainty half-grown red doe is picking its way through the plowed fields and pastures of Thurlow Township today, appearing unafraid of residents of the section or the heavily travelled roads of the district. On two occasions the little animal has been sighted by residents of the immediate district.

Perhaps the most startling appearance was made this morning on Cannifton Road just north of the old Lazier Paper Mill, when two local girls, Dorothy Carmichael and Ted Watts, on their way to work just before seven, o'clock observed the doe just ahead of them picking its dainty way along the heavily travelled road. Startled by the appearance of the boys it dashed to the east side of the road, leaped lightly over the fence and disappeared across the Thomas' lot east. Turning around in the field just a few rods away the little animal stopped for a few moments to stare at their direction. On Monday what is now believed to have been the same one observed by Mr. F. Mayse, in a pasture field owned by him in the 3rd Concession of Thurlow, and he believed to have routed the little animal out of the dense woods north of Corbyville.

NAILS STREWN IN JERUSALEM

Arabs Attempt to Hinder Transporting of Forces

Jerusalem, Oct. 31 (AP)—Dawn revealed the streets of the Holy City strewn with nails today, presumably by Arabs to hinder the transporting of government forces ordered out in a hunt anti-Jewish demonstrations.

Snipers blazed away at the government officers intermittently throughout the night and police returned the fire, but there were no casualties to add to the thirty dead and hundreds wounded in previous bloody rioting.

An emergency law was called into effect today in an effort to prevent further outbreaks. It vests the administration with wide powers—including authority to arrest, court-martial and deport offenders. It was hoped this move would forestall recurrences of the defiant demonstrations.

THREE BARS GOLD STOLEN

London, Oct. 31 (AP)—Robbers today seized three bars of gold worth about $60,000 from a delivery van in broad daylight on one of the city's busiest streets.

The bandits escaped in an automobile after a brief struggle with the youth who was in charge of the van during the driver's absence.

The gold had just arrived by railway from Sheffield en route to London smelting company for refinement for jewelry uses.

Provincial Constables and other officials under the jurisdiction of the force have been "more kind."

Inspector Lougheed entered police work in 1912 joining the Toronto force as a constable and pounding a beat, which was then his first police work for the years that were ahead. In 1917 he joined the Provincial Police and was stationed as a constable at Fort Frances, at Blind River and Niagara Falls. While there he was appointed sergeant and sergeant-major at Hamilton and Toronto in that capacity. At Toronto, he was raised to the rank of Inspector, and for a short time was stationed at Port Arthur before moving to Windsor and for the past six years has been stationed at Belleville in charge of quarters.

The new staff inspector has great executive ability, a clear insight of police routine and without doubt the respect of the men under him and the public whom he serves. Although he did not enter largely in the social or civic life of the city yet he at all times could speak on any civic matter and had the welfare of his adopted city at heart and was always ready and willing to aid in any worthy cause. How well will he fill his new post will go with Inspector Lougheed in his new position and it is to be hoped he will be able to find time to renew acquaintances at short intervals.

Nickel for War Stored in Guise of Nickel Coin?

London, Oct. 31 (C.P. Cable)— Canadian nickel is already looming large in the threatened race in armaments.

The Daily Express today features a news story that in the peaceful guise of nickel coinage France and Germany are laying up armament reserves. Statements by the Mond Nickel Company, however, are to the effect there is no reason to think the increased consumption or nickel in Europe is due to any substantial extent for armament purposes. It is pointed out manufacture of stainless steel, automobiles, radio equipment, cast iron and coinage are all improving fields for the use of nickel.

Nickel is an essential constituent of armaments. Canada produces about 80 per cent. of the world's supply.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR IN ARTICLE

In the report of the Rev. T. R. Naylor's Sunday evening address in the Tabernacle United Church, a typographical error occurred which materially changed the meaning of Mr. Naylor's utterance. "Religion had even been a message of incomparable hope to humanity," should have read, "Religion had ever been a message of incomparable hope to humanity."

OBITUARY

MARION AGNES HODGINS

On the morning of October 17th, there passed away, after an illness of only five days, Marion Agnes Hodgins, eldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hodgins, of Selby, says the Niagara Beaver.

Marion was a very great favorite in the community. Although only ten years and seven months old, her religion was very real to her. She was very faithful in the performing of the Scripture passages assigned to her in her Sunday School class, and loved to take part in the Bible reading in the family devotion.

On Thursday afternoon the United Church, Selby, where the funeral service was held, was filled to the doors, the neighboring schools were closed and the children of the Church School which Marion attended, were all present, led by their teacher, Miss Laird. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Smith. His very appropriate and comforting remarks were based on the text found in Psalm 127: 3, "Lo, children are a heritage of the Lord."

There were many beautiful floral tributes carried by the classmates of her Sunday School class. The bearers were Vera, Inez, and Jean McKnight, Dorothy Tummon, Florence Hamilton and Audra Rogers. Interment took place in Riverside cemetery.

There are left to mourn her loss, her father and mother, a younger brother and two little sisters.

Witches Ride Broomsticks Children Fill the Streets in Celebrating Hallowe'en

WHOOP——oooop——oooop——oooop! It is Hallowe'en ——!

Tonight is the night when witches ride broomsticks, when black cats take on an added significance, and the very air is filled with mystery and strange power. Tonight is the night when elves, and gnomes and strange ogres take possession of city streets and ply their busy footsteps until that strange hour of midnight. The night when a whole world bows to that spirit of jollity and revelry which is only youths' alone.

Strange, silly figures will prowl tonight through the darkened streets. In small bands and companies they will make their house to house visits, demanding tribute as through the passing of the shadowy years. Thanksgiving Day may no longer be synonymous with a big turkey on a well laden table; Christmas time may have lost something of the spirit of gift giving, and the singing of Yule tidings. Hallowe'en is one night unchangeable.

Religious Ceremonies.

For many centuries the last night of October has been a time of religious ceremonies and superstitious beliefs. The eve of All Saints' Day was a date of religious festival before the Christmas era. On or about October 31 was held the Roman festival in honor of Pomona, goddess of fruit trees. At a later date the history the ancient Druids indulged in a similar festival, lighting bonfires as an act of thanksgiving to their sun god, for on this day and days following was held the feast of harvest thanksgiving.

When Britain was converted to christianizing, the church found it impossible to do away with all these very old customs associated with the sun god feast, so she turned it into a festival, calling it All Saints' Day. The vigil of All Saints' Day marked the beginning of winter. Cattle were brought in from the pastures, wood was stocked for the long cold night, and everything possible was done to provide for the safety and comfort of the homesteard until the return of spring.

Old records of pagan times tell of the Hallowe'en torches of the Irish. The huge bonfires of the Scots. The Coal Oeith fires of the Welsh, and the tinsle fires of the Cornishmen lighted at the Hallowe'en celebration. Ireland still prepares feasts for the visiting spirits. Windows are lit up with candles and prayers are said for the departed souls. Rural England still has many superstitions on All Hallow's Day. There is a practice of ringing bells for departed souls, and the prayers for those who have gone.

CITY FALSE FACE CONSCIOUS ANTICIPATING HALLOWE'EN

Scarcity of nickels, dimes and quarters among the juvenile population of the city?

Not much there isn't since young Belleville became false face conscious during the past week or so. Downtown dealers with ugly faces, or to be more specific, with ugly paper mache faces, made for the purpose in such fearsome array among other incidentals necessary to a successful Hallowe'en party that by doing a roaring trade since the beginning of the week.

Big and little the youth of the city have been preparing themselves for the night of October 31, Strapping fellows with brooms and sticks, grinning pumpkin heads with smoking fetid beer and other darkened verandahs, and strange spectres fill ghost-like through the streets.

This year, besides false faces evermore in evidence, some kind mother into a real old-fashioned fill, you can buy the whole bag hands to go with them. Let anyone who is desirous of being disguised. You can also dress as a hobgoblin, a hobo, or even go in complete disguise as a girl, and could do all these regards, which may be purchased from the city's dealers, out of some old clothes out of the attic or basement. Even the costume makers and it looks as if staid and dignified merchants of the city's more respectable streets in the city are in for a busy few hours this evening.

"Business in these things are good but training season ever is liable of fearful looking masks and costumes at a department store counter.

"Never better," agreed the clerk, who was attempting to wait on three or four clamoring boys at once. "We've sold a lot more than we did last year." He managed to gain himself heard above the noise of the customers.

Other dealers found no fault to find with the manner in which Hallowe'en stock was coming from the counters and shelves.

No Pea Shooters

Several dealers this year wouldn't stock pea shooters. "They're too dangerous," emphatically stated one merchant. "Any child can get a ban on them. I know one little boy who almost lost an eye one year ago from them. No, I wouldn't handle them." Another merchant put the innocuous pea shooters in his safe and locked the air tight. "They're about as bad."

Police have agreed to let the children have their fun this evening. But the fun must be within reason, and long as the children conduct themselves properly, the streets are theirs. But if there are any complaints regarding the carrying out of mischief of side-walk, or hilding the fense gate, etc., then the mischief makers might find themselves in the custody of the police station.

Hallowe'en is a night children look forward to exactly as they do Christmas, and Belleville is no exception to the general rule. Days have been spent in preparing for the night of October 31st, and the city will be thronged with a merry throng of ghosts, witches, goblins, and other strange creatures.

Hallowe'en is a night of fun, and the children have been looking forward to it for days. Many parties have been planned, and the children will be out in full force.

BELIEVED BAY STARTING OF FAMOUS RIVER

A party of tourists in a large sedan bearing California license plates stopped on the highway near the Devil's Elbow just west of the city today and spent some time gazing at the scenic beauties of "The St. Lawrence River," which they believed spread out shimmering in the morning sun just below, Who thinks the St. Lawrence River we've heard so much about" remarked one of the party from the sunny south.

"Ain't it beautiful," chimed in passenger No. 2.

"Always thought 'it was quite a bit wider than that", stated the driver of the car as he put the machine in car again and slowly moved off.

And then still would have chortled the idea that the St. Lawrence was a very small river indeed if the party had not visited the local Chamber of Commerce rooms, where they were given detailed instructions regarding the road ahead—and incidentally the knowledge of where that famous river really begins.

Nothing adds so much to your age as defective vision. Let very often women don't realize they need glasses. To be sure have your eyes examined now in my modern office. Perhaps we will be told truthfully whether you need glasses or not. Examination Hallowe'en was meant for the small-ike kiddies.

BEAR CUB CROSSES IN FRONT OF COWS

FOWL SUPPER AT CENTENARY

One of the Most Successful in History of Old Church

The scene is Centenary United Church, Sidney Township, Monday evening, in the Sunday School rooms adjoining the church, colorful decorations sprung from the walls and rafters of the building, while with the sparkling flower filled centre pieces the tastefully laden tables running the length of the room. Soft light, which glow bring into relief the shining silverware and table decorations on the snowy cloth. Willing helpers hurry from table to table arranging the last detail to make the repast a perfect one.

The occasion is the annual fowl supper held by the Church—one of the most famous suppers in the county.

Outside in the gathering gloom cars slide into parking places on the spacious grounds. Each car empties its load of passengers who have arrived from points throughout the County. Belleville is well represented. The gathering takes on greater hour the dove slowly enter the warm, rich, homely and neat themselves at the long tables. There are introductions and "hellos". Old friends renew acquaintances. New friends meet other guests for the first time. There is a constant multitude of the guests toward each other, and the waiters.

Under the attack of the guests the long tables become heavily high with all manner of goodies slowly disappear. More food in an inexhaustible supply is brought in. The first table of guests finally rises, with sighs of content and repleteness. Almost uncomfortably filled, they make room for the next sitting. Four times this is repeated. Four times the long tables are filled with the hungry. Four times they are cleared and heaped high with the same succulent food that has made past occasions so successful.

Then the music and the programme, that has been arranged. It is supplied with talent ranging from Grace Church, Trenton. The musical features is the combined Grace Church Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Searle, which delights with its fine pieces bring back memories of days agone to the older guests.

Vocal solos are offered by Miss Beatrice Tweed, Trenton; Mrs. Frank Hitchon, Belleville, Mr. Jesse Baker, Trenton, and an instrumental solo by Mr. Wm. Cook and Miss Patricia Meagher of Belleville, in their own inimitable style. Dancing by Miss Meagher, which packs and fill the spacious hall to the limit, and the audience which laisres go. There is round after round of applause after each effort.

Welcoming the occasion to address the many friends and visitors is Rev. C. Rushen, pastor of Grace Church, Trenton, who has been constantly assisting the church out the evening seconds, the rostrum and speak words of cheer and welcome. It is an inspiring address delivered with all the fervor and eloquence of the preacher. It leaves the assembly conscious of having received but a little more than the entertainment that has gone before.

The evening concludes with one of the most successful fowl suppers of the County has been brought to a successful conclusion. There is a vote of thanks tendered those who had taken part in the programme and who had helped put the evening across. There is also a hearty vote of thanks given by the Rev. F. J. Plant, pastor of Centenary church to the ladies without whose aid the evening could not have been held. That he had worked as well as anyone to make it such a success was not mentioned. But in a brief address to those present a beaming announcement was made by him that some one hundred and fifty dollars had been raised. It would further the future work of the church. "The affair has been a successful one; we all thank you" was the closing, heartfelt remark.

Then there is again the hum of cars as the machine, with lights blinking and glaring like lurid darts in the misty night. Soon it is quiet. There is only the hum of the Hydro. The last guest has left, they clear up the last remains of another successful evening.

ED. SIMMONS GREAT SPEAKER

"Competition in Our Day" Subject of The Address

"Competition in our day", was the subject taken by Ed. Simmons, president of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, to the members of the Y.M.C.A. Men's Bible Study group this evening held at the Y.M.C.A. The speaker was introduced by Rev. Newton Thomerson, past president of the Kiwanis Club, and presented by President Bill McEwan, with the president's pun".

"Webster defines competition as "the coming strife for the same object, friend, not our country, as both against the other — to gain strength," related the speaker as he went on to claim the better fully on the subject pertain to agriculture and industry. In reference to competition in commerce the speaker was of opinion, that inflation or deflation of currency was but a short cut to the "Big Jolt" work. He dwelt lightly on past conditions in churches, which today was being overshadowed by more co-operative and less competitive methods, in many years past. He also referred in personal terms to the competition of today.

As a last simile Mr Simmons referred to world armaments, which he referred to as the "Biggest Bluff" because of the late war. After relating to the massing of armaments that led up to the war Mr. Simmons turned directly to the modern warfare methods, that are being daily improved on by man. "When a city can be destroyed in the matter of hours and people wiped out by poison gases, etc., it is time that men of today made a serious study of the matter and diplomatic warfare through modern methods as service clubs," stated the speaker, who closed his instructive address with two poems relative to the future and what we can make it.

Mr. Simmons was introduced by president McEwan and thanked, on behalf of the members, by George Shorley. T's Mrs. Stan Wilbur delighted the gathering with a solo. The members were reminded of the monster Halloween party being staged for the kiddies of Belleville at the Y.M.C.A. this evening, and all available members will be on hand to assist in the work. The latest reports from the present Y.M.C.A. financial campaign showed that the T's Men's team was leading the field of canvassers as to the matter of subscriptions paid with 94 to their credit. A special boy's Hallowe'en will also be submitted to the club as one of their many services to the city.

BUILDING BOOM IS EXPECTED IN SPRING

One Close to Trade Expresses This Opinion

Optimism over business conditions in the Belleville district during the coming year is voiced by Major T. M. Thomson, research engineer of the Gypsum Lime and Alabastine Company of Caledonia. Major Thomson, who paid the city a brief visit this week, is a brother of J. Arnold Thomson of this city, and is a former resident of Belleville. During his several years with the company he has expanded its development and work in the insulation and soundproofing lines is well recognized.

"Our company is looking forward to a big building boom in the spring stated Major Thomson during half short visit. "At present things are quiet in the building trade, but next year will see one of the biggest booms in some time."

DEPRESSED BY ACUTE ACIDITY

There can surely be no doubt that the Kruschen treatment is a remedy for acidity that can give such permanent relief as in the women's case:—

"I suffered for many years from acidity in various forms," she writes. "At last it became so acute that every morning I woke with a gnawing pain and a great depression of spirits. I tried Kruschen Salts, and the effect was magical. The pain subsided and I felt quite cheerful. For about a month I have taken the daily dose of Kruschen ever before. This was about, two years ago, and the Kruschen does not lose its effect."—(Miss) E. M. H.

Kruschen is so effective with acidity because it neutralizes acid, takes all the torment out of it, and gently expels it from the system. And by thus stimulating your organs of elimination to perfect regular action, Kruschen will prevent the harmful effects from ever accumulating again. After that you'll experience no more misery after meals.

WORLD NEEDS NEW SPIRIT, DR. SEMPLE

Addresses Rotary Club in Interest of International Service Club

MUST CHANGE

Friendship Can Be Promoted Through Rotary

"He who would have beautiful roses in his garden must have beautiful rows in his heart", (from "A Book About Roses" by Dean Hole) was the theme text of a very interesting address by Rev. Dr. Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, before Belleville Rotary Club Monday, at the Bridge Casino. The program was prepared by the International Service Committee, and Dr. Semple, a Past President of Smith's Falls Rotary Club, spoke along the lines of international friendship and how to promote it. He was introduced as guest speaker to the club by Past President W. B. Deacon, and Rotary appreciation was also expressed by Robertson Lewis and President Bernstein.

"The world needs a new spirit", said Dr. Semple, quoting eminent speakers and writers who have pointed out the great need if international friendship is to be established on stable and lasting basis.

Germany's War Complex

Citing the vast sums being expended by nations of the world on war material as one of the chief hostilities in the promotion of international friendship, the speaker pointed out how the war spirit has gripped Germany and how it, above all, is to be taught in the schools and in text book recently published, and that even children under twelve years are to be inoculated with the war spirit through studies in geography and history, while adults will be educated in the air to strengthen the war will. Teaching the will to war, he said, is a step down the principle that a beautiful lake, for instance, must not be regarded for its scenic beauties and pleasure possibilities, but for what it contributed toward successful navigation in war. No teaching of international friendship there!

Sweet at Church Door

A military guard at the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem to keep religious peace from slaying each other, was cited by the speaker as showing the large field open to advocates of international friendship. From the man on the street, to the high potentate in charge of the world must change. Real friendship must be planted in the hearts of the world before the drift toward war can be effectually stopped. Hitler's attitude toward the Jew was cited by the speaker with the dire consequences to the spread of international good will, and cases of persecution in Canada and other lines were also quoted.

Rotary's Sixth Object in promoting International Good Will and doing good in various ways was outlined by the speaker, showing how work among children crippled in mind and body by such diseases as polio. He urged Rotarians to acquire the gift of kindly service, "Service before self", and to practice most who serve best," making the altogether lovely the supreme attitudes." Let it be known of them that "they went about doing good"—not once in a while, but all the time.

Friendly Children

International friendship can be promoted through Rotary's 3,000 clubs in many countries, also thru international games, such as baseball, cricket and football, as well as other sports. Rotary's Boys' Work is under way to promote world friendship among children, originating in the United States with a "World Day" on May 18th this year. Messages of good will were sent out over the earth by radio in the effort to promote a day of friendship by children. World Friendship picture post cards were exchanged, besides world good will messages and compositions on world peace. In this connection Dr. Semple told one of the thousands of good will messages received by a girl of 11 years, which is outstanding in its mature grasp of human sympathy and the beauty of expression of world friendship. The message read as follows:

Little Girl's Message

"If I owned a magic carpet I would visit every boy and girl in the world and say hello and play with them and learn their ways. If I had a magic wand I would make the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans into one big playground so all the boys and girls could get together and know each other better. I can only send a good will message through letter or radio. I wish that you will have fun in playing your games, and the boys and girls of the United States do. We hope that you can visit us in America. May you be well and happy every day. May you not think of American boys and girls as strange but rather as boys and girls like you, anxious to know you and be your friends. From over the sea we wave our hands and send you a good-will message and send you a good-will message to stand."

OFFICERS ELECTED

The Helping Hands Class of Bridge Street Church met Friday night, Oct. 20th at 7.30.

This being the first meeting of the year. The officers were elected, President, Amelia Archer. Vice-President, Pearl Derby, Secretary-Treasurer, Dorothy Archer.

When business of the evening was concluded, games were played. Refreshments were served by the teacher, Miss A. Morton and all went home happily.

PARKS BOARD NOT FINISHED

Plenty of Work To Be Done Before Winter Sets in

Leaves are falling. Cold November blasts are whipping the waterfront. Slumbering gardens are being resurrected and placed by careful hosts-holders. Flower beds are bare and bleak. Lawn mowers have long since ceased their busy hum. Only the soft swish of the rake through the piles of dead leaves on lawns and streets is heard. The city is digging in for the winter.

But not all activity has ceased throughout the city. There is still a busy little band of workmen, who are lingering at the task of planting bulbs in flower beds before the snow flies. Parks Board employees out, still find work to do before their season is finished.

There is just a little time left for instance. Hundreds of flower bulbs, which must be carefully planted in the prepared beds in order to be ready for the first smooth caress of the spring sun and rain, from which will start the growth of the various plants. Only each part scores of the bulbs are being carefully laid in their beds and covered again with the decayed leaves and litter to protect them from winter's cold blasts.

In the playgrounds the shouts and laughter of children at play have long since been stilled. Shade trees that spread a welcoming shelter from the hot rays of the summer show only the bare limbs with jagged tips. These must be trimmed and this employment must be taken down and carried away, ready for the early warm day of spring next year when again the process of setting up the swings will begin.

On other streets other trees are being pruned in the preparation for the season. Dead branches, and those which have been broken during summer storms are trimmed from the healthy trees and piled in little heaps for the needy of the districts in which the work is being done.

"Yes, we still have quite a bit of work to do before our programme is finished for the season," stated one member of the Board of Parks Commission. "We'll probably have one or two men working well into November."

TO PREVENT WRECKS

From the trend of the lines of new automobiles, it may even be predicted that the day of the aerodynamic which will not be wrecked when it runs off the road is near at hand. It may be so spherically built as to roll over with impunity and be so protected within as to make it impossible for the occupants to suffer injury. All that will be needed is to remove the ditches, poles, and fences, and have the highways run on roads through open fields. When the roads do, of necessity, pass through woods, motorists might be expected to be just a little more careful.

But the very element of danger is probably what prevents many accidents. If there were not much danger there would be some accidents which do not now happen.

Yet he is not much of a prophet who forecasts that it will not be many years before the loss of life will be cut down appreciably. The slaughter of innocent persons cannot continue at the alarming rate at which it has been climbing. Something will be done to save life on the roadways.

BOUNDED BY AN EGG-SHELL

Necessity, credited with being the mother of invention, has of late years proven to many to be a direful calamity, the effects of which have been somewhat lessened by the co-operation of the more well-off in society. And yet it has proven them the possessors of qualities of self-development they probably never expected they would command.

Even among a man in the building world who has seen some of the drawbacks of the modern dwelling and he sets to work to correct them. He has invented, or built an egg-house. Frederick J. Kiesler's new house is described in the London Daily Sketch as follows:

"The eggshell, he points out, is the perfect example of a structure in which walls, floor and ceiling are self-supporting in an architectural sense. The only point remaining to be cleared, up is how to make eggshell homes self-supporting in the economic sense. That, of course, is something for the economists to worry about. Mr. Kiesler is concerned only with the architectural aspects of the problem.

"Leaving that, his idea sounds completely scrambled let it be known that he has constructed a full-size model which is now on view in New York. The eggshell idea consists of what Mr. Kiesler calls "monolith" construction, which, because of its continuous tension, eliminates the need of supporting columns inside the house. It consists of one story on four different levels so the room all flow into each other. In order to let natural light into the house different parts of the shell are cut out and replaced by panels of glass which are really not windows but continuations on glass of the inside walls. The whole house might like that sort of thing—the whole outer eggshell might be constructed of glass, though the occupants of such a house obviously would like to exercise great restraint in the matter of stone-throwing.

"Mr. Kiesler maintains that the interior of the house of his dreams should 'foster the resistance to comfort.' He holds, further, that the house represents a solution to the housing problem of the average wage-earner of today, as construction is inexpensive and at the same time the building contains the comforts and maximum livable area of the houses of the rich.

"More interesting still are the materials which have been built into the structure, including rubber sponge, straw, rayon, and oiled silk. The rubber sponge in a brownish shade a half-inch thick is used for a curtain in the main living room since it is soundproof and at the same time permits ventilation. In the bathroom a blue shade of rubber sponge affords an unusual floor covering. The pearl gray drapes in the dining-room are made of a combination of rayon and straw. A new transparent water-repellent silk is used for the bedroom drapes to diffuse the light. Mechanically operated roll-top doors disappear into walls at the touch of a button. At the push of a button lights may be dimmed and noises shut off, the latter seemingly an ideal feature. Housed in such a home the householder of the future may well plant his slippered feet in the curve of the living-room wall and whistle, "Who's afraid of the big, bad wolf?"

Rage is the most effective producer of courage in the world.—Helen Woodward.

People generally quarrel because they cannot argue.—G. A. Chesterton.

Art and life ought to be hurriedly remarried and brought to live together. —Hugh Walpole.

LIKE SOME BRIGHT BIRD

If I could gain
My heart's desire,
The toil, the pain,
The clogging mire
Would count as naught
And I would deem
It cheaply bought,
My dearest dream!
No price could be
Too high to pay,
If I could see
(One sun-filled day)
My heart's desire
Like some bright bird
Flit nigh and higher
'Til, thrilled and spurred,
My hand could clasp
Its song and fire;
Heaven in my grasp
With heart's desire!

MRS. EMILY MURPHY, of Edmonton, widely known through her writings as "Janey Canuck," is dead. and another bright spirit has winged away to a brighter sphere. "Janey Canuck's" kindly heart was reflected in her life and writings, and it was said truly of her that "her whole object in life was to give aid and comfort to others." What better or brighter epitaph could any one hope for? She was an Ontario girl having been born in Cookstown and her life was bright with good deeds and helpful contribution to community and national causes. She is credited with having opened the Senate to women through her fight to have women declared "persons" in the meaning of the act which defined eligibles for high office in Canada. As a Magistrate in Edmonton, the first woman in the British Empire to attain this honor, Mrs. Murphy won fame and respect through her wise decisions. Her name will long live in memory as one of the outstanding Canadians of her time.

BELLEVILLE MARKET on a cold Saturday morning is an inspiration to city folks who hurry along well wrapped up, determined to do their marketing, and return to their warm homes as speedily as possible. The farmers and their wives and daughters, offering produce for sale, do not seem to mind the frigidity of the atmosphere, and the bright rosy cheeks of the womenfolk from the country, and pleasant smiles indicate the perfect health and happiness, which is not bothered by such trifles as a descending mercury in the thermometer. Outdoor life and plenty of hard work and good food does something to you which makes life much fuller, brighter and better.

There had been a railway collision near a country town in Virginia, and a shrewd lawyer had engaged Uncle Richmond to be one of the disaster.. He noticed an old colored man with a badly injured head and hurried up to him where he lay moaning on the ground.

"How about damages?" began the lawyer.

But the sufferer waved him off.

"G'way, boss, g-way," he said. "I never hit de train. I never done sich a thing in all mah life so help me Gawd. Yo' can't git no damages outen me."

Betty had been invited to have lunch at the home of a little friend, and she had been carefully coached about her manners before she left home.

When the child returned, her mother asked, "I hope you didn't ask for more than one piece of cake, Betty?"

"Oh, no, mother," replied the little girl. "I just asked for the recipe, so that you could make some. And Mrs. Smith gave me another piece?"

Isaac Watts as a boy, acquired the habit of answering questions in rime. This plagued the family, and his father finally threatened punishment if the "foolishness didn' stop."

Soon young Isaac repeated the offense and, sure enough, the rod was produced. Young Isaac dropped to his knees and pleaded, "Oh, father, on me mercy take, and I will no more verses make!"

INTERESTING FACTS about HUMAN BODY

Skeleton Weighs Only Twenty-Five Pounds

By Lewis R. Hoak, M.D., Ph.D., Formerly Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The following estimates have been made as to the distribution of the body weight of an average adult say of 154 pounds:

	Pounds
Muscles and Tendons	62
Skeleton	10.7
Skin	10.7
Fat	30
Brain	3
Chest organs	3
Abdominal Organs	10.7
Blood	10.7

LOSES E. DISCH

Only 25 pounds of the body in a chemical sense—and in the final analysis the body is really a bundle of chemicals—is this particular individual weighing 154 pounds would be composed largely of water. That is, eighty-nine lbs., or 58 per cent of the total weight, would be water. Another 30 pounds, or 19 per cent, although known scientifically to be a part of a human being as a solid mass rather than a watery one.

The solid elements consist of oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen, carbon, phosphorus, sulphur, potassium, chlorine, iodine, fluorine, potassium, sodium, calcium, lithium, magnesium, iron, manganese, copper and cobalt—in other words, solid metals.

These solids are contained in the proteins, the carbohydrates (starches and sugars), the fats and the minerals which, in combination, take in as food.

Of the balance of 154 pounds as we are considering would lose, on the average, six pounds as pure fluid or water together with about two pounds of other matter.

A tremendous amount of energy would, of course, be produced by such a body every twenty-four hours. This estimate approximates three thousand six hundred and forty foot-tons. One-sixth of which would be spent in work and recreation—nearly all—in heat. The enormous amount of energy developed by the body is appreciated when one recalls that a foot-ton is the amount of energy required to lift one ton to the height of one foot.

At each heart beat such an individual would force out one ounce and three-quarters of an ounce of blood. Figuring that the average heart beats seventy-two times per minute the heart would, in twenty-four hours, do an amount of work equal to about ninety foot-tons.

Such a person would breathe at the rate of about seventeen times each minute. In twenty-four hours he would use up about sixteen cubic feet of oxygen, and the same amount of carbonic said would also be produced. Such a person would be giving about eight ounces of carbon. One pint of water would also be given off in vapor for exhalation the same period. The amount of water, carbonic and the various solutes that are given off by the skin and kidneys, however, would vary greatly. Twenty ounces of water is the average.

Other fascinating data about the body may be gathered from reading books on physiology. Many of which are available in non-technical language. The writer knows about the workings of our own body the more we respect it.

Dr. Risch's Daily Diet Hint

One of the best and easiest ways for a lean person to gain weight is to cut down on exercise and to increase the food intake. Then people are often of a nervous temperament and they need to eat more energy than do average people. Attention to balance is also important. When nervousness is prominent a physician should be consulted. The foods to be stressed for increase in weight are the starches, sugars and fats.

Two of the 10, received full pardons. The other eight were given six month suspensions to be followed by pardons.

Last evening the Chief Ranger of the King's Branch, the Hon. Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, was the guest of the Hastings Bar Association at Hotel Quinte on the occasion of his visit to Belleville as trial Judge at the Supreme Court jury sittings. Among those present were: Messrs. M. Wright, J. R. Hall, W. C. Wilkins, K. G. Porter, K.C. M.P.; J. A. Hutcheson, K.C.; W. C. Mikel, K.C., P. K. O'Flynn, W. Fonton, Sheriff Morrison and Walter Wiseman and Hall. In the absence of the president of the association, Mayor Wills, owing to illness, the chair was occupied by the vice president, Mr. Wright.

Mr. Henry Rose, manager of the Consumers Cold Storage Company, St. John, N.B., was in the city today and paid the Ontario a friendly call.

Col. Pouliot has received an invitation to be present at the fireworks banquet which will be held at the National Club, Toronto, on November 2nd.

Mr. J. T. Litson, M.A., delivered a lecture this evening at the Y.M.C.A. Sunday afternoon at the Central "A Night Start." McKay and Detlor sang a duet.

At a meeting of the city council committee of the city council of which Ald. Chas. J. Wills is chairman, a discussion took place regarding the best plan to adopt for getting the supply of water from Ward's Island. The motion of Ald. Chown, seconded by Ald. Pope, that the engineer be instructed to engage Mr. Willis Chipman, hydraulic engineer of Toronto, to come to the city and give an expert opinion as to the best plan to be adopted.

Halloween to-night.

City Engineer Hulme has a staff of men engaged in cleaning Front Street.

The police found five dogs without owners on the streets outside a store on Front Street last night.

The Intelligencer's flag and that on the public building floated at half mast today as tokens of mourning for the death of Sir John Abbott, ex-Premier of Canada.

Mr. James Bowerman will leave shortly for Gilmour where he will open his new business.

Mrs. Gibson, a well known member of St. Andrew's Church choir, will leave shortly for British Columbia, where she will join her husband who is engaged in the railroad business in that province.

Mr. Lemon was formerly engaged in the grocery business in this city.

Mr. Robert Boyle is agent in this city for the new writing machine, Caligraph.

Mr. George S. Henderson, M.P., of this city is conducting the Crown business at the Kingston assizes.

There are six children now at the Marchmont Home. During the month of October have been provided for 100 boys and 80 girls.

Halloween will doubtless be celebrated this evening by the boys in the accustomed manner. The pea-shooter will be conspicuously in the evening's entertainment and the cabbage patch to stalk will also, probably, assume a conspicuous place. Door knobs, ball rolls and knockers may likewise receive attention and chances are that the rising generation will go in for their accustomed fun.

A young resident of this city goes frequently to see a young lady who resides in the country. He went there one evening recently and on leaving at the conclusion was out and the mess hemmed with dirt by a heavy rain. The police chief has now. It took him but a little while this afternoon and suddenly like a flash from the blue he turned up a squawking and it seems one of his shoelaces had become untied and he wanted me to tie it, although I never perfectly well that he can tie his own shoelaces. But he claimed he had forgotten how to do it and from memory I told him it'd give him a penny if he tied it himself, and naturally he stooped down and tied it in a wink like a past master and I gave him his penny and low and behold we hadn't gone 12 steps before the squawking started up again and the shoelace was trailing on the ground once more, me a witness.

The little devil deliberately untied it, pop said, and me said, Of course he did, but he wouldn't admit it, he insisted that a herd had stepped on it and pulled out the bow, and by that time we were making a noise people were looking at me as though I was a wholesale murderous, so I had to give him another penny to refrain his mouth. Scarcely again, he warned him it was the last piece of bribery on my part, so when he got down to the cattle-washing a 3rd time and claimed a policeman had untied his shoe, I was determined to stick to my guns. So I told him firmly that he had carried one of my packages for me he could have his penny, but that we got back to the house providing his shoe was tied instantly and didn't come loose again, but I gave him to understand that my penny would be a reward for carrying the package and for noticing this, and it worked like a charm and I didn't have another speck of trouble with him. EUROPE SEEN AS TRADE BAR

Hudson Bay Official Says Discord in Europe Unsettling

Montreal, Oct. 31.—The critical political situation of present-day Europe is a serious drawback to world economic recovery of which there are definite signs, said Major W. Ashley Cooper, governor of Hudson's Bay Company, in an interview here. Mr. Cooper arrived in Montreal on his way to Europe after his third annual inspection of the company's posts in Canada.

Germany was the storm centre of Europe and "until the situation in Germany is more clearly understood recovery will be substantially retarded," said Major Cooper. The world cannot become economically interdependent, he continued, which made it essential that peace and good-will should prevail if the world was to be restored to prosperity. No country could accomplish that task alone, he declared, signs of returning prosperity were to be found in the balance sheets or many large companies but no real advance would come

TOLMIE WANTS UNION GOV'T.

New Government Formed After Election Says Leader

VANCOUVER, Oct. 31.—(CP)—Premier S. F. Tolmie has again given notice he is not depending upon upon candidates named as his supporters to govern his action after the British Columbia election.

In a public address here last night he remarked, "the new government will be formed during the election, but after the election."

This is in line with his stand that after his policy is made known to all members, who favor a union form of government. Only a dozen candidates in the 47 seats have been named as Tolmie Unionist, Government supporters, but many are running as independents with freedom to decide affiliation later.

"I have no doubt," said the Premier, "the next government will be made up of the best men procurable, regardless of previous affiliations, a group ready to place the province ahead of private or party interest."

MONTREAL DAIRY PRODUCE PRICES

Prices were higher on butter, fresh eggs and about all dairy lines yesterday.

The butter market in the afternoon was quoted at 19¼c to 20c per lb., and mostly at the latter figure, which compares with last week's close of 19½c per lb. Decreasing production and receipts have reduced the heaviness of heavier stocks, while dealers now have to resort to storage supplies, which cost above the quotations by from 2c to 3c for light arrivals. Receipts, 57 boxes.

Fresh eggs continued very scarce, and prices were firm but just arriving from Ontario were being quoted mostly at 40c for extras, 34c for firsts, 30c for pullets and 18c for seconds. Storage eggs in cartons of 1-2 doz. remain at 21c for extras, 19c for firsts, best to 19½c for seconds. Receipts, 223 cases.

The cheese market was quoted unchanged at 9c for Ontarios and 8½c for Quebecs by some dealers while others were 9½c for Ontarios and 8¾c for Quebecs. Receipts, 378 boxes.

A Resuscitated Hero

By Glen F. Stillwell

"The way to win any woman, them too far apart. The thickness of a thin dime is right."

"That started the argument which ended surprisingly by Denny removing his shirt and jumping into the lake. "You don't seem to need me," he explained ruefully. "I'll send a boat out to tow you in.

"Don't be silly," chided Caroline. "It's at least a mile to shore. You'll never make it."

"I can't," puffed Denny, swimming doggedly and wasting energy.

"Come back, Denny," called out Caroline, plaintively, "if you don't I'll never speak to you again."

Denny attempt to whistle and only swallowed a pint of water. "Why should I come back," he sputtered. "You don't need me and I'm too dark and handsome—and I'm not clean."

Caroline started to speak then checked herself. Had Denny been able to see the look of concern in her eyes he might have changed his tactics. But Denny, who had spent most of his energy showing off and since he was not a good swimmer he was having plenty of trouble. He heard Caroline cry and heard her, he gritted his teeth and continued to swim shoreward.

He might have made it had it not been for a cramp in the calf of his right leg. When the pain gripped him he floundered, swallowed some more water and felt himself going down. He would have called out for help but he thought of Caroline's stern words, mocking, and he struggled on. Then, too, he thought she could not help him because in a moment of folly he had ripped all but a part of gasoline from the gas tank before they left the Lake Casino, of course, didn't know this.

Denny found himself in the position of a man who had burned his bridges behind him. There was a sinking, drumming in his ears and he had a wildly distorted vision of Caroline floating down the lake. Then he was in her arms and he thought that if drowning was this pleasant he wasn't afraid. He dosed his eyes and let himself go . . .

Caroline in the meantime saw Denny's plight, was working feverishly with the oars. When she gave accidental glance at the gasoline gauge laid her fears to rest. Then with admirable resourcefulness she found a cabin tin of reserve gas and filled the tank.

In another moment she had the engine started and was standing by Denny's direction. She reached him just in time to grab him over the gunwales, then she administered first aid until she saw his eyelids quiver. He was coming around and very beautifully, too, for he felt himself being cradled on someone's soft arm. He opened his eyes and looked into Caroline's and his heart thumped madly because he thought she had been crying. He was somewhat puzzled as to how she had vanished him. "How'd you get the engine started?" he asked weakly.

"I found some tools in one of the lockers," her lips were drawn tight, "and started it myself. What made you act so foolishly?"

"I was having lovely dream about you, why didn't you let me drown?" Denny asked.

For a moment she didn't speak and Denny was surprised to feel her arm tighten about his neck. "Because I—I didn't want you to go down," she said, "I'm funny."

Denny considered this solemnly. "But I'm not dark and handsome, and you don't need me," he argued.

Her face was quite close to him as she answered, slowly: "Perhaps not, but—but you need me—don't you?"

He reached up and pulled her down to him with both arms. "Why, yes, darling," he whispered, but he didn't tell her that he had found the water where he had left his banjo and violin by Messrs. Kenneth Douglas and Ralph Stapley, and a selection on the monthly organs by Mr. Leonard Waterfall, were all greatly enjoyed.

A contest was then put on by Mrs. O. Stapley and Misses Carolyn Barnes and Leonard Stapley.

EXTEND CALL

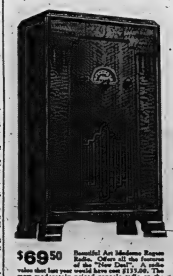
Caledonia, Oct. 31.—(CP) The Caledonia and Onondaga Baptist Congregations have extended an unanimous call to Rev. R. A. Price, returned missionary from Honduras, on furlough at Guelph to become minister of the Caledonia charge.

6 YEARS AGO TO-DAY

In 1925, while skeptics and critics were loudly declaring that the direct operation of a radio set from A/C current (eliminating all batteries, chemicals, chargers, etc.) could not be done, young "Ted" Rogers, of Toronto, DID IT—and this, Canada's contribution to the development and progress of radio, was the greatest forward step since the invention of the vacuum tube.

Now, in its third year, the Rogers stands supreme as the pioneer of the Electric Radios. Today radio sets operating direct from any light socket, without batteries, hook-up chargers, are not merely an accepted success but are the standard, and, with still another year, completely supersede battery sets where electric current is available.

ROGERS Again "Scoops" The Radio World!



Our Prediction Six Years Ago that Rogers—the first electrical radio—would make all battery radios obsolete, proved true. It's history now how Rogers led and led. And Rogers-Majestic are making history again. Now they announce another sensational achievement—the Full-Spray, Seal-Shielded 7-Point Guaranteed Tube! Again Rogers-Majestic offer you NOW what other radios will offer you in the future.

The Full-Spray, Seal-Shielded 7-Point Guaranteed Tubes are the greatest development in radio since R. S. Rogers introduced to the startled radio world the perfected A/C tube that made the electric radio a reality. Seal-Shielded, they will undoubtedly become the standard for all makes of radio. To-day they are exclusive to Rogers Radio and Majestic Radio—developed and perfected by Rogers engineers in Canada.

Look in the Back of Your Radio—
If the Tubes Are Covered With Tin Cans, It's Old-Fashioned—Even Though It be New

If you would fully enjoy Radio's million dollar performance, you must have a radio equipped with the Seal-Shielded tube. Ask your dealer or write us for booklet of facts on this Seal-Shielded tube and Seal-Shielded radio cans. Know whether the Rogers-Majestic "New Deal" in radio means.

• The "New Deal". Every new model of Rogers and Majestic, regardless of price, now embraces all the major advances in radio introduced during the past three years—features that have heretofore been available only in the more expensive model.

1. Superheterodyne Circuit with selectivity and tone control.
2. Automatic Volume Control to maintain a uniform level of tone volume.
3. Tone Color Control to accentuate bass or treble notes as wish.
4. Sensitivity—capability of picking up distant stations.
5. Full Range Electro-Dynamic Speaker.

The Exclusive Rogers Full-Spray, Seal-Shielded Guaranteed 7-Point Tubes

THE 7-POINT SUPERIORITY OF SEAL-SHIELDING

1. Affords the only perfect shield.
2. Eliminates vibration caused by loose contacts around the tubes.
3. Permits increased power.
4. Absorbs and carries off "charges" and excess heat which cause distortion and damage.
5. Preserves uniform supersensitiveness and prevents "hoo-spots."
6. Insures perfect electrical fidelity.
7. Greatly prolongs the life of the tube—which is one of the reasons why Rogers-Majestic Seal-Shielded tube is fully guaranteed.

Seal-Shielding is Exclusive to Rogers and Majestic — Insist on It!

The above illustration discloses the difference between the old-fashioned type tube and the Seal-Shielded tube that absorbs or conveys off the "charges."

Green-Eyed Monster

You're very frank about admitting you're in the clutches of the green-eyed monster. But I can't see why you, on the way to a university career, should want to bind this girl to you by forbidding her from receiving the attention of the other fellow. And it seems to me that in taking any such step as giving her a ring, even if it were not a diamond, you would put yourself in a false position.

If you want to give her something to remember you by, why not give her a writing portfolio, and tell her you hope it will suggest that she will sometimes write you a letter.

Had Quarrel over Something Petty

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 25 years old, and the girl I love is my brother's sister-in-law. We're both college students. At a recent week-end which we spent at my brother's we had a foolish quarrel over petty matter, and we parted in anger without knowing that I was wrong, but I'm too stubborn to confess. Also, you see, we've end I caused some trouble by carrying news from my girl friend to my brother, and she will have nothing to do with me. How can I atone for this tale-bearing? I want to be friends with her before it's too late. I tried to apologize but in vain.

Kelly

It seems to me that it would be better not to attempt to force an immediate reconciliation. To carry tales from one friend to another always arouses indignation, and you'd better wait until that simmers down a little before you again say how sorry you are that it occurred.

I'd like to send you a present, my dear boy, but do let this be a lesson to you about tale-bearing in future. And here's hoping that the girl makes up.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

After the age of thirty the complexion of every woman is benefitted by the use of a massage cream which softens the skin surface, acts as an insurance against the mean lines that Mr. Time is so fond of etching.

The home cosmetic chemist can make a cream of melting together one-half ounce of white wax, one-half ounce of spermaceti, one ounce of coconut oil, one ounce of lanolin, two ounces of oil of sweet almonds, removing from the fire, adding one ounce of orange flower water to which a few drops of oil of lavender have been added. Fluff with an egg beater until the mixture starts to thicken, pour into microscopic porcelain jars.

Frocks aren't getting any easier on the feminine shape. They seem to be designed with the idea that every femme is blessed with the perfect figure, which causes a lot of sobbing and lamenting on the part of the gals who are built like normal women.

The time has come when the average woman, especially the one who is overweight, must be properly harnessed. It must be properly hat-fitted corset will do. It is a garment which is not to be selected casually. Sometimes a slight alteration will make an improvement in the silhouette.

Corsetiers who have been in the business for years declare that the cash customer is not qualified to make her own selection, that she needs expert advice. Doesn't cost anything; she might as well have it.

Extend your arms out at the sides, then measure from one someone will have to do this for you—and you will be surprised to discover that it is often the same as your height. That is, if you are properly proportioned. The diameter of the chest should be one-fifth that of the height, the length of the hand one-tenth. Women pay too much attention to weight; it is proportion that is important. A few extra pounds mean nothing at all if they be beautiful, curtage graceful, movement rhythmic.

The white of an egg performs as an astringent cosmetic. It's helpful to the vitelin of enlarged pores and an oily complexion.

Bathe the face with soap and warm water and dry. Beat the egg white just enough so it can be handled. Spread over the skin surface, including the neck. Let it dry. It remain on until the flesh feels drawn. Lave away with tepid water, dry, pat in the favorite massage cream. There you are.

Just one more evening frock should be in every wardrobe, if one has to go without a new topcoat—it's of geranium red velvet in the princess style. The skirt is of material as the waist and tiny velvet flowers round the armholes. High in front, no back at all, and a long train. There is a tiny muff of velvet flowers.

Go to the Orient for your sartorial influence and you will be correct and picturesque. A new evening wrap is a Mandarin cape in orange velvet, lined ladies, tiny bands of lions from throat to hem. It flares like a pagoda roof and is lined with satin to match the velvet.

We glitter in our new lame evening frocks. A new model in crinkled red and gold lame is worn with a cape of stiffened gray chiffon edged with lame wings of the gray chiffon mark the cape.

Out in the country the dressmakers are going for inspiration. And so we have, for evening, the new berry shades, nicest of which is the purple that approximates crushed wild blackberries. This color is used for a satin gown trimmed with gold ornaments and worn with a coat of matching blackberry velvet collared with blue fox.

Why worry about a fur coat when clogs, coats are so attractive? Here is a smart model in black cloth with an insert yoke and upstanding collar of black Persian lamb. The dolman symbole is met by, a sleeve made entirely of fur, ending in a pointed cuff near the fingers.

We are marked now with initials on everything. The latest initials are to be embroidered so to have one's initials handstitched onto the back of plain college sports gloves, either in a matching or a contrasting color.

STEEL MAIN EXPANSION

Advice to the Lovelorn

He's Green With Envy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm in love with a girl who loves another boy, and it makes me green with envy. We all went graduated from high school about a year ago, and this other chap and I took to dances, escorted plays and various affairs during the last two years of school.

Now I'm going to college, but she was lucky enough to get a good job and is not going to college idea, so if I get away I'm afraid it'll be a case of "out of sight, out of mind." Could you give me any suggestions about how to make this girl interested in me? How about giving her something to remember you by, a ring, even if it were not a diamond, you would put yourself in a false position.

If you want to give her something to remember you by, why not give her a writing portfolio, and tell her you hope it will suggest that she will sometimes write you a letter.

You catch cold easily when your resistance is low. When it is high you are not likely to be infected with "flu" germs or to suffer ill effects from exposure to storms, drafts or chilly rooms.

You can put yourself in fighting trim for winter by adding VIP to your daily diet. Made with hot or cold milk, this new Vitamin-Iron-Protein food-drink will steadily build up your resistance in three ways:

1 By bringing you valuable amounts of the anti-infective Vitamin A which science has proven to have a marked effect in increasing resistance and to be of particular benefit to eyes, sinuses, air passages and throat.

2 By bringing you rich supplies of Vitamin B_1 to stimulate appetite, digestion, promote intestinal regularity and strengthen your nerves.

3 By bringing you iron to revitalize your blood, and increase energy and strength. (A cup of VIP supplies as much iron as a dozen eggs, or three-quarters of a pound of spinach, or one-third of a pound of beef liver.)

You'll enjoy building up your resistance with VIP. Its nut-like, chocolate-malt flavor is very delicious.

Both Mines And Stocks Say Gain in Slow Trading

Lack of Definite Trend in Wall Street Cause—No Indications of Recovery Although Some Issues Showed up a Point

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 31—Toronto Stock Exchange listings made 31 almost unanimous for the down side in today's early session, only three stocks showing gains at noon. They were Western Tour, up 1½; Hiram Walgraves up ½, and Canada Permanent up 2 points.

Interlisted shares trailed the unsteady course charted by the New York market. Smelters dropped a point, Nickel was off 10 cents to $18.90, Trevalian dropped to 12¾, Ford A at 11 was unchanged and C.P.R. at 13¾ was down ¼.

Walker's common worked back to 27½, off ¼ and preferred of similar amounts appeared in Industrial Alcohol and Distillers Seagram.

Yesterday's sharp sell-off in the New York list on a rising gold market made traders cautious today and there was no attempt to reach for stocks. Volume dropped to a low turnover, Walker's common and Smelters and a few of the speculative marked up again a point or so before noon but these were forfeited in a subsequent period of drifting. In early afternoon the leading issues were trading with Monday's closing price level with distillery and metal shares firming.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Oct. 31—(CP)—Mining shares showed a slow leaning today but recessions in no instances exceeded a point. The heavy trading of the senior gold shares that marked recent sessions was absent today and the lower price for the yellow metal quoted in Washington.

Lack of a definite direction in the Wall Street market dictated cautious operations on the Standard and traders appeared inclined to await developments. Dealings dropped back to 627 but firmed a little before noon to show a net gain of 20 cents. McIntyre touched $48 and recovered to 47¾ and a loss of 25 cents. Hollinger lost 10 cents and Lake Shore 25 cents.

Nickel-Rossanda moved within a narrow price range and held within 25 cents of Monday's close. At noon Nickel was down 3 cents at $18.95 and Rossanda unchanged at $24.

Irregularity lower at the opening on the industrial side moderately to light turnover but the leaders were still below Monday's closing level at mid afternoon. Buying of the senior gold issue was down sharply in volume from Monday's trade, the list adopting New York's cautious attitude.

McIntyre receded to 46 and Dome to 27 when sales were off less than a dollar each. Losses of 10 to 40 cents were met by Hollinger, Wright Hargreaves, Teck Hughes and Hoskins before the bulk part of the recessions were erased.

NEW YORK FINANCIAL

New York, Oct. 31 (CP)— The stock market was unable to dig in its heels today and check the swift skid which developed in yesterday's session.

The list wavered however, and showed some disposition to recover, although a sprinkling of issues managed to hold their positions to more than a point. Among stocks which showed losses of two points or two above yesterday's close by early afternoon were Allied Chemical, International Harvester, Goodyear, Case, Texas Gulf Sulphur, American Smelting and U. S. Smelting. Steel issues were about steady.

Narrow changes were the rule in Canadian securities. McIntyre Porcupine gained 1-2 of a point but most issues were virtually unchanged from previous closings in shares of Dome, Hollinger, Nickel and Canadian Pacific. On the curb Hiram Walker added a point while Lake Shore showed quite a shade. Dominion government obligations were steady to 1-4 of a point lower.

Eggs remained at 35c a dozen with no farmer's butter being offered for sale. No other variations in prices were noted.

Wild ducks from the north commenced their flight to the south and in earnest this week. On Tuesday morning large flocks of the birds were visible from the government dock, following the flight of Quinte Island and up to Massassaga. During the night Monday, a number of wild ducks lit on a gentleman's island in the Bay to continue their flight to the south at dawn. It is believed the birds are the first of the black Northern variety, now on their way down.

Heavy Precipitation During Month October

Blustering October gales which swept this district during the past month swept off leaving behind a total downfall of five inches of snow and one and three-fifth inches of rain, according to official registration at the city pump house. The total precipitation, however, did not exceed September's softer showers. PROBLEM TO DEAL WITH TRANSIENTS

14,000 Meals Served at Local Hostel Last Winter

At the annual meeting last evening of the Board of the Belleville Red Cross Society the activities of the past year were reviewed and the new season's plans discussed. It was decided that the President would ask the city council to initiate a campaign among the municipalities from Kingston to Oshawa to bring pressure to bear upon the government to take some attempt to deal with the transient problem.

The meeting saw in the growth of transient relief, a problem to deal with which up to the present time has been a responsibility placed on national lines. While ready to assume a definite obligation to care for transients within the city, there some plan for uniform treatment should be inaugurated.

With the President, Mr. Cyril Wills in the chair, reports of each phase of Red Cross work undertaken in the city for the winter of 1933-33 were received. These showed that fourteen thousand meals were given at the Red Cross Hostel, one thousand garments were distributed by the committee of which Mrs. F. Stuart Lasier is convener, four hundred and fifty young women took the course in home nursing for which Mrs. P. C. MacLaurin was convener, local physicians, nurses and public health instructors. Miss M. P. Ross school nurse, was convener of the school nursing course and Miss Lorna Potter instruction. Nutrition classes were organized and carried out under the leadership of Mrs. J. E. Bateman and Miss Louise Wallbridge.

Col. W. N. Ponton long a Red Cross enthusiast gave from his wealth of past experience a heartening talk to the organization which is endeavouring to take steps to ameliorate the transient problem.

The election of officers was adjourned until next week.

HALLOWE'EN

BRIDGE STREET Y.P.S.
Comic costumes, popcorn and pumpkin pie signified the celebration of Hallowe'en by the Bridge St. Young People's Society in the Church parlors last evening. Some seventy-five were present at the festivities held in charge of the society's social committee under the convenership of Miss McQuire.
The main feature of the evening in effect made it difficult for the judging of the various costumes. The best dressed lady was Miss Beatrice Hamilton and the best dressed man, Mr. Elmer Dixon. The lady's most original costume was won by Mr. Reid. Mack Gordon's was the choice for the most original dressed man. Mrs. (Dr.) Semple, Miss L. Brown and Mr. W. B. Deacon were the judges.
Clay games traditional to the occasion were a part of the program. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the festivities.

HOLLOWAY ST. Y.P.S. HOLD BIG NIGHT

Imagine a real, live spooky ghost standing at the door, welcoming the guests of the evening, and started a little early for the members of Holloway Street Young People's Club, but members of that live little organization found themselves in games and amusements as the church parlours last evening, even if they were a day early. After being ushered in by the ghost who greeted the guests at the building, Miss Dorothy West, Social Vice-President of the Club, took on the task of keeping the large number of girls and club members and friends occupied. Here were the usual Hallowe'en games, with decided variations, and with the usual happy ending of informal evenings which concluded with refreshments.

"Oilmen" Score 2-1 Win in Last Minute of Play

Les Tice, Goalie, Keeps Team in Fight By Brilliant Play

Staging a belated rally in the final seconds of play the champion Belleville Cities Service hockey team emerged winners over the heralded Brockville Magedomas seniors by the score of 2 to 1 in a Kingston City League fixture played at the Jock Harty Arena last night.

Setting a terrific pace in the early stages of the contest the two clubs battled a scoreless tie until after fifty minutes of hockey had been played, when Lowery broke through the local defence and rifled a hard low shot past Les Tice only to have Harry Nickol, local centre, solo the length of the ice and knot the score some three minutes later. Until the final minute of play the locals pressed like a team possessed and were rewarded for their efforts, when Pete Morgan, after the locals had swarmed around Murray in the Brockville net pushed in what proved to be the winning goal.

Although penalties were meted out frequently and often by the officials in charge the game proved rather clean as the majority of the penalties were of a minor nature, although the locals suffered by a greater degree than did the Magedomas. Three times during the game the locals battled the "Easterners" two men short, six and five, while during these periods of overwhelming odds, the locals demonstrated his goal-tending ability and received many rounds of applause as he single-handed thwarted the Brockville threats. Only once were they hurled at the local citadel. Vice was undoubtedly the star of the night although the local forwards deserve credit for their hockey ability in the third period, when goals were needed as they literally overhauled Murray, the Brockville netminder, before Morgan scored the winning counter. The game was the fastest and most hectic yet played this season, in the Kingston City League.

Manager Dudley introduced a new face to the fans in the person of Jerry Brickel, ex-Ottawa and Halifax senior. Although Brickel lacked condition he will eventually fill in nicely to assist Jim Murray and Earl MacDonald, who for two reasons have formed a veteran service for the "Oilmen" with their defensive efforts.

Coach Kincaide changed his forward lines slightly last night, when Roy Covert worked at centre flanked by Carl and Pete Morgan. The old Kincaide lad skated miles and checked like the proverbial fiend to thwart many efforts of the Magedomas. The second line saw Fred MacDonald on left wing, Nickol with Harry Morgan on the opposite side of the rink and Harry Nickol at centre. It was during the final moments of the second period that the local "sorrel-top" showed his wares. Braid and Jim McIlvaine were the defensive duo used. Many penalties were issued throughout.

For the Magedomas, Murray in the nets, Kennedy and Lowery were by far the best. The latter elevates the Cities Service three points and second position in the Kingston City League.

The lineups:

Brockville—goal Murray, defence Dexter and Gordon, centre Kennedy, wings Amey and Walsh, subs. McMahon, Lowery, Cowan, Pete Morgan.

Cities Service—goal Tice, defence Sherry and McDonald, centre Covert, wings Carl Morgan, Pete Morgan, subs. Nickol, MacDonald, Braid, H. Morgan and McGuire.

Referee—Dudley. Goals—Pete Devlin.

1st period—no score.
2nd period—no score.

RIDERS ARE COMING

Austin Defrate

Johnny Gorak

J. Grassick

Here are three more Regina Roughriders who meet Hamilton Tigers in the first game of the western Canada play-offs on Saturday, November 4. The Riders had a close call when the millers of Moose Jaw knocked them off in one game, but in the play-off for the Saskatchewan title, the Regina team was just a little too experienced and walked off the field with an 11-0 victory.

ALEX. J. MORRISON
Correct From Architecture

ALEX MORRISON says:

It seems to be the great ambition of every player to hit a hooked ball.

The main reason for such an aim so far as I have been able to learn is because: "The pros hit them that way."

The pros hit a hooked ball because it affords more run and thereby brings greater distance.

This advantage does not hold in the majority of cases. Most good players hook because they can't do anything else—just as the ordinary player is unable to overcome his slice.

The hooked ball is the more difficult to control—very often ducking toward the ground in a much sharper curve than any slice could describe.

This ducking cuts off many yards of flight and the run is seldom in the right direction.

The average player can allow for his slice and, in time, hit a straight ball.

From the Hockey Training Camps

Jean Pusie has started off on the right foot. The wrestling defenceman, who moved his colorful personality from the Western Canada League to the N.H.L. in the offseason, scored a goal before he had played twenty minutes in a New York Ranger uniform.

Pusie's marker started Les Patrick's team on a scoring rampage that brought them a 6-3 win over Boston Bruins in an exhibition game at Quebec Sunday afternoon. Bob Gracie, who arrived at Boston from Toronto via Ottawa, fitted nicely into the team machine and helped himself, two goals during the matinee.

• • •

The Cook-Boucher-Cook started the new season just where they left off last year. Centreman Frank got one goal all by himself and combined with Bill and Bun to snare another.

The test gave Patrick a chance to work on his defence pairings. Defenders should be able to dig in any time on the job. He has been practicing his right wings at shooting from the left boards and his left wings patrolmen at sniping from the right side of the rink.

Babe Siebert, hold-out left wing, was given an Indianapolis Patrick justfooling when he was left at Montreal while the rest of the boys took the trip to Quebec. Lorne Carr, formerly with Buffalo, probably will be signed to fill the gap if Babe doesn't come to terms.

When Cooney Weiland holds out he walks out too. The Ottawa centre vanished like a thin air from camp at the capital after refusing a contract that cut his previous salary and hasn't been seen since.

Ken Doraty, injured last week when he crashed into the boards at Kitchener, probably will be last to Toronto Leafs for two weeks. Fluid has developed on his knee and it was placed in a cast yesterday.

• • •

Doraty was the only casualty of a strenuous training session for the Leafs, hooked over the week-end with a two-day lay-off. "Busher" Jackson and "Bun" Boll are suffering from colds but are responding to treatment.

Detroit Supported by a Higher Class Reserve List Than in Former Years

EXPECT BIG YEAR

Redwings Suprise Packet of Last Season's Campaign

Detroit, Oct. 31—(CP)—Supported by a higher class of reserve material, with the regulars of last year all back and in far superior condition, than at the opening of the 1932-33 campaign, Detroit Redwings, last year's sensations of the National Hockey League, fail fair to accomplish even greater deeds from Nov. 9 on.

An altogether different atmosphere pervades the camp than was the case at this time last fall. Team morale is higher and confidence is reflected everywhere.

New privileges on the broad, red face of Jack Adams are caused by smiles—and neither can Detroit find an extra strong ring of soreness in the votes when he says the Redwings last year's sensations of the National Hockey League, did

The Love of Eve

By Russ Westover.

They stopped for luncheon in one of the downtown eating houses. Eve enjoyed watching the fashionable workers file in for their noon day meal. She liked to hear the low chatter and gay laughter of girls who worked in fashionable shops, dressed regardless of appearing unhappy, these girls had proven to Eve that they were a group busy with their own interests. They were having a good time and Eve was anxious to see also that many of the girls' costumes were the secrets of their fashions. She made a mental note to have them in Eve in the future when she was writing advertising for it would help her create a more universal interest in Wright's advertising.

"Dick, I'm getting a lot out of this trip!" she said enthusiastically.

"Here, you good to get away from the smoke of your own chimney," he commented.

The ground rolled gently in an easterly direction until they neared the river where they found the hills steep with a trace of snow left from a recent storm. Here and there miniature huts and bungalows. Eve was shocked by the apparent poverty of these ugly dwellings. The sight brought from Dick a lengthy discourse on the subject of injustice.

They lunched and talked and ate and just as twilight fell Dick drove with the brow of a hill. A botera-house sat on the crest of the hill. It seemed to Eve as though the roofs lifted and sank, with the block-in-a-row quickness. Tantalizing smells emanated from the dwellings looking. Eve noted with interest the many old buildings with false fronts in an effort to make them look a story higher. However, had they done so, All-the-year just to visit an uninteresting place like this? What possible interest did Dick think she might have here? Eve was furious.

CHAPTER 12

Tantalizville boasted two hotels but one of them was only open during the hunting season, so Dick took Eve to the other. Hotel Gortley. She glanced about the lobby while he signed the register. The walls were of tan plaster and two coaches of spreaded imitation red grogale supported a dingy ceiling. There was a desk, a cigar case and a few arm chairs upholstered in red mohair. A pair of elk's horns was mounted above the clerk's desk. There was a rubber plant and a fern of sorts. The floors belonged to neat lined up inside the window who had been there and been down Centre street. Tale privilege of watching the comings and goings in Centre street was reserved to guests of the Hotel Gortley. Indeed it was the sole diversion of many forced to stay over the week-end.

Eve and Dick were transported in the elevator, floor by a shabby skeleton in a boy trim cage. The roof had been formed as the elevator door standard and a row of coats washed them disappear. Eve regretted extreme shyness that she hadn't led the way to the far end of the corridor. Eve noted with interest the number of pieces of carrying the dinner tray and the signs on that floor. "Thrift here," she noted. "As an area, evens out it is wonderful how much is going enough by the entire floor."

Later they walked down Centre street and mingled with the crowd. Tantalizville was the center of the thereabouts and whole families as well the young couples drove in from the farms for the Saturday shopping and the movies.

Eve selected a fruit while restaurant for their evening meal because of the crowded, ruffled appearance hung in the window. Nothing on the menu appealed to Eve, however and they walked a long time while the proprietor went to the counter and brought back what he assured them it would be no trouble at all to serve them the choice of the shall, but when they finally were served, minus the choice of a few. Dick found them lukewarm instead of cold and both felt they had starved a season.

"The Fair." Tantalizville's leading show, with vaudeville between the women's and men's apparel. Eve was interested in the show and Dick the stock was. She managed to have a good time anyway and when she was sent to New York each year and Eve was immediately impressed by a woman's new interest and thorough knowledge of her field.

Afterward Eve and Dick dropped in at a moving picture theatre. Dick hung had they been lately that a movie seemed like the only harmless expenditure of time. When the light went up a young lad sitting next to Dick leaned forward to the girl with him, "Right nice room you have here." But Dick, after an apologetic glance about him replied: "They waited so many buildings to look at the last place. Later he was amazed at the ease with which he and Dick could stand side by side along the wall. "Cheap construction," he whispered. "Sounds like it," he whispered. Dick was pleasantly aware of Eve's eyes upon him. "They have thorough fire escape," he added.

Eve felt like a person somewhat detached from herself as they walked back to the Gortley. She was a familiar face in sight, the young people often turning their heads to look at she and Dick passed, the utter simplicity of the business life, the leisurely pace. A feeling began to steal over Eve that perhaps Dick's way was not as important to the world as she had imagined it was.

"Dick," she said later as they lay awake in their hotel room, the lights out, shades up and rays from the Centre street are light filtering through the Nottingham lace curtains, "Dick—I feel a peaceful." That's why I love you here, you little kitten. You were all mixed up in a ball of yarn."

The next morning Eve discovered the Copper Bell Antique Shoppe.

"Oh—what a cute set of corner shelves!" she exclaimed. "How I'd love to have it for our dining room."

Dick responded with his noncommittal "h-m-m, a what-not." Eve glanced up at him quickly. "You don't like it, do you?" she accused. "Why, Dick? What's wrong with it?" she persisted.

"Well," Dick explained rather lamely, "it's not really old—fifty years, perhaps. That wouldn't matter, though, if it were genuine. Kinda, but it isn't. Late Victorian—no late. Just machine made carving."

"For the present—if we could afford it—like the walnut bench would be a more useful piece for us," Pennsylvania. Dutch. The open shelves above would display plates and bric-a-brac as well or better than the what-not and the cupboard below would provide useful storage space."

"But it's so frightfully shabby," Eve objected.

"It could be painted any color you liked, like," answered Dick simply.

"Well, it would be fun," said Eve. "Nicer than the what-not. But you needn't say that I told you that. Corner shelves are fashionable again."

Dick was unperturbed. "Some of these things are quaint and pretty," he conceded. "Aunt Sophronia had it with good turnings. Probably has it stowed away in the attic. We'll see sometime when we're down on a visit."

And do look at this, Dick." Eve scanned an ale and drew him to a corner of the shop to look at a basket of dried corn. "Now, Dick, we ought to have this. You and I. It's not old enough."

Dick surveyed the piece but without enthusiasm. "Knots fastened with bits of wood screws, tied together with wood pins. About a hundred years," he ventured. "Not old enough more. And a good job of weaving. The bracket feet and the carved acanthus leaves on the posts are rather unusual. And it has a serpentine top and a shell inlay."

"Not bad," Eve mocked him, "it that the most praise you can give it? Don't you like it, Dick? Don't it, Dick? This and the water bench and that cute little stand over there in the two with the cute little drawer."

Dick shrugged. The "cute little stand 'is buried spade wood." he said. "It looks like a Hepplewhite back the price of two months' rent."

But Eve would not let her enthusiasm be dampened. She pounced upon a pair of hand painted Staffordshire dogs. "The stuff in the lower of a flab, Dick," she said tiredly gracefully on its chin. "Aren't they darling, Dick?"

Dick grinned tolerantly. "Can't say that they are. Not to my taste. Never could see anything particularly darling about a dog, myself, any other fish, for that matter. Eve, I'm sorry, but I'm afraid I'm not the price flinch and set it down with a thud. "Fifty dollars for the pair!" he ejaculated. "Simply darling, they're at least that," he continued, "and both felt they had turned a season.

"Dick, I'm disappointed," Eve said. Dick's mother had been a lady and whose like the one in question. But Eve had a feeling that Dick's boyhood home had been auctioned off on one regarded it of course. Dick, the only one who had felt any sentiment for the place. He was to make his life anew in other surroundings and was unable to keep either that or the old home in which his mother had played. He purchased the splendid set of dishes and loaded it in the rumble seat.

Once back in the hotel Eve and the name of the shop. It was the fashionable thing now to have at least one room with antique furnishings or reproductions of antiques.

"I'll just send for some of these things I admired at the shop," she whispered to the proprietor as she left.

CHAPTER 14

Christmas fell on Tuesday that year and Eve was overjoyed when Mrs. Barnes said that she would have Monday as a holiday and thus be able to spend Christmas with her parents in Rochester. Eve planned to open until nine o'clock each evening of the week before Christmas and Eve was obliged to spend at least part of every evening at the office, Dick agreed without a murmur to come down town to have dinner with her those nights.

Saturday, with the last task completed Eve said goodby to the others in the office, wished them a Merry Christmas, and left to meet Dick. On their way to the hotel they posted their marriage announcements to friends in Indian Lake City. Those for the home folks had been mailed a week earlier. Eve felt a mixture of apprehension and relief after the announcements were mailed. But at least there was nothing to worry about for the present and she looked forward with a light heart. Tomorrow she would see her parents again and Dick would be with her.

Henry Bayless met Eve at the station Sunday morning. Eve aped her father first and gulped as her eyes filled with tears. Henry quickly hurried forward and kissed him while he struggled for composure. Partings and meetings after long separation always affected Henry Bayless. His eyes were blurry and he swallowed hard. Then he welcomed Dick with a hearty hand shake and fell a glow of friendship for the young man. Martin trusted few men until they proved themselves but his instinct told him Dick Reader was all right.

Eve's mother greeted her overnight and Hank drove carefully. He was proud of his new car and boasted to Dick of the comfort of which he had driven the old one.

The Bayless home was in an old section of the city on a tree-lined street. Hedges in the summer said Hank as he drove into the yard. Dick saw a modest home of seven-room variety with side porch and a low attic over the dormers. Parents and daughter, smiling, beamed a welcome from the doorway.

TARZAN—HEART AND CORE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

As Tarzan spoke, the young man advanced toward the ape-man. There was a smile on his eager face. "YOU are Lord Greystroke!" he asked. "Here, I am Tarzan, of the tribe of Kala, the ape-woman, and the great she-ape. "Then luck is certainly with me!" said the young man, "for I have come all the way from southern California, expressly to find you!" "Who are you," demanded the ape-man, "and what do you want of Tarzan of the Apes?"

"My name is Jason Gridley," replied the other, "and what I have come to talk to you about is a long story. Perhaps you will think it is a fantastic tale." He laughed, as the one person in all the world who can help me in a strange adventure. I hope you will come with me after I have told you my plans." The ape-man watched the American keenly as he spoke, and his curiosity became aroused at Jason Gridley's evident earnestness.

"Where do you intend making camp?" asked Tarzan. "My guide deserted us yesterday," replied Jason, "south of my camp with the natives. I am sure there is a suitable campsite near?" "within a mile," said the ape-man, "one with good water," the first safari resumed its way, the black happy at the prospect of an early camp. After their evening meal, the young American lost no time in outlining his amazing plan, which appealed to Tarzan's adventurous of the earth?"

Far into the night Jason Gridley talked. Tarzan scarcely uttered a word. At last the American ended. "I have been long in coming to you," he said, "my idea—and now I suppose it is going to be difficult to convince you I am not crazy!" The ape-man arose and said: "You would have me believe the world is a hollow sphere, containing life within its interior? And you wish me to descend with you into the bowels

PROF. ROGERS GOES TO N. S.

Will Delve Into Economic Affairs of The Province

Halifax, Oct. 31—(CP)— The Nova Scotia government plans to retain Prof. Norman Mackenzie Rogers of Queens University in an "advisory and investigating" capacity in connection with its enquiry into the province's economic affairs, it was learned at Province Building.

Prof. Rogers' retention has not yet been confirmed by ordercouncil, although he has been granted three months leave of absence from his duties in the university's department of economics.

A native Nova Scotian, Prof. Rogers has had a brilliant scholastic career. He graduated from Dalhousie law school after attending Acadia University. At Acadia, he gained a "Rhodes Scholarship" and specialized at Oxford University in a study of the history and economic development of Canada and the British Empire.

Before joining the staff at Queen's University, he was Secretary to Hon. Vincent Massey, Mackenzie King at the time Mr. King was Premier of Canada.

He is a son of Grace McLeod Rogers, well known writer.

SEVEN SYSTEMS FOR U. S. RAILS

Profit Will Result Not A Deficit As Formerly

Washington, Oct. 31—(AP)—Vast savings in operating costs sufficient to have given United States railroads nearly $500,000,000 profit in 1932 instead of a $250,000,000 deficit are claimed by sponsors of the Prince plan for railroad co-ordination, now being studied by Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation.

Eastman is giving special attention to the Prince plan, which he said in announcing the study, he was the most advanced of the various proposals received. Other schemes, however, are being considered, the co-ordinator is explaining the situation with a view to having recommendations before the president for legislation to be proposed in January.

Briefly, studies of the Prince plan, dealing with the east and middle west, have been completed. They go extensively into the savings which proponents of the plan say can be expected through consolidation of facilities in the great terminal centres and elimination of duplicated services.

The plan contemplates seven railroad systems in the country. Two would be in the east, built around the New York Central lines and the Pennsylvania. The Baltimore and Ohio, Reading, Central of New Jersey and the Norfolk and Western would be included in system No. 3 which would have 38,400 miles of track.

System No. 4 would have 29,148 miles; No. 5, the Southeast, 20,310 miles; No. 6, Mississippi Valley 29,210; No. 8, Northwest, 17,807; No. 8, Central West, 23,271, and No. 7 Southwest, 27,213. The Chicago and St. Louis terminal system would be jointly owned by all of the lines.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

FIRST NIGHT IN FILMLAND

Tremendously Satisfying Program Pleases Capacity Crowd at Capitol

A capital programme is now at the Capitol. So can be described the hill-of-fare which opened to capacity crowds last night at the Capitol Theatre.

The featured attraction: "Made on Broadway" is one of the best comedy-dramas reviewed to date, and whilst lacking the ultra brilliancy of "When Ladies Meet" more than compensates in exceptionally clean-cut comedy. For this, Robert Montgomery is entirely responsible, and this polished comedian and man's man is right in the form of "Made on Broadway."

The story is absorbing, and deals with a young man about town whose job in life is "putting relations thru" a rather unique job in which it is his duty to get politicians and their matrimonial difficulties straightened out—at a price!

Having just completed fixing the case of an official who is accused of having kept one of his relations on the city council's payroll, he is returning home across the river.

A girl, whose qualities in the art of fabricating leaves Ananias at the post, decides to start something by jumping in the river, counting upon that our hero is on hand to do the rescue act.

She succeeds in her plan and gains notoriety by declaring to the press that the situation was the reverse. By her alleged saving of the young public relations fixer" she becomes a heroes of society.

Unfortunately, she is no lady by birth and her breeding lands her into the courts on a charge of murder, which is the result of philandering with a penniless Don Juan, who has seen a small fortune in blackmailing through some incriminating letters written to the girl by an amourous old army general.

Our fixer, who thinks he is in love with the girl, takes her part and fixes her acquittal, but he becomes disillusioned and returns to his own wife with whom he was originally.

The "super fixer" is Robert Montgomery and Sally Eilers is the lady who is not a lady; Madge Evans is the fixer's wife, whilst the supporting cast do a tremendously good job of their respective parts.

All in all "Made on Broadway" is a very excellent attraction.

The comedy programme includes Andy Clyde and a short oddity on "Dead Humbug," with a much abused dog named Epidemia.

The Canadian Sound News is exceptionally interesting and contains some excellent shots of the Miss Britain III girl—the Royal Air Force and British Navy manoeuvres in the Firth of Forth, and scenes of the riots in the steel worker's strike in the U.S.A. These riot scenes make one wonder.

AT THE BELLE

With Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy at the top of an impressive cast, "Penthouse" the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-Cosmopolitan — production, from the pen of author Norbert Bacha is now at the Belle.

Directed by the masterful hand of W. S. Van Dyke, who fought such notable productions as "Trader Horn" and "White Shadows in the South Seas" to the screen, "Penthouse" presents a modern and laudable picture of New York's high spots—the mad Manhatten that Walter Winchell and O. O. McIntyre have glorified in the public press.

Filmed almost entirely in settings that represent the lavish penthouse world atop New York's skyscrapers, the picture captures the pulse of the great metropolis' roof-top life.

Warner Baxter, lawyer

As Duncan Locke, lawyer of New York's upper classes and who is cast out by society, Warner Baxter gives one of the finest performances of his colorful motion picture career.

Myrna Loy, who, in past appearances, has been seen as an exotic adventuress with Oriental eyes, has in just come into her own in this production as one of the most beautiful and alluring women to grace the motion picture screen. As Gertie Wanted, the night club girl, she appears in one of the strongest, most appealing and most worthy performances of her career.

Mae Clarke, after misfortune has kept her from the public eye for many months, will make a startling comeback in film prominence as Mimi Montagne. Other noteworthy performances are given by Jean Hersholt, Charles Butterworth, who supplies his expected amount of whimsical humor, Phillips Holmes and Sarah Haden.

Tom Howard in a clever and original comedy "Sepiatic." Canadian current news events, and a clever Bobby Burns cartoon will be exhibited on the same program.

THREE DOSES RELIEVE 33 YEAR OLD COUGH

It just looks as if BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE took a special pride in "knocking the stuffing" out of tough old coughs that have successfully defied other cough remedies for 'phty and years.

For instance, take the case of Mrs. A. Warner of Waterloo, Ontario.

"For 33 years I have had a chronic cough, and when I catch cold I cough something terrible. I always had to have a Doctor to break it up, but I was told to try BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE, and it sure does the trick. About three doses gives me relief."

No wonder millions of former sufferers say, "Buckley's acts like a flash." If you have a cough, cold, 'flu or bronchitis, get a bottle today. It clears the bronchial tubes, relieves the tickle, stops the cough before other remedies have begun to act. Play safe. Refuse substitutes. Buckley's is sold everywhere.

NO AUTHORITY FOR THE DUTIES

Right to Claim Refunds From Date of New Trade Treaty Indicated

Ottawa, Oct. 31. — Upsetting a ruling of the Department of National Revenue, the Dominion Tariff Board today laid down a decision which will materially reduce the heavy duties now imposed on a dozen or more imported British commodities.

The board held that under legislation passed by Parliament a year ago implementing the Canada-United Kingdom trade Treaty, the national revenue department has no authority to impose dumping duties on goods entitled to the British preference.

It was further indicated that refunds can be claimed by importers

Why do Doctors Test Kidneys First?

Because they know that healthy Kidneys regulate the blood and the waste matter formed by the ever-changing human body as it decays and rebuilds itself. But if the Kidneys fail—the waste is poisoned and illness surely follows. As a health safeguard—as a wise precaution—flush your kidneys regularly every three weeks with Dodd's Kidney Pills—for over three generations the favorite Kidney tonic and remedy—non-habit forming—over 50 years on the market.

of these British goods, who have paid the dumping duty on them since November 16, 1932, the date on which Parliament passed the law applying British goods from the dump.

How great a sum such refunds will total was undetermined tonight but informed opinion was that it would not be large. It was reported was told that the duties on the affected goods were of relatively small proportions and that consequently importations have been small.

In addition to jute twines, the commodity on which Monday's ruling will most benefit, given the list of affected goods includes metal signs, wire rope, ferro-alloys and hats.

Though the ruling will be acclaimed principally as a victory for importers may also find it a means of reduced duties. For this affect ensues from the board's implied assertion of its complete competence to say whether a given commodity is of the "class or kind" which, under existing Department decisions, is subject to the dumping duty.

Previously Shy of Point

The board has previously fought shy of defining its authority on this point as thousands of dollars of Federal revenue might well depend on a decision one way or another. Opinion to-night, however, was was that today's ruling would immediately become the basis of numerous applications by importers for decisions as to whether certain goods which may be similar to a commodity on which the dump is authorized are in fact of the same "class or kind".

The BEST way to stop CONSTIPATION

Nothing like Fruit-a-tives

"I was in a very bad way with constipation and headaches. I had taken Epsom Salts and other purgatives. Quite frequently I had severe colicky pains in my joints and muscles. I was very depressed. Indeed, I felt so wretched that I was about to give up my work. Today my health is excellent and I certainly feel that Fruit-a-tives saved my life. I am glad to tell others what they have done for me."
